Letter from Dr. J. M. Peebles.

ADYAR, Madras, India,
May 19, 1897.

MR. O. E. HOYT,

My Dear Sir:—Pen descriptions of countries, nations, races, and tribes, with their manners and customs, have their value; but seeing is knowing.
Swarming with nearly three hundred million human beings, India is a very difficult country to describe, because of different climatic temperatures, different racial origins (Aryan and Dravidian), different religions.—Mohamedon, Jains, and Hindoos, with their different sects and schisms, and different castes and sub-castes, numbering nearer 400 than four. High caste Brahmins are very intelligent, given to meditation, logic, and metaphysics. They will spit more theoretical hairs in a two hours' talk than any other class of men I ever met.
The masses of Hindoos are low, ignorant and superstitious. Especially is this true of the Sudras and Pariahs.
Excluding knives and forks, they eat with their fingers. Rice is their daily dish. The women work with the men, doing the same work. Yesterday, in riding to Madras, only five miles, I saw women tilling trees, digging post holes, carrying mortar and bricks on their heads, and climbing coconut trees.

The English flag floats over this immense country, except a small tract bordering Tibet, called Nepal. The great majority of the people are exceedingly poor. The English, through exorbitant taxation, has squeezed the very life out of them. And yet, England, by building railroads, abolishing widow burning, and encouraging educational institutions, has accomplished a vast amount of good. Wherever England plants her feet she takes a higher civilization, and encourages industrial pursuits. Much as native Hindoos dislike English rule, they infinitely prefer it to Mohamedon. Mohamedon conquerors of India demolished temples and pagodas, burned valuable manuscripts, and forced their religion at the point of the sword. Arabs in origin, they are naturally vandals. They are zealots, bigots, fatalists, and polygamists. In some portions of India they are numerous.

In traversing Southern India I had a leper guide. His face was spotted with leprous patches and his ears swollen. I took him because such a fine linguist,— speaking English and half a dozen dialects. Though considered infectious, I had no fear of it. Fear destroys thousands of lives each year. It is vastly easier to face leprosy, plague, and cholera than to cowardly run away from them.
The famine is terrible in some portions.
No pen can describe it. Many that you meet in the agricultural districts are nearly skins and bones. Begging, starving, dying by the roadside, are common sights. The dead are burned. The English have governed this country two hundred years. Though this is my third trip through India, I have never seen a Hindoo drunk, nor but one who had become sufficiently civilized and Englishized to smoke cigars. The Brahmins (and there are sixty millions of them) are vegetarians, and will shake no man's hand who eats the corpses of dead animals.

MADRAS AND A "HOLY YOGI."

Madras has a population of about five hundred thousand, being in size the third of India's cities. It extends nine miles along the sea coast. Black town, the crowded portion, is within the old city walls. One of the main roads, lined with coconut, mango, and tamar-ind trees, leads up St. Thomas' Mount, where, according to tradition, St. Thomas, the apostle of India, was martyred.
A Roman Catholic Church stands upon the summit.

By invitation, I took breakfast with Rev. Mr. Killett, Wesleyan missionary and professor in the Christian College, and then took a stroll through this College of two thousand students. It was examination day for some classes, and I must say they compared well in their studies, so far as I could see, with scholars in American schools. Though their skins are brown, their eyes were bright, their faces pleasant, and their heads, phrenologically speaking, well shaped.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters" is an old proverb, and the sequel is often verified, to wit: about fifty years ago, in central New York, the Hon. Garry Chambers, Rev. Mr. Keyes (a Methodist preacher), and myself, conceived, built up, and organized the "Independent Order of Good Templars." Imagine my surprise to find four lodges of the order here in Madras—mostly Hindoos, with a sprinkling of English and Scotch.
They very kindly said that they never expected to see "one of the fathers of the order." I also lectured before the Triplicane Society, constituted of the Brahminic literati, and nearly all University graduates.

