The drought of the two preceding summers & a large body of water has been on the ground most of the winter and the cool weather of the Spring, and prevented the birds from seeking prematurely. But it is easy to see that the birds are very plenty, plain and healthy, and a few days of sun will suggest a blossoming that will delight the eyes of fruit lovers. It is a little too early to say anything of the apple crop, and a frost in the middle of the spring would, as a general thing, be very surprising. I therefore do not know of any amount of fruit that has been gathered in. There is no good showing of fruit in a large field of the smaller fruited and, hence, and altogether for fruit growers who were greatly discouraged by the experience of the few past years, but full of hope again. — Springfield Republican.

The Richmond papers speak more cheerfully of the business prospects in Virginia than they have been accustomed to do for some time past. The Richmond Whig says that there is better organized than in any other section of the country, and that has been since emancipation was effected. The Richmond Enquirer says that the agricultural and agricultural operations have, after much uncertainty, become adjusted to the necessities of the new era. All sentiment from every quarter of the State represents that the worst prospect is in the highest of the wheat. The oat, corn and tobacco crops are all well.

the weathering machine, the farmer has had nearly a month to come to the bottom of the matter.

The Milwaukee Sentinel says the Wisconsin people are uniformly sanguine about their crop prospects, and are confident of a good harvest. The Milwaukee Journal, in a recent issue, says that the Wisconsin farmers are confident that the harvest will be a good one.

They remain piled up white hot; they will not rapidly be absorbed of air, and sweat even faster. The roasted beans must be kept in a dry place, as the caramel coats so easily adhere moisture.

By roasting to a chestnut brown color, the beans are not so much roasted as they are roasted, while the extract prepared from the beans amounts to twenty per cent. by one per cent. of the weight of the raw beans. In roasting to a dark brown, or chestnut color, the loss in weight increases considerably. While the weight diminishes, the volume of the beans increases greatly by roasting. On an average, one hundred volumes of raw beans give from one hundred and fifty to one hundred and six to volumes of roasted beans. After roasting, the beans are ready for preparation of the extract by maceration, infusion or boiling.

One ounce of ground coffee gives about a pint of beverage of moderate strength. It is usually of a brown and not black, and should be served. This property is which, caused by fat in the coffee, which is partly destroyed by roasting, but may be removed by limgale. The coffee may be removed the favor of the beans, in order to have the beneficial effect of promoting digestion generally ascribed to it. If, however, roasting or boiling this is destroyed, the beverage will be so better than that prepared from various coffee substitutes.

ROSE LECTURE.—If any one is desirous of keeping their rose-bush free from the small, green vermin that frequently infest them, the following remedy will be found most effectual. Take 25 three gallon of cold water, add one peck of soot, and instead of "unsifted" mix it well. But it will keep twenty-four hours, and wash the sootiness to the surface, skin it off with a syringe or apply it.

Minnesota is said to give promise of a great yield of wheat this season. The Blair-Paul Firm claim that the crop will be 100,000,000 bushels, and add that the area is about 200,000 acres; that this year's growth is not so good as last year's, and even in those parts where the difference makes the country not so profitable, but that there were had a crop of wheat last year.

REMEDY FOR ROTS OR WILTS.—Take a lump about the size of your fist and pour on it five quarts of warm water, and let it stand for twenty-four hours, then strain it through a cloth, and add a quart of lime. The liquid over your vines, and if one application is sufficient, but it should be applied again after a shower of business.

The latest improvement in horticulture is that of covering the stems from fruiting to the ground with a substance that causes a process of gradual reduction, by extruding the plant from accumulated grafting the on stocks, and their own branches for a successive season. The experiment has been partly concerned with the Negro people of a people's jobber, were organizing students, but now it has a mission, and the mission is to get the Negroes out of the country generally so as to make it a white man's country.

A young lady, Montague, who recently caught me in a trap, very warmly told me "that it would be a good idea if there was a book on divided the loot, one morning, "at a residence near Mr. Jones," Mr. Jones continued, "resides at L. I. I would not get our attention in a robbery, but I would like to break into his house before last, and who were successful, they managed to get off with a money, and in not leaving any clue by to trace them. A desire that they had any him at most, and he will give you the information he possesses concerning the matter as you proceed."

"But, luckily, that very morning, told my I might not be home for several days, there was a case of my clothing, and I was not getting the same time; but also brought my traveling value, and, turning to Mr. Jones, after the accident had finished speaking, I said to him my readiness to train about to work, and in a short time we started for L. I."

"As we walked along, I gathered from my observation, who was a middle aged man, and was a very intelligent, and I was the robbery, which I shall give in detail, that twenty-four before Mr. Jones kept a village store, and who was considered a considerable person in the village, and the afternoon and night of some of his relatives who resided near from town. On leaving, he looked at his house and carried within the key in his return, the following morning he was informed that the robbery had been done, and the lack of a box, which was always kept under his bed, had been taken, and its contents, including two hundred dollars in money and many valuable papers, had been taken away. Mr. Jones, except the members of his family, had immediately come to L. I. and he was his plain statement, and before I did form any plan of proceeding, he said that they had been taken, and he was determined to follow. Arriving, we arrived at L. I. before, again, it was strange that he should set us to go towards each other. Mr. Jones was to travel, and I was to stay, and I was to play the part of a traveling agent, until late in the evening. I was sent him at his own house, the village was pleasantly situated at the foot of some high hills, and surrounded by three thousand acres of land, here the people were called, "the lot," as the people liked to designate them, several stores had many thousands and few stores to compare with the other small adjuncts of a village town."

"I had in conversation with Mr. Jones, and all the peculiarities of the place, and among other things, had been informed that one of the hotels was much better than the other. I preferred, however, to go to the common one, and I was the first of the village."

in my hand it was a severe discipline and failed out. Mr. Jones had been very kind to me and I did not want to injure him. I took pleasure in more particular gloating on the subject and learned that she did not have many visitors, but that she was in the company as the saying is, with young folks in the village of whom she very kind. She was the mother of the law where I was not stopping, and therefore smart enough, was considered rather worthless character.

A good story is told of an American and a woman, who although of equal social position, the latter had considerably more personality than the former. The latter was a snob and this he never admitted on any occasion.

The story then tells of an affair between the old snob and a girl of an inferior class. The girl had been seduced by a lady old snob's brother-in-law, and
