Schools out!

Miss Helen Bernhouse is home from Swarthmore.

Miss Sara Crowell is visiting her brother, the doctor.

Volunteer Fire Company meets next Monday evening.

Adin Wescoat and family have returned to Hammonton from Camden.

A new Telephone Directory will be issued July 1st. Will your name be in it?

Dr. W. B. Peet, of New York City, made Hammonton friends a short visit.

C. S. Newcomb and wife have gone to Ocean City for a few weeks stay.

L. A. Hoyt was down from Philadelphia, Sunday, completing the Hoyt re-union.

Dr. Ralph R. Jones and wife, of Tom's River, met old friends at the Alumni re-union.

Leon Andrews and Lyle Crowell are home from State College, coming in their canoe.

Have you seen that twenty (?) foot pine snake on exhibition at Red Cross Pharmacy?

The Grange meeting of June 20 will be postponed one week. Make a special effort to attend.

Andrew K. Littlefield was up from Atlantic, Thursday night, to greet former school friends.

Civic Club Rest Room looks cosy and inviting. Try it, the next time you have to wait for her.

Dr. John E. Hoyt and family have started for Montana, where they will spend their summer vacation.

Herbert Smith was here over Thursday. He is attending the College of Pharmacy, of Philadelphia.

Magazines in plenty in the Rest Room. A regular miniature library is there, willing to be liberally patronized.

The Farmers' and Merchants' Building and Loan Association will hold its annual meeting next Tuesday evening.

No preaching service at Universalist Church to-morrow. Sunday School at noon. Pastor Abbott will be home next week.

Hammonton Park is being put in good shape by Chairman Nicolai's men. Before July 4th everything will be in shape for the crowds.

Chautauqua starts next Monday, in the tent at Grape Street and Third, opposite Dr. Crowell's, and across from the site used last year.

Miss Mary Little returned home from Smith's College, Thursday, accompanied by her friend Miss Madeline Weeks, of Plymouth, N. H.

Miss Bertha Eckhardt, who has just graduated from Combs Conservatory of Music, in Philadelphia, is spending her vacation at home, Folsom.

Children's Day at the Presbyterian Church, to-morrow, at 10.30. Sabbath School at noon. Mrs. M. Ash leads the C. E. Rally at 6.45. Preaching at 7.45; theme, "Christ and the child." Special music.

St. Mark's Church, Rev. Wm. Howard Davis, M. A., Rector, fourth Sunday after Trinity, Morning Prayer at 7 o'clock; Holy Communion, 7.30 and 10.30; Sunday School at 11.45; Evening Prayer at 7.30.

The Directors of Peoples Bank took automobiles, early Tuesday morning, for Lower Bank, where they boarded Phil Wescoat's motor boat, going down by the inside channel to Atlantic City, where they were met by Messrs. Wm. A. Pounce and Geo. A. Elvins and treated to a long automobile ride about the city and suburbs, ending at the hotel where they were to dine. Just seated at the tables, the surprise of the day occurred, the wife of each member of the party entered the dining room and was escorted to her proper place. The ladies had arranged it, and all kept the secret. The united party returned home by the last train in the evening.

Jimmie Tell was found guilty of assault on Joe Shuter, an Italian barber on Egg Harbor Road, and sentenced by Court to pay $100 fine and costs.

Children's Day services will be conducted by the Baptist Sunday School to-morrow morning at 11.00 o'clock. There will be no Sunday School session.

Naomi, the four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wescoat died on Tuesday, from pneumonia following measles. They have the sympathy of many friends in their sorrow.

Shore towns have been annoyed by a roving band of undesirable gypsies. Wherever they stop they are told to move on. Officer T. H. Adams is watching for them, and will extend to them the same courtesy.

Amos S. Van Hise and his wife started from Boston Sunday morning at 7.30, and on Tuesday eve. arrived at his father's, near Atsion, a quick automobile trip of 358 miles. They were delighted with the scenery.