On Friday of last week I went, with an interpreter, to see a Fakir, a "Holy Yogi." He lives in a low palm-thatched hut in the edge of a tropical forest.
The hut had no windows, doors, nor chimneys. We had to stoop low to get in through the doorway. Though the day was hot, there was a small fire burning, which is never allowed to go out. The Yogi was squatted upon the earth, nearly naked. As we entered he arose and taking a pot of ashes, sprinkled them upon our foreheads. The air was suffocating, the stench abominable, and the Yogi's body very dirty. And, although he is considered very holy, a religious recluse, my principal thoughts were,—put out your fire, air your hut, wash your face and bathe your body.
He eats but one meal a day, and that is rice. Physically, he is mostly skin and bones. He has sat here twenty years.
People say he has uttered some remarkable prophecies that have been fulfilled, and performed some wonderful cures, concerning which I am skeptical. Conversing with him, he seemed well up in the Vedas, Upanishads, and other Hindoo books. I left him disappointed, disgusted.

THE TEAS OF CHINA, INDIA, ASSAM, OR CEYLON,—WHICH?

Being on the ground, seeing the tea leaves and shrubs growing, seeing the leaves gathered, dried, manipulated and boxed, I write as an authority. The coffee plantations of Ceylon, owing to a blight on the trees, have given place to extensive tea planting and culture. Tea raising is very profitable in the warm humid climate of Ceylon, Assam, and some portions of India. The tea plant would grow ten or fifteen feet high if allowed, but the shrubs are kept clipped down to one or two feet high. Only the young tenderest tip leaves are picked.
Sinnalee and Hindoo coolies do all the work, women doing the same kind and same amount of work as men. On many plantations, however, poor Tamil coolie women do nearly all the picking, out-under the scorching sun. A large bus-ket is suspended from their backs and rests across their backs; bending forward, they nip off the now grown leaves and toss them back into the baskets.
Their only dress is a loin-cloth. The manufacturing establishments, for preparing, drying, sorting, and boxing the tea, interested me deeply. Many are the processes, one of which is the fermentation of the moist tea leaves; another is passing them over or through a copper screen; another, stirring with the coolies' hands while drying; then, stamping them down, when dried, in boxes and chests by the Tamil coolie boys' bare perspiring feet. At the Matale manufactory, the last one that I visited in Ceylon, the tea leaves ready for sorting and packing were scattered over the floor half an inch deep in some places, with nearly naked, barefooted, sweating coolies treading around in them,—later to be steeped and slipped as a delicious beverage by western nations.
Tea leaves steeped are useless, expensive, astringent, stimulating, and medical. Theine, from tea, is used by some medical men as a medicine. Paris has a large hospital for nervously broken down tea toppers. Hindoos used neither tea nor coffee when conquered by the English. Only a small number use them now. But many Hindoos are becoming sufficiently "civilized" to use brandy, smoke cigars, take snuff, and drink tea and coffee,—all curses," to use the language of a learned Hindoo pundit with whom I became intimately acquainted.

India is in a transition state. Temporarily, I am imprisoned in this country, because if I leave by any steamer I am liable to be quarantined at any port westward. How long this will continue depends upon the ravages of the plague.
At the lowest authentic estimate, twenty-thousand have died of it in Bombay alone. It is now subsiding in this city, but breaking out in other localities.
Often, local journals conceal rather than publish full accounts, thinking it will further harm the country.

When in Ceylon I had the pleasure of meeting the King of Siam, who was on his way to the Queen's Jubilee. In the Queen's House, Colombo, I had a few minutes talk with him. Educated in England, he speaks our language well.
He is very social and genial. The Prince of Siam has recently renounced the world and become a Buddhist priest, donning the yellow robes; and accepting the doctrine of renunciation, he now owns nothing but his robe and his rice dish. Twice I visited his temple and held long conversations with him.

There is no country like America.

JOHN D. BALL.

The Republican.

[Entered as second class matter.]

SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1897.

Dr. C. Potter and daughter, Mrs. Harry Little, and children, spent a week or more with relatives in Philadelphia.

The Baptist Church have voted to grant Pastor Killian a vacation to cover the second, third and fourth Sundays in July. Rev. W. C. Stiver, who made so good an impression here recently, has been invited to fill the pulpit on those Sundays, and will no doubt accept. In the evenings he is expected to see his congregation to illustrate his sermons.

Wonder who furnished the Atlantic Review with the wonderful story about the late Dr. W. E. Potter, stating that though he lived here for forty years no one knew his real name nor where he came from, etc., etc. The fact is, we all knew him, and he was in no wise reticent about his former home or his family. The only mystery was, why he preferred to live alone and in apparent poverty, having means sufficient to provide life's comforts.

