AND
Demarest's Monthly Magazine.
A WONDERFUL PUBLICATION.

MANY suppose DEMAREST'S MONTHLY to be a fashion magazine. This is a great mistake. It undoubtedly contains the finest FASHION DEPARTMENT of any magazine published, but this is the case from the fact that great enterprise and experience are shown, so that each department is equal to a magazine in itself. In DEMAREST'S you get a dozen magazines in one, and secure amusement and instruction for the whole family. It contains Stories, Poems, and other literary attractions, including Artistic, Scientific, and Long held matters, and is illustrated with original steel engravings, Photographs, Water-Colours, and fine Woodcuts, making it the MOST MAGAZINE OF AMERICA.

Each copy contains a PATTERNS ORDER entitling the holder to the selection of ANY PATTERN illustrated in any number of the Magazine, and in ANY OF THE SIZES manufactured, each valued at from 20 cents to 30 cents, or over $3.00 worth of patterns per year, free.

Yearly subscription, $2.60. A trial will convince you that you can get ten times the value of the money paid. Single copies (each containing Pattern Order), 50 cents.

Published by W. JENNINGS DEMAREST, NEW YORK.

The above combination is a splendid chance to get our paper and Demarest's Monthly at reduced rate. Send your subscriptions to this office.

The generous rivalry between the great cities of the continent to see which shall give the larger sum to the Johnston relief fund is a spectacle which appeals to the best sentiment of mankind.

The President will go to Deer Park the latter part of the month, where he will be joined by his wife who will first visit Cape May.

Among the callers on the President was Mrs. John Lucas, president of the Women's Silk Culture Association.

Young Allen Thurman, of Ohio, assures the public that no Democrat having the least sympathy with Protection can be elected governor of that state. He might have added that the prospect is equally hopeless for any Republican who has the least sympathy with Free Trade.

Queen Victoria generously sends her sympathy to the flood sufferers. Even her customary gift of an Indian shawl would have been of more practical worth on this occasion.

FRUSTRATED.

"Did I not tell you truth, Grant? Surely you have never seen a lovelier face than that of your mother's guest. Of what are you reminded as you look at her dark, rich, bewitching beauty?"

"Of a tropical sun, of a host of dusky-browed servants, clustering to do her bidding, of Nigona and her attendants, of the splendor of the east; of all things brilliant, from the wing of a bird to the glowing coils of coquetry heads. Yes, Hilda, my mother's guest is marvelously beautiful."

Grant Lara stood with his father's wife, Hilda Brame, near one of the wide, old-fashioned windows of the room, and looked across the width of light between them where the newly arrived guests sat; and Hilda, with a soft gleam in her gentle eyes looked up at him.

"Marvelously beautiful," he said again, watching a smile flash over the rich, brown face of Inez Dalgreen, which was truly as vivid and glowing as an eastern sun.

Looking at her from where she stood, Grant could find no flaw in her, from the coils of her blue-black hair to the toe of the dainty amber slipper that peeped from the rim of her dress.

"The dark, diamond like eyes disclosed, and for an instant met his own across the width of the vast room. The red lips smiled him summons, which drew him like a spell."

As he moved from his place beside her, a sudden cold feeling went over Hilda, and she shrank to the shadow of the curtain and watched him join those about Miss Dalgreen's chair.

"A smile from her eyes, and the forgotten very existence," she said, bitterly, to herself, for pain makes the gentlest of us bitter sometimes.

She was a young, shy, tender girl, with an especial beauty, save that which nature had given to her soft, gray eyes. But she had a heart of gold, and under the white sheen of her bodice, and it had never been before in all her 18 years.

Now, as she watched the tall form of her guardian's son bend over the stranger, a pain which startled her throbbled with every throb of her pulse, and she gazed out to the quiet of the moonlight, that she might be alone with and learn to understand it.

She would not be missed by those within, she knew, for even Mrs. Lara, her almost mother, had eyes for her face save that of the girl who had come on a visit to one who had known her mother years before.

As it was on the first evening of Miss Dalgreen's coming, so it was on many that followed; Hilda, shy, silent, with a vague, jealous pain in her breast, was allowed to steal away when she listened, never recalled or sought-for, while Grant and Inez enjoyed the parts of lovers, too engrossed by their affection to realize that they were themselves watched.

Yet Hilda, too, and then caught the dark eyes of Inez watching her with a gleam of contemptuous amusement in them, and she was very glad that Miss Dalgreen seemed to wish no friendship to exist between them.

Summer was nearly over when, one evening, a man with pale, delicate face and compressed lips asked for Miss Dalgreen.

Being told that she had taken a certain path and was walking down near the river alone, he turned on his heel, and went through the shadows by the way they said she would return.

Half an hour later when Grant was stepping lightly over the grass, hastening back to the presence of one whose beauty had bound him like a spell, he suddenly heard a loud, silver laugh, and it came from the shadow of heavy branches which dropped low above the path that led up from the river.

Something like a smothered malediction followed on the musical peal, and then he caught the full richness of Inez Dalgreen's voice, still with a ripple of mirth in it.

"You are quite tragical over it, my dear Rex; but I don't see why you should be, when you know how poor you are, and how absurd it would be to think of my ever marrying you."

Now, this Grant Lara, is an only child—did you notice how broad the acres are that he has in a few years?"

"Friends!" Grant heard a coarse voice cry, "friends, when you have broken it as you would a rotten twig? But tell me this—have you any love in your heart for this man, whom you tell me you will marry?"

"The silver of her laughter rang out once more."

"Love for Grant Lara? I never said merely. Why, Rex, a love that is blind, pale, stupid little thing here with a breaking heart about it, and I never looks at her. Rex, if a woman

A Model Newspaper

THE NEW YORK MAIL AND EXPRESS

The Advocate of the Best Interests of the Home—The Enemy of the Saloon. The Friend of American Labor. The Favorite Newspaper of People of Refined Tastes Everywhere.

The New York MAIL AND EXPRESS, the favorite American newspaper of many people of intelligent and cultivated tastes, has recently made some noteworthy improvements, materially increasing its general excellence. It is in the broadest sense

A National Newspaper, most carefully edited, and adapted to the wants and tastes of intelligent readers throughout the entire country—North, South, East and West. It is a thoroughly clean paper, free from the corrupting, sensational and demoralizing trash, mislabeled news, which defiles the pages of too many city papers.

OUR POLITICS.

We believe the Republican party to be the true instrument of the POLITICAL PROGRESS of the American people; and holding that the honest enforcement of its principles is the best guarantee of the national welfare, we shall support them with all our might; but we shall always treat opposing parties with consideration and fair play.

AGAINST THE SALOON.

The MAIL AND EXPRESS is the recognized National organ of the great Anti-Saloon Republican movement. It believes that the liquor traffic as it exists to-day in the United States is the enemy of society, a fruitful source of corruption in politics, the ally of anarchy, a school of crime, and, with its avowed purpose of seeking to corruptly control elections, and legislation, is a menace to the public welfare and deserves the condemnation of all good men.

Flour and ham are still in demand at Johnstown and will be for weeks to come. Prayers and expressions of sympathy are excellent in their way, but potatoes and cornmeal and bacon are more needed in the Conemaugh Valley at this juncture.

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. G. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with abscess of lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an incurable consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle, and am able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jesse Middleover, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, I would have died of lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottle free, at Cochran's. 5
