The Flower Mission.

The first flower mission in this country, of which anything is known, was then called the "Boston Flower Mission."

A young lady, going into the city from one of the beautiful villages near by, carried her arms full of fragrant flowers and gave them to the little children in the streets. Seeing the pleasure and delight of the little ones at sight of the beautiful blossoms, fresh from the gardens, fields, and woods, she thought an organization could be formed, so that the children, especially the poor, might enjoy the flowers often left to wither on the stems in the country. After consulting some of the clergymen, a church was opened, and the mission established, which has grown to be of great benefit to the sick, poor, and especially the children. Flowers gladden the little sufferers in the hospitals, and other charities have arisen, growing out of this effort, and other means of reaching and benefitting God's poor and neglected little ones.

This was in 1868; but it was several years before any great success crown'd their efforts.
An account of this work reached a dear suffering woman, who, tied to her bed and often in intense agony of pain; the result of an accident, yet felt her heart go out to others, and desired to help. She couldn't gather or distribute the flowers, but she could inspire others to do this work, and direct them, also.

In 1882, Miss Willard, during a visit in Miss Cassidy's home, became much interested in her work, and shortly after the flower mission work was added to the departments of the W. C.
T. U., with Miss Cassidy as National Superintendent. For a number of years she lived to direct this work and plan for the future, before she went to her Heavenly home; and great good has it done all over our land.

Flowers to the sick and sorrowing sons and daughters of earth. Many a stray lamb from Christ's fold has been led back into the right path by the gift of flowers, a kindly word "Just in season." They have cheered the despairing hearts of prisoners. Weary tollers, and many who can never see the country in its glory, are cheered by the sight of the beautiful blossoms given by the Flower Mission Superintendents of the W. C. T. U.

Other work has also come into this department,—dellencies for the sick, food for the hungry, clothing for the needy, and a kindly interest shown to lonely ones. Let us brighten some lonely, sorrowing heart, cheer the sick, and suffering, and so carry out the plan of our Flower Mission.

THE NEW CENTURY.

When in the time, gray dawn shall rise
The morning of this birth—When first dawn steps from the hills Upon the hills of earth—Shall witness nations breathless stand Oppressed with haunting fears, Or what thou holdst in thy hand, Thou countest hundred years?

Or shall a glad world welcome thee With laughter and a song—Those unborn child of destiny Whose reign shall be so long?
Who know—no only know that thou Shalt enter like a king Into thy courts—that we must bow, Whatever thou dost bring.

What matter whether war or peace Thy herald shall proclaim—
The story of the centuries Is evermore the same!
Thy children—great shall tell abroad, Through all thy mighty age, Naught but the Fatherhood of God—
The Brotherhood of Man.

A BEAUTIFUL SPY.

A SHIP company, fallen in at division—on a Sunday morning on the deck of a large man-of-war, is a sight once never to be forgotten.

At 9:30 the "assembly" sounds, and after inspection is over, the pipes of the "bagatelles" mutes are heard shrill-ing, and then what is known as "rigging church" takes place. Mess stools are brought from the mess deck, and chairs for the men—and chairs for the officers, while a substitute for a pulpit, covered with a flag, is provided for the chaplain.

Such a scene as this was being conducted one lovely spring morning on the deck of the "H. S. Tremendous," lying in Malta harbor. Her captain, Philip St.

Aubyn by name, had given permission to one of his officers to invite some visitors to church, and at 10 o'clock the plane had been sent to shore to bring them on board.

Then, who consisted of an extremely beautiful and daintily dressed girl and a tall, well-built man—evidently brother and sister—expressed themselves charmed and interested with the novelty of the service around them.

The captain was a tall, powerfully built man, young looking for so important a command, with a somewhat stern, sun-tanned face, clean shaven, gold features, and a hard, firm mouth.

For the rest, closely cropped hair and deep-set gray eyes must suffice.

After divine service was over the guests were, according to custom, shown around the ship, engine and mess rooms being visited in turn.

They were presented to St. Aubyn as Count and Countess Zulufoff, and he much struck with the girl's exceptional beauty and charming manners, invited them into his cabin.

"Oh, that is the key of the meat safe!" he replied.

"Ah, now you are laughing at me!
It is too bad, the way you salutes treat us poor women!" she pouted.

"I thought we were going to be successful, and you will not let me be successful!" he continued, as an extremely good-looking boy approached them.

"I do not possess any," laughed St.
Aubyn. "If I had you may be sure I would confide in you," he added gallantly.

"That key?"

"Belongs to my own private desk where I keep my love letters," said the captain, lying promptly. "Let me introduce my young brother to you, countess," he continued, as an extremely good-looking boy approached them.

"I shall be delighted. Your brother is an officer on board also? How nice for you both! A lieutenant, I suppose?" she said, smiling sweetly at young St. Aubyn, who was immediately flattered.

"Not in the least," however, the countess, upon being introduced to his sister, said. "It was time for them to return to shore. He was a handsome man, clean shaven and not unlike St. Aubyn, in height and build. Indeed, only countess, his features were somewhat similar."

"I must thank you heartily for a very pleasant morning," he said to the captain in excellent English.

"You give me the pleasure of your company at dinner tomorrow night? We are staying at the Great Britain."

"The officer was about to answer when he caught sight of the girl's blue eyes fixed anxiously upon him."

"Thank you, I shall be delighted," he answered quietly—"that is, if you will not mind my coming in uniform as I am going to a ball," he added hesitantly.

"Not in the least!" replied the countess. "We shall be all the more complimented—shall we not, Vera?"

"Vera!" assured the captain that it was so; and after impressing upon St.
Aubyn the dinner hour at the hotel brother and sister bade him good-by and left the cabin with their friend the officer who had invited them on board.

"I don't like that Russian Johnnie Puli," remarked Cecil St. Aubyn, as he gazed out of the gun embrasure and watched the guests' departure in a boat.

"Why not? He seems a pleasant enough fellow," observed his brother, carelessly.

"Oh, he asked a jolly sight too many questions for my taste!—Where were you and that and that and the other; and where were you and that and the other?"

"But he got precious little change out of me, you bet! It's my private opinion the man's a spy," said the boy turning and confronting the captain with heightened color and sparkling eyes.

The following day, having seen evidence to hold official intercourse with the officer who had invited the visit on off to church, St. Aubyn remarked casually:

"See you at the Zulufoffs to-night, I suppose, Smith?"

The officer in question looked slightly nervous, and a hard, firm mouth.

"No, sir," he replied quietly.

"Why, how's that? I'm rather ill bred of the man to leave you out of the invitation?"

"Well, to tell you the truth, sir, I really know very little about the Zulufoffs," the lieutenant began rather hesitatingly. "Perhaps it was rather indiscreet of me to invite them here and there, but I was there last year with the fleet, and I encountered them again a day or two ago in the Straits fleet, when the count asked me politely to invite them off to the ship."

"Well, they seem pleasant enough people," said the captain indifferently.

"Especially the girl," he added, as if by an afterthought.

"Oh, especially the girl," reiterated the lieutenant, respectfully.

"That evening the captain of the Tremendous, with his best check drawn over his ball uniform, left the ship in his pajamas, and was landed at the club house steps, stepping into one of the small carriages, which were waiting for him, and whose driver alighted him at the door, he was driving rapidly in the direction of his home."

"Two hours later the officer of the watch was surprised at his return to the ship in a motor car, and his headdress, and was plainly visible to curious eyes."

"The quiverer returned the salute with a flourish, but he had forgotten something, dived down to his cabin.
It was rather a dark night, and the officer saw the captain's face quite plainly by the light of the lantern.

Children's Corner

the Game of Marie's Treasure.

It is probable that on some occasion a number of boys were fully kicking at an about, and the game of buried treasure just evolved itself without any particular effort on their part. It is certainly a good game, and those who have watched play it seem to enjoy themselves immensely.

The equipment for the game is not difficult to procure; cans are always available. Decide by counting out the number of boys who are to play. There is no rule, however, about this, and some boys prefer other defenses, as standing just behind the can or continually moving about it.

The rest of the boys are robbers, and shout, "Up, up, up!" to avoid the cans, or, in other words, "Up, up, up!" to avoid the cans, or, in other words, "Up, up, up!" to avoid the cans, or, in other words, "Up, up, up!" to avoid the cans, the place of the old (thousand) wagon, by means of it, thanks to modern invention, the peddler can now travel much more quickly and easily than before. He has his wares on exhibition.

The new vehicle, however, in point of steadiness is perhaps better adapted to city use than to the country.

Extending beyond the handlebars of the bicycle in front and behind the saddle, in the back, is a rod to each end of which is fastened a skeleton frame of wire, and down the sides are numerous hooks, to which the various cooking utensils are hung.
The whole thing is but another contrivance to gain trade, for of course many persons will buy that which is brought to them, who hesitate to seek it for themselves.

GOOD Short Stories

Senator Mason leaned against the weather vane in the dining room of the States at one o'clock. The weather man saw what happened and began to jump about wildly. "What's the matter?" asked Senator Mason. "Nothing," replied the weather man, "except that you have the climate for all of the United States west of the Mississippi on the back of your coat."

Once, when twitted on his small size by a statesman of the strenuous type "The remark proves what I have always asserted—that in your eyes, men-ures were more important than man." To another critic, who found fault with his habit of strutting out a whole paragraph without a break, by the use of parenthetical clauses—he said, cheerfully: "I have noticed that criminals object to long sentences."

"Oliver Wendell Holmes was once present at a gathering where he chanced to be seated near the refreshment table, and noticed a little boy looking longingly at the table. In his kindly way he said, 'Are you hungry, my child?' The boy replied bashfully in the affirmative. 'Then why don't you take a sandwich?' he asked. The little boy replied: 'Because my mother told me not to eat anything but what she kindly may be said, 'Are you hungry, my child?' The boy replied bashfully
in the affirmative. 'Then why don't you
boy replied: 'Because my mother told
me not to eat anything but what she

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Lizzie Bender: Mr. Bender, her husband; John Hines; Mrs. John Hines, his wife; and to the unknown heirs or personal representatives of Eliza Nestor, deceased:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery, made on the day of the date hereof, in a case wherein the Hammonton Loan and Building Association is complainant and you are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer, or demur to the complainant's bill of complaint, on or before the second day of July, next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by said Eliza Nestor to said complainant and dated the thirtieth day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and upon lands situate in Hammonton, in the County of Atlantic, State of New Jersey.

And you, Lizzie Bender, John Hines and the unknown heirs of Eliza Nestor, are made defendants because it is alleged that you claim an interest in said premises as part owner thereof.

And you, Mr. Bender, are made a defendant, because it is alleged that you claim some interest as husband of said Lizzie Bender.

And you, Mrs. John Hines, are made a defendant, because it is alleged that you claim some interest as wife of said John Hines.

Dated May 1st, 1901. Signed HENRY F. STOCKWELL, Solicitor for Complainant. 317 Market St., Camden, N. J.