Tuesday's showers did not improve the prospects of or preparations for the Baptists' lawn party, at Mr. Vernier's. In fact, it did dampen their ardor and decorations; but, happily the clouds rolled away, and the evening was really delightful. Boats were in demand and moonlight rides on the lake were the favorite pastime. The Sons of Veterans and Dram Corps, and Baptist Boys' Brigade were present by invitation, and gave an exhibition drill. Refreshments were served, and with music and games the hours flew rapidly.

Word went around, Thursday evening, that the current would be on the electric light at Third and Bellevue, and a crowd assembled to welcome it. While waiting, the spirit of fun seized upon some of them. A rope was soon stretched across the street, the old street lamp wired thereto, and lighted, amid the plaudits of spectators. Just then they and their little light were suddenly thrown into the shadow by rays from the arc lamp, their laughter changed to cheers, and the old-fashioned gas was replaced on its post.

An argument offered by advocates of a licensed hotel in Hammoncton is that the best of bicycle riders passing through town will stop and patronize the bar. We were reminded of this, the other day, when a friend stated that he had met not less than seventy-five riders when near a neighboring licensed house, and not one of them stopped there. Note this; also the following: A "Cyclers' Rest" in town sold seventy quarts of milk in two days. The fact is, bicyclers know by experience that a steady brain is needed to manage a bicycle, and put their money where it will do more good.

Among Hammoncton's numberless beautiful homes is that of Justice Geo. W. Pressy, old, quiet, romantic, and as delicious in many respects as the "Old Oaken Bucket" the poet has immortalized in song. Mr. Pressy has distinguished his friends by making it for sale. He has astonished the stranger, too, for the home looks so inviting that one would think it a haven of rest forever. But Justice Pressy has his down in "Old Virginia," and to their hearts' content the father following the children. The writer was delighted lately to spend an hour in Justice Pressy's garden, which was then as gay with scarlet peonies as a Parisian belle with color and furbelow. Roses and lilac vied with each other in lending a charm to the garden, and to-day that old homestead is as full of wild, reckless beauty as a Florida jungle, nature doing her will and disputing with man his right to adorn what God has created. But this is not carelessness. The systematic impulse is seen all around. But one might talk through columns of the Union about Hammoncton's beauty spots and then not do them justice. —Atlantic Daily Union.

The growth of protective sentiment, even among Democrats, is shown by the fact that members of that party have been unable to agree about methods of fighting the tariff bill. The old-time Democrats in the Senate, when their party got together in caucus, wanted to fight the tariff on old free-trade lines, but found the younger and protective element was so strong against them that they were obliged to abandon the plan. Their fight against tariff will be altogether desultory and mostly based upon the fact that it is a measure presented by Republicans.

We are all likely to have sympathy with the under dog in the fight, but too apt to keep our hands in our pockets so they won't be bitten.

Those foreign countries which are proposing to "retaliate" by shutting out American products if our tariff laws do not suit them, will think twice before they enter upon a one-sided war of this sort. Austria-Hungary, which makes loudest talk in that line, took $3,499,651 worth of our productions last year, and sold us $7,044,154 worth of products. Argentina, which has also suggested a course of this kind, took five million dollars' worth from us last year, and sold us nine millions. Japan bought seven millions but sold us twenty-five millions. When countries with these relations realize that a systematic exclusion of our products would result in cutting off much larger sales of their own products to our people, they will stop talking about retaliation against the tariff, or at least do nothing more than talk.

Our Spanish-American friends at the south of us evidently recognize the fact that the Republican party is again in control in the United States. They are sending delegations of business men here to encourage trade, a step which they carefully avoided taking during the Cleveland administration, which cut off the reciprocity treaties and thus closed to the United States the markets which those treaties had opened to us in those countries.

The True Remedy.
W. M. Reptin, editor "Yakima, Ill., Ohio," says: "We won't keep home without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Experienced with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as in it we have a certain and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, etc." It is ideal to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as just as good as Dr. King's New Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record of cures and besides it is guaranteed. It never fails to satisfy. Trial bottles free at Croft's drug store.

And there was Light

After much tribulation, the Electric Light Company received their lamps on a late train, Thursday evening, and at once placed two of them, started the machinery, and turned on the current. As was anticipated, there was much flickering of these two lamps, for a time, but this was adjusted and the lights shone out brilliantly, and a hearty cheer went up from the crowd that had assembled to greet this bright evidence of a coming new Hammoncton!