July 4th Committee is doing good work all along the line. It is quite probable that special trains will run on both roads. Posters are up, and letters are being received from many P. O. S. of A. Camps, promising to come.

Paul Sacco, a well known Hammonton Italian, rendered despondent by ten years of ill health, ended his life, Tuesday morning, with a shot-gun. It was apparently a case of suicide, but friends claim that it was an accidental death. No inquest was held.

Mr. Jos. Wumbauer, of Pennsylvania, Pa., botanized around Hammonton several days. He put one over our local botanists by finding within the village limits—almost within their door-yard—a rare little Orchid that they had been chasing away over to Atsion to collect.

Martin Wetgarke and Henry Kuhl imbibed too much Sunday last, and became so boisterous that night that officer Myers took them in tow. When near the lock-up, the boys assaulted the officer, and one of them escaped, but was later arrested and placed in the cooler. They were sent to May's Landing, and on Thursday had a hearing there and released, we know not why.

H. Laugell Joslyn, one of Hammonton's former boys, graduated last month from the North Carolina Agricultural and Mechanical College. His graduation address was highly commended. He has been chosen to take charge of the Dept. of Agriculture in Craven County's Farm Life School. Laugell was among our best boys here and his success is gratifying to his many friends.

Slack's Sterling Sticksmiths will cross bats this afternoon, at 3.30, with Garnet A. A. Last year these teams gave us a most interesting battle, and the fans are looking forward to another of those closely contested games that make baseball the popular game that it is. Last week's game we lost to Tucker, largely through over-confidence. We have had this year an abundance of good players, and before long Hammonton will be represented by one of the very best teams we ever had. So say our enthusiasts.

M. E. Church. Class meeting at 9.30; Children's Day exercises at 10.30; Epworth League at 6.45, led by Charles Bobst. At the Children's Day exercises, at 10.30 there will also be the dedication and baptism of infants and children. Parents of the Cradle Roll department, and all others desiring the baptism of their children, will kindly present them at 11 o'clock. The pastor will be pleased to perform the ceremony at your house if you can not make it convenient to attend the morning service. At the morning service, the annual offering for the Children's Fund will be taken. This fund is used to assist worthy young people to secure a higher education. Out of this fund, 2018 young people were assisted by the Board of Education last year.

Baptist Church. Children's Day exercises will be held at 11 o'clock. Evening worship at 7.30; topic, "The question you and I and Pilate asked," Matt. xxvii. 12. Other services as usual.

John L. Brewer was found dead in his bed on Monday morning. So far as we can ascertain, he was not seen since Friday, and it was thought wise to investigate. His door was found locked, so George Bennett and Tony Pinto reached a window via a ladder, and saw Mr. Brewer lying dead. Of course they notified officers and physician. The body was in an advanced state of decomposition. The Coroner held no inquest, so we only know that he had been suffering from indigestion, and probably had an acute attack during the night, with fatal result.

Mr. Brewer, known as "Captain Jack," was for years the champion wing shot of the world, winning prizes all over America and in Europe. He was born at Batsto, this county, a little over seventy years ago. A son and two brothers came here, and on Tuesday the body was taken to Pleasant Mills, by undertaker Präscher, for burial.

Forest Fire Laws

Among the laws on this subject, of interest to our readers, forbid

Setting fire to or causing to be burned any wasteland, brushland, or forest land; penalty $50 to $200. This includes backfiring, except as below.

Burning brush, waste, fallows, stumps, logs, dry grass, or fallen timber in any township having fire wardens without a written permit from the warden; penalty $50 to $200. See exception below.

Having any fire by which any property may be endangered without maintaining a careful watch till it is out; penalty $50 to $200. Interfering with a warden or his helpers in fighting forest fire; penalty $50 to $200.

Refusing assistance or the use of property to a warden for fire fighting; penalty $10.

Mutilating or destroying any State forest fire notice; penalty $10.

EXCEPTIONS

Permits are not necessary when fire is set in a public road, garden or plowed field at a distance of 200 feet from woodland, or a field containing dry grass or other inflammable material.

An owner may set a backfire on his own property for its protection provided the fire does not escape to adjoining property.

THE LAW ALSO PROVIDES That a firewarden may set or order set, any backfire.

That a firewarden may arrest without warrant anyone he catches violating the law.

That all penalties collected go to the township concerned.

That any person who puts out a fire when no warden is present can be paid, provided his work is later approved by the warden.

It is better to help the town accomplish one good thing than to point out a dozen poor ones.

You men who have helped to make this Clothing Department what it is, ought to take pride, as we do, in knowing what it is.

We recognize a quality dead line, and below that line we do not go, though we would rather let a man buy somewhere else than to sell him goods that don't come up to our standard.

The summer stocks are ready now, the products of months of careful preparation.

Distinctive Suits at $15 and $16.50. New models and fabrics, that are exceptionally pleasing. Materials are grays, blues, browns, and mixed goods.

Suits at $18 and $20

That were made for us by Hart Schaffner & Marx.

Come and look them over; we are positive they will meet with your approval.

Splendid Suits at $10 and $12.50, both for men and young men, in many colors and different models.

Suits at $7.50, for men and young men, in serges and mixed goods.

Come and see the collection of Boys' Wash Suits. Many colors and styles. The prices begin at 48 cents, 65 cents, 75 cents and gradually go up to $2 and $2.50.

I will save you that much and more if you are looking for a piano or player piano. What's the use of buying a second-hand piano when you can have a new one of better grade at the same price. What's the use of buying cheaper quality, when you can have the best direct from the factory at the same cost, or less?
Don't be old-fashioned and say, "I don't see how it can be done." Look into my proposition and see for yourself. Just because pianos have never been sold here before on this plan and at such low prices, is no reason they cannot be. I save you the middleman's profit.

SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1913

We are very fortunate in not having accidents on Bellevue Avenue, between automobiles and wagons. There was one, however, Thursday afternoon, the lady driver of the auto losing her head when she realized there was not room between two wagons for her to pass. Instead of stopping, she rushed through, and struck both teams. The damage was slight, but it created considerable excitement.

The Curtis Publishing Company are warning the public against a subscription swindler, using various names, - Chas. C. Wilson, Arthur A. Howard, Fred Harter, or Claude Denmark. Note that his left hand is crippled. If he calls on you, send word to Chief Adams.

Again we say, DON'T trust strangers with money.
Don't throw rubbish into the street. Too many carpet tacks are being picked up by bicycle tires.

Where is the catcher? Many useless canines are still roaming the streets. Those of any value are kept at home.

What next? Our tulip trees are being infected by a scale. First it was the maple, then the chestnut, and now the handsome tulip. Our state authorities have been appealed to.

There is considerable talk in regard to the mystery of Jack Brewer's death. His body was bloated to an enormous extent, indicating poison, they say, but whether by ptomaine, from canned goods, or what, they are asking. The Board of Health has asked the Freeholders to take action, ascertain why no autopsy was made and no inquest held by the Coroner.

Fire Company No. 1 had a drill Monday evening, on Verrier's lawn, called to test their new and old hose. The force of water was excellent, throwing a stream several yards over the tall flag pole, through nearly a thousand feet of hose.

"Uncle Dan" Wescott's horse became restive, Sunday, and Mrs. W. was thrown from the wagon, breaking her collar-bone and injuring her otherwise. Notwithstanding her advanced age, she appears to be slowly recovering.

BY HIS BRAINS

SIR REGINALD WESTERLY opened the letter which the butler had brought to him, and as he glanced at the envelope he saw that it was from a woman.

"What a letter!" he exclaimed, and he began to read. Then he stopped suddenly as the door opened and a slight, pretty girl of about eighteen came into the room.

"Oh, father!" she exclaimed, and she was a little color on her cheeks as she spoke. "Harold means Mr. Verinder is here, and he says he wants to see you."

"Well," muttered the baronet, for he was at the time under the influence of a bad attack of gout, which, although his little toe had been ached for some years, he was accustomed to tell his friends, had been in the family for generations. "Well, he is repeated. I suppose you know what he wants."

"Yes, father," she replied. "I think I do." "Then bring him in to see me," said the baronet, and he went to his study.

The girl closed the door quietly, and she went to her room. She was a young fellow, with a strong, clean-shaven jaw and merry blue eyes.

"Now are you, Sir Reginald?" he exclaimed, as he came forward. "Sorry to see you've got your old enemy. You've got my letter, I suppose, then you will understand what I've come about."

"Sit down," muttered the baronet, curtly. "Well!"

"The young man smiled. "I can't add very much to what I said in my letter," he replied, "except that I love Muriel and will do my best to make her happy."

"I love Muriel," he said, standing by the window, her slender figure silhouetted against the light.

"Sir Reginald frowned. "May I ask what your income is?" he said, with grim politeness.

"About five hundred a year at present, but—"

"The other interrupted him. "You are doubtless, of course, ignorant of the fact that my daughter, by virtue of her inheritance, is likely to be at my death one of the richest girls in England!" he inquired.

"The young man bit his lips at the words, and he said, in a low voice, "I assure you, Sir Reginald, I am not."

"I assure you, Sir Reginald, I am not," he answered quietly, "that the question of money doesn't affect me in the slightest. I don't care two penniesworth of this whether your daughter ever has a brass farthing or not. I love her, and that's sufficient for me."

"But not for me, young man," retorted the other. "Listen! I've got other ideas for her than marrying a pauper. The man who has got her has got to show me he's worth something—that he's got some brains to carry him through the world. What have you ever done? You made a failure of one business—now, I'm talking straight to you—mind, and then you took up journalism, and from your own accounts that you've given me from time to time, you pick up five hundred a year by writing stories for silly magazines. For all I know, in six months' time you'll be back to square."

"Father!" protested the girl, "it's hardly fair to Harold—"

"Silence, please!" exclaimed the baronet, sharply. "You're scarcely out of short frocks yet, and you don't know what you're talking about!"

"Verinder rose from his chair. "It's evidently useless prolonging the discussion, Sir Reginald," he began.

"It is," retorted the other. "Right!" replied the younger man; "then let's have words and know where we stand. Please be good enough to listen to my story, he continued, as the baronet made an angry movement in his chair. "You heard all you have to say; now you can hear me." He drew himself up and surveyed his shoulders. "It will clear the air considerably if we understand each other from the start. I have said, please, that I intend to marry your daughter; preferably with your permission, falling that without it, I shall come to you again in one year from now, and if you imagine that either Muriel or I should be in a position within that time, you're a liar."

"The girl came quickly across the room with outstretched hands.

"Thank you, dear," she said, simply, "nothing in the world will change me."

Verinder bent down and kissed her on the lips. The baronet snatched them grimly.

"For two days," he snapped, "I have you drawn out of the house, and I don't know where you are. All this, otherwise you wouldn't dare to do that. That's the first time I have had any news of you since I wrote you that I had no more to say."

Verinder bent up the receiver and told his story.

"Now, Sir Reginald," he murmured, over made was the result of energy, hard work, and brains—real brains! I brought it off and put $2,500 in my pocket. Go and do the same and then you can have Muriel."

"Really, Sir Reginald, you don't imagine I can!"

"I don't know what you can do or what you can't," retorted the other, men, irritably, "but those are my terms. And mind, if I catch you hanging round the house after Muriel—"

"Oh, you won't catch me!" retorted Verinder, sweetly, with a suavity of emphasis, as he walked to the door.

Harold Verinder was sitting in front of a writing table in his chamber, looking at a letter which he had just received from Muriel.

"Well," muttered the baronet, for he was at the time under the influence of a bad attack of gout, which, although his little toe had been ached for some years, he was accustomed to tell his friends, had been in the family for generations. "Well, he is repeated. I suppose you know what he wants."

Verinder bent up the receiver and told his story.

"Now, Sir Reginald," he murmured, moistache. In his hand he carried a stick. The other was a short, fat man with a sandy mustache and spectacles. Both seemed a trifle different in manner.

"The father of the two men spoke. "Sorry to see you've got your old enemy. You've got my letter, I suppose, then you will understand what I've come about."

"Really, Sir Reginald, you don't imagine I can!"

Verinder bent up the receiver and told his story.

"Now, Sir Reginald," he murmured,

grin smile came into the baronet's face. "What a better man than I thought," he said. "Sit down and tell me how you've done it. You're really turned your wits to some account at last, eh?"

Verinder took a chair, and the girl perched herself on the arm of it. "Yes, I think I have," he replied, "therefore I've come down to claim Muriel."

"Not so fast," chuckled the old man. "Let's have some proof first. Then if you've earned her I won't go back on my word."

"The young man took out his note-case. "The girl was watching him breathlessly. Sir Reginald curiously. Then he took from it a little folded slip of paper and handed it to the baronet.

"I made that," he said deliberately, "by energy, hard work and brains—real brains."

"I congratulate you," replied the baronet. "I never thought—"

"What does this mean?" he shouted. "It's a cheque signed by yourself," retorted Verinder with a smile, "so you ought to know."

"You mean to tell me that you are—"

"An imaginary judgment creditor of Lord Lakemore," answered the young man, "precisely. Also the broker's man who took a cheque from the library."

"The girl was looking at him, her eyes sparkling with fun as he took from his pocket a false beard and mustache, and with a deft movement fitted them to his face. "Can you eyes over that, sir?" he went on, changing his voice, "and you'll see it's all in order. At the instigation of B. Rains, Esq., plaintiff."

"There was a long pause. The girl held her breath, and the baronet, round the corners of whose mouth a grim smile was playing. Presently she spoke in a low voice.

"Why didn't you cash this cheque?" he asked harshly.

Verinder shrugged his shoulders. "I didn't want to take your money by a trick," he said, "I merely wanted to show you that I was capable of doing a smart business deal by my wits. I told you to your promise, and both were watching the baronet, round the corners of whose mouth a grim smile was playing. Presently she spoke in a low voice.

"Why didn't you cash this cheque?" he asked harshly.

Verinder shrugged his shoulders. "I didn't want to take your money by a trick," he said, "I merely wanted to show you that I was capable of doing a smart business deal by my wits. I told you to your promise, and both were watching the baronet, round the corners of whose mouth a grim smile was playing. Presently she spoke in a low voice.

grin smile came into the baronet's face. "What a better man than I thought," he said. "Sit down and tell me how you've done it. You're really turned your wits to some account at last, eh?"

Verinder took a chair, and the girl perched herself on the arm of it. "Yes, I think I have," he replied, "therefore I've come down to claim Muriel."

"Not so fast," chuckled the old man. "Let's have some proof first. Then if you've earned her I won't go back on my word."

"The young man took out his note-case. "The girl was watching him breathlessly. Sir Reginald curiously. Then he took from it a little folded slip of paper and handed it to the baronet.

"I made that," he said deliberately, "by energy, hard work and brains—real brains."

"I congratulate you," replied the baronet. "I never thought—"

"What does this mean?" he shouted. "It's a cheque signed by yourself," retorted Verinder with a smile, "so you ought to know."

"You mean to tell me that you are—"

"An imaginary judgment creditor of Lord Lakemore," answered the young man, "precisely. Also the broker's man who took a cheque from the library."

"The girl was looking at him, her eyes sparkling with fun as he took from his pocket a false beard and mustache, and with a deft movement fitted them to his face. "Can you eyes over that, sir?" he went on, changing his voice, "and you'll see it's all in order. At the instigation of B. Rains, Esq., plaintiff."

"There was a long pause. The girl held her breath, and the baronet, round the corners of whose mouth a grim smile was playing. Presently she spoke in a low voice.

"Why didn't you cash this cheque?" he asked harshly.

Suggestions For Housekeepers

All dry clothes should be saved and kept for grating.

A clean sunny yellow is one of the best colors in a new kitchen.

Poultry fat is excellent shortening for ginger cookies and spice cakes.

Grated cheese over mashed potatoes makes a pleasant change.

When sweeping a room, open all windows and sweep toward the center of the room. This keeps dust from woodwork and walls.

A teaspoonful of cheese added to the oyster soup gives a delicate and unusual seasoning.

Ever so little cucumber is a worthwhile addition to potato salad no matter what other vegetables are used.

When next serving chops, bake them instead of broiling. Put them in a dripping pan and cover each chop with onion sliced very dry. Bake for about 20 minutes.

When sugar and flour are used in a custard it is a good plan to combine these dry ingredients and then add to the beaten egg before turning into the milk. There is less danger of the custard being lumpy.

When using oil for frying, the oil taste can be taken away by making a paste of onion juice and a little salt. When brown, take it out.

Vinegar in which homemade cucumber pickles have been preserved should not be thrown away, but used in salad dressing. The flavor is delicious and cannot be gained in any other way.

To have boiled potatoes fluffy, pour the water off and let them stand in the dish for a few minutes, giving them an occasional shake.

To prevent the dust from rising when sweeping a carpet sprinkle over the floor tea leaves that have been washed and squeezed nearly dry, and be careful not to tread on them.

To clean white and light-colored linens that are only slightly soiled, gently rub them in a pan of equal parts of salt and flour.

By placing a few lumps of loaf sugar in the oven nearest the fire when baking pastry the top crusts will cook a lovely brown.

A stimulating bath is made by boiling for half an hour a pound of fresh red-hot pepper in water, and then adding a quart of brandy to the mixture. Let it remain until dry and then strain off.

To save the top of a stocking from being torn off by the supporters fastening, attach a small brass ring to a piece of tape and use the tape to the stocking. Slip the supporters through the rings, using rings that will allow them to slip through.

To get hair cut straight after its growth, cut it in alcohol and the hair will grow back and comb into place as by magical means.

Town of Hammonton Pipe Sewer System and Sewage Disposal Plant.

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to law, that on Monday, June 30, 1913, at eight o'clock p.m., in the Town Hall, at Hammonton, in the County of Atlantic, in the State of New Jersey, the Board of Sewerage of said Town of Hammonton, will receive and consider bids for the construction of a system of pipe sewers, of about eleven miles in length, in and for said Town; and will also, at the same time and place, open and consider bids for the construction of a sewage disposal plant in and for said Town.

Every person, firm or corporation, desiring to bid on either or both of said works, must make application to Samuel Anderson, Secretary of the Board of Sewerage, Hammonton, New Jersey, for the use of a copy of the pamphlet containing the conditions of bidding, form of bid, form of contract, specifications, and form of bond, together with a set of blue prints of the drawings, covering the work on which the bid is to be made. It is desired to submit two bids (one for the pipe line and one for the disposal plant), this fact should be stated in the application, and request be made for the use of copies of both pamphlets and both sets of blue prints. A payment of $25.00 must be made to the Secretary upon said application, whether for either or both of said works of blue prints and the pamphlet. $25.00 of this sum will be refunded to the bidder upon return, to the Board, within thirty days after the opening of said bids, of the pamphlet and blue prints covering the construction of the pipe line or the disposal plant; if both pamphlets and both sets of blue prints are returned to the Board within said time, a remittance of $10.00 will be made. In any case in which a person, firm or corporation, receiving any one or all of said pamphlets and blue prints, shall fail to return all received, said payment of $25.00 will be retained by the Board as the price of the pamphlets or blue prints not returned.

Fire Proof Roofing

CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES

What could be better for town or country buildings than a roofing that won't burn—won't leak—that is lightning proof—lasts as long as the building itself, and never needs repairs?

Cortright Metal Shingles meet every one of these requirements.
Beware of imitations—None genuine without the words "Cortright Reg. U. S. Pat. Off." stamped on each shingle.