Next week we expect to publish the County Financial Report. Those who desire to know how the Board of Freeholders spend the public money.

M. K. Boyer says no one would think any the worse of P. H. Jacobs for having been carried through to Atlantic City, if Mr. Jacobs had not been elected to Council on the no-license ticket.

We incidentally learned, this week, of the death of Charles Young, at the County Insane Asylum. We failed in our efforts to ascertain the date, but it was probably about the first of this month.

FOR RENT, The D. L. Potter house and barn, corner of Bellevue Avenue and Liberty Street, Hammoncton. Apply to GEO. BERRY.

At the Baptist Church to-morrow, Pastor Killian will speak especially to young people. Morning topic, "The true boundary line for Christian young people." Evening, "A proposal and an acceptance."

TO BRIDGE CONTRACTORS. Sealed proposals will be received by the Committee on Bridges of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Camden, at the Boarding House of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, Atlantic City, on Monday, June 21st, 1897, at 10 o'clock a.m., for the reconstruction of the support and wing of the bridge at Lower Bank, New Jersey. Children's Day exercises in the M. E. Church to-morrow morning. An excellent program has been arranged. An opportunity will be given to unite with the Church on probation. Children will be baptized. Subject in the evening, by the pastor, "Our glads, big and little, old and young."

During Tuesday's storm, lightning struck one corner of Edw. Wolcott's house, between Hoesdale and Winslow, doing a little damage to the foundation. Mr. — was on the piazza at the time, and was very severely shocked—paralyzed,—but was reported better on Wednesday.

Mr. Abriel has a cow that cheerfully adopts the offspring of her sisters in the herd. At present she sustains four calves; and the fact that all of them resemble herself very closely occasions considerable amusement for the visitors and amusement for the owner. They are taken for quadruplets.

The engine and a dynamo in the electric power house were started on Monday, and proved to be all in proper shape for business. Owing to negligence on the part of dealers or manufacturers, the lamps were not shipped last week, according to contract, and the non-arrival delayed the company in their lighting.

Children's Day.

"Children's Day" was celebrated in several of the Churches last Sunday by the Sunday Schools.

The cantata "Hearts of Gold," at the Universalist Church, in the evening, was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The recitations and songs were well rendered and the sentiment was very appropriate. The messages from the flowers, Daisies, Johnny-Jump-Ups, etc., composed most of the selections. The decorations, consisting principally of daisies along the platform, appeared very natural and pretty.

The Baptist Sunday School had a broad arch of laurel—follage and blossoms—over the platform, with the words "Behold I stand at the door and knock," in bright letters on the green background. Plants and cut flowers were abundant, with bunches of laurel wherever they could be placed. The program of singing, recitations, dialogues and addresses was interesting, and a good collection was taken up for Sunday School mission work. In the evening, Pastor Killian preached an excellent sermon especially to children, of whom nearly a hundred were present, including the Boys' Brigade. There was singing by the Junior C. E. Society, and a solo by one of its members, Miss Annie Dunkle.

At the Presbyterian Church, the platform and surroundings were beautifully decorated with laurel, daisies, and roses. The singing was especially pleasing, and the children seemed to enter into the spirit of the day with their part of the programme.

The Williamstown Schools, N. C. Holdridge, A. M., Principal, held their commencement exercises last week Friday evening. Their program was an interesting one, including fancy drills by the little folks, music by the band, and an address by Rev. F. B. Brace. Residents of that town speak in the highest possible terms of the work done there by Mr. Holdridge.

BASE BALL GAME.

The Hammon-ton A. A. defeated the Hammon-ton B. B. C. in a decisive game last Saturday, with a score of 18 to 3. It was not a pitchers' game, for the fielders were kept pretty busy, especially the infielders. The cause of the defeat may be judged in great measure from the column of errors. The infielders on both teams stopped some red-hot grounders, but those on the B B C especially were not very sure on a throw. The second team sympathizers gave a sigh of relief when Trout was put in the box in place of Jefferson. Factional feeling ran high during the game, and rather uncomplimentary things were said by both sides. It should be possible to have a fair game without having half the spectators quarreling with the umpire. The score:
