The Commencement

The REPUBLICAN going to press too early, last Friday, to give a complete report of the High School Commencement, we go a little more into detail in this issue.

The Presbyterian Church was very prettily decorated with the class colors—turquoise and black,—the tungsten lamps lighting it up brightly. Back of the graduates, who were seated in a row across the platform, was the chorus of girls and boys. These bright faces were shown up even better by a green background of cedar. Over the class their motto, "Knowledge is Power,"—the letters being cut from cardboard and fastened on black. The building was filled to the doors.

The programme which we published last week was carried out with but one change, and was as follows:

Invocation	Rev. Allan Spidell
Up and Away	Chorus
Early History of Hammonton	Lila A. Dodd
Selection	Orchestra
The Sicilian Disaster	Mamie M. Eckhardt
Knowledge is Power	Frank L. Thomas
Down to the Dewy Dell	Chorus
The New American Navy	Leon E. Andrews
Selection	Orchestra
Class History	Charles S. White
Supplement	W. Wallace Harley
The Twilight Star	Chorus
Class Prophecy	Louise Pressey
Supplement	Roy H. Brown
Selection	Orchestra
Class Will	Marie F. Hoefler
Presentation of Diplomas	by W. R. Tilton, for C. F. Osgood, Pres't Bd. of Education
Joys of Spring	Chorus
Benediction	Rev. J. E. Shaw

The graduates were:

Leon E. Andrews	Roy H. Brown
Lila A. Dodd	Mamie M. Eckhardt
W. Wallace Harley
Marie F. Hoefler	Louise Pressey
Frank L. Thomas	Charles S. White

Following an earnest invocation by Rev. Allan Spidell, pastor of the Baptist Church, and the excellent chorus singing, Miss Lila Dodd recited an essay on "Early History of Hammonton," which was a complete story up to the present time, was very interesting, nicely delivered, and none too long.

The Orchestra parts were appreciated by all, receiving applause after each number, as did the singing, under the direction of Miss Faunce.

"The Sicilian Disaster," by Miss Mamie Eckhardt, was a clear description of the people, the terrible disaster, and the beneficial results which are following, in the way of rebuilding.

habits, etc. Miss Eckhardt handled her subject well.

Frank L. Thomas, on "Knowledge is Power," had a hard subject, but brought out excellently the fact that the more knowledge a man has, the greater his ability. He illustrated by the lives of many great men who had made their mark in the world's progress. The better educated a person is, the more and better work can he produce, and consequently earn better wages.

Another subject of interest to all was "The New American Navy," by Leon Andrews. Beginning with the birth of the navy, in 1882, he gave a clear idea of the improvement in ship building up to to-day. One could readily see the importance of being a sea power, and that it would be a sorry day if the U. S. forgot this fact.

Part second dealt exclusively with the members themselves. Charles S. White handled his subject well,—the "Class History."—Taking first the class as a whole, then individually, he followed them through the class rooms, relating important and amusing incidents therein and on the school grounds. This was ably supplemented by Wallace Harley, who told some things on Chas. which were both amusing and flattering.

A miss from Missouri, Miss Louise Pressey, was at home in her "Class Prophecy." She was assisted in her dreams by a friendly ghost, and members were shown up in various parts of the world, occupying strange positions, matrimonially and otherwise. Miss Louise has a lively imagination. Roy H. Brown, President of the class of '00, acted as supplement prophet, and took his bearings through an interesting journey of Miss Pressey's life, and left her happily wedded.

A new feature was the "Class Will." This was ably handled by Miss Marie Hoefler. It was in the form of a legal document, designating the various legacies bequeathed to the Juniors, to the teachers, the Board and the school. Much interest was taken in this, because of newness and originality.

Handsome bouquets were carried up by young lady ushers after each graduate had taken part; and to Miss Pressey a congratulatory telegram signed "From your old Dad."

Because of Mr. Osgood's illness, Mr. W. R. Tilton presented the diplomas, giving the recipients excellent advice, with words of congratulation and good wishes.

The enjoyable occasion closed with chorus singing, and benediction by Rev. J. E. Shaw, pastor of the Methodist Church.

THE HOMESICKNESS OF SILAS MACE

As Silas Mace left the store at 6 o'clock, he said to himself that he wished he might never see the inside of the place again. It had all been so different from the employ of Freeman & Co., wholesale merchants and importers, with strong hopes of rapid advancement; for in his preparation for business he had had advantages that do not often come in the way of a country boy.

He had, of course, learned all that was to be learned in the village school; but besides that, Mr. Graham, a neighbor who had retired to a farm, had taught him bookkeeping; and the minister, who was a man of quite remarkable learning, had given him lessons in French and German, and even in Spanish.

It was on the strength of these attainments, presumably, that Mr. Graham had secured for Silas the place in the city with Freeman & Co., and Mr. Scoles, the minister, had written for him at length in his letter of recommendation. But now, after the lapse of three long months, he could not see that he was anything more than a mere office boy about the establishment, and he was still drawing his original salary of five dollars a week.

Mr. Freeman, the head of the firm, had apparently never noticed him until that morning, and then only to send him out on an errand, and to send him sharply for being so long about it. Evidently there was no future for him with Freeman & Co.

But that was not all. This city life did not agree with him. He could not get the meals that were set before him, and he did not sleep any too well; and then he kept having those strange, sinking sensations, especially when he thought of home—which was pretty often.

The street was full of people, chatting and laughing on their homeward way; but Silas, wrapped in his unhappy thoughts, walked along scarcely conscious of the sights and sounds about him. Suddenly an odor, wafted to him on the evening breeze, did not attract his attention, but only to tell him that a great longing. It was the smell of frying doughnuts from a nearby eating house.

It was not that Silas desired those doughnuts, nor was it even the thought of those that his mother used to make, that now brought the tears to his eyes.

But a picture had risen before him of a low-pitched kitchen in an old farmhouse, with his mother at the bread-board, rolling and cutting and spreading dough, and his father sitting on the wood-box, and the boy standing by, watching with eager anticipation the twisted cakes browning and sizzling in the kettle on the stove. A man came, and Silas felt his cheeks burn as he saw a fellow brushed past him, hurrying toward the railroad station.

"He's going to take the 6:15 train east," thought Silas. All at once his head seemed to be swimming, and his knees trembled. There is nothing more to be said, he thought, "and the best thing for me is to start for home."

Acting on this decision, he quickly overtook and passed the man with the valise, and when he reached the east-bound train pulled out from the station, Silas was on board, with a ticket for Woodville in his hand.

His ticket had cost him nearly half his available funds, but his board-bill had been paid week in advance, in accordance with the rules of the house. He would write to his room-mate to send him trunk by express to Woodville. He would also write to Freeman & Co., explaining his absence. There was, of course, a half-week's salary due him, but never mind that. He was sure of one thing—he would never go back.

His health seemed to improve and his spirits rose as the train sped along, but when he finally reached Woodville he made his exit, quite unconsciously, from the end of the rear car. There might be people on the platform when he would not care to meet.

Avoiding the main street, he was soon on a well-known road leading out of the village, and a brisk walk of fifteen minutes brought him home.

There was no clock, it would not be the window to greet him, and as he turned into the yard the old house seemed to loom up forbiddingly, and after crawling on his untripped return.

"GOD BLESS OUR BOY IN THE CITY."

BATTLED WITH A BIRD.

Doughty Cap's Doughty's Feathered Foe Nearly Killed Him.

Some men say it is a rooster, others pronounce it an angry, still others contend it's a cross between a pelican and a condor, and a few local scientists are positive it's the sole survivor of the supposedly extinct phyllophlo family. At any rate, it is a bird, and it is a powerful one, weighing more than 100 pounds, with a beak capable of tearing iron and taloned legs that strike like the kick of an ostrich, same near killing Cap. George Doughty in his boat off Brigantine beach early the other morning, an Atlantic City dispatch to the New York World says.

In the battle for life the veteran bayman, whose family name fits him well, finally knocked out his feathered foe with a mighty sweep of an oar. Knowing the skeletons might doubt this marvelous tale of the sea, Cap Doughty on his return to this city showed his prize to his friends, and they, in turn, showed it to the local naturalists, who, in turn, showed it to the general public. The bird, which is as tall as some men, and then made the before-mentioned guesses.

"Doughty says he was sculling his boat along shortly before daylight, in a dense fog, when he heard the whir of wings and the snap of the big beak of the strange bird, which narrowly missed his face. Before he recovered from his scare the bird wheeled and came back, this time making a stroke at him with its taloned feet and missing by only a few inches.

Eighty-grained an oar and fought bird and man battled for many minutes. Doughty being forced to grab the gunwale several times to keep from going overboard when the bird struck him with full force. A lucky blow, however, was higher than the bird down, and before it could recover Doughty had wound it round many times with a strong line, also tying its beak and legs.

One morning, however, a fisherman hauled the guano that he saw a bird of the species in this section, and there is a general belief that the creature is the much-discussed "Jersey devil" which excited South Jersey several months ago. On the trail to Sleepyville, Sleepyville, Sleepyville, Leaf and loiter as you will, Sleepyville, Sleepyville.

There the purpling sunsets glow, And the crimson poppies glow, And the daisy daisies glow, Where the mountain rivers wind. There the dusky fables sing, And the water roses fling, Gifts of fragrance everywhere On the mellow summer air.

On the trail to Sleepyville, Sleepyville, Sleepyville, Leaf and loiter as you will, Sleepyville, Sleepyville.

There the spirits of the June, Thro' the pine trees softly croon, And bright heaven's glow lies On the peaks that kiss the skies. There, from dawn to vesper chime, Is ever dawning time, And the summer, matchless fair, Reigns a queen forever there.

DOG PUTS WOMAN IN PANIC.

Phœnix on Her Hat Arouses Instinct of Gordon Setter Pup.

Nobody has ever seen a dog act like that on Broadway. He was a brown-and-yellow, curly-haired one with feet slightly out of drawing, which indicated that he was just getting over being a pup.

He chased a woman up two little steps of one of the closed entrances of the Criterion Theatre and there he stood at the bottom of the flight with his long nose at such an angle that a dotted line drawn from it would have touched the startled phœnix on her nape. The effect had a ghastly result on the woman, who had been lifted off the sidewalk in a kind of high-stepping attitude.

"Mad dog!" cried she on the steps at the top of her voice. "Wont you, body save me? Police! Police! Where's a policeman?"

She backed nearly to the door. The dog at the same time shifted his position and again relapsed into his three-legged pose and a glassy stare.

From her puff the imprisoned woman took a box of confectionery and threw him bomb after bomb. The animal was interested for two or three times and then again he resumed a joyful sniffing in the direction of the gaudy phœnix wings.

About the group congregated a large throng which kept at a safe distance. The cry of "Mad dog!" was sounded through Long Acre square. Persons on the way to the theaters went around the block. The woman on the steps was by this time hysterical and alternately sobbing and crying "Mad dog!" and "Good doggie, good doggie, how can you be so mean?"

Edging his way through the throng, a policeman reached for his revolver. "Get on to the mad dog!" he said. "I wouldn't!" said a lady who was looking on. "It ain't a crime for a Gordon setter pup to point a phœnix in the Canadagoods or New York. I was raised for him here and here, constant, you take that animal to the pound, and I'll pay for his keep. He's a good one—New York Herald."

PET BIRDS FROM THE TROPICS.

Rare Vireonidae Are Bought-Gold-Silvered That Can Dance.

Lovers of cage birds have hitherto confined their attention chiefly to the canary, the parrot and the mockingbird. Now, however, there is a tendency to acquire rare varieties and dealers are preparing to meet this novel demand.

The bulbul is among the feathered pets in demand in this country, according to the Philadelphia Record. "A few bulbuls have been hitherto brought from India," said a bird dealer. "These have not included, however, the bulbul of Persia, the oriental counterpart of the European nightingale, but gifted with a richer, sweeter and more plaintive song."

The hill minas of India sometimes eclipse parrots in their lingual abilities, but very few have been imported into the United States. They now retail at $17 apiece. Japanese robins, sometimes called Pekin nightingales by English aviculturists, are peculiarly colored—dark and greenish with distinctive yellow and orange breast, bill and wings. They are easy to keep, possess a sweet and musical song and have a song period lasting ten months.

The select of Japanese breeders is also shown in several varieties of song birds that are coming into notice in this country. A pure white variety and a buff and white variety of one species—the Japanese nun, also known as the banglebird or "manji-bird"—testimony to the assiduity of the Japanese fanciers. Nuns are small birds of different species, such as the black headed and tri-colored nuns, the spiced-bird or chestnut-min, and others. Most of them have more or less dark brown in the coloring.

Waxbills form a family of African cage birds which are just beginning to attract fashionable notice. These include the dainty little orange-blue or crimson eared waxbill, various species of silverbill and several other kinds. The violet-eared waxbill, a bird of radiant prismatic beauty, though for some years past popular in Europe, has just been brought to this country. Edelweisers or African grey singers are an African species with a pleasing song.

Lady goldfinches from Australia have hitherto been extremely rare in this country, although they are to reach the highest point of beauty and elegance attained by any of the smaller birds of the world. These birds come readily, are not pugnacious and are easily tamed. They are also individuals of disposition. Among their accomplishments is an interesting and graceful little dance.

Oysters are a luxury in Europe. The natural beds have been exhausted, and artificial culture has long been depended upon for a supply of this delicious delicacy. The chief breeding ground in France is the Basque district, a triangular tidal bay about nine miles out of the Gulf of Biscay into the department of Gironde by a narrow channel about three miles in length.

The shallow bay is networked with navigable channels between which at low tide rise flat, half sand flats utilized for breeding succulent mollusks. During the low spring tides the flats are covered with quantities of a cheap variety of ordinary cooking shell which has been previously sorted with a sort of coarse whitewash. The spawn brought in by the high tide catches on these tiles and the line of the whitewash helps the little mollusk to form the first shell.

Toward winter these tiles are taken up and carefully wrapped. The oysters are large now as one's thumb nail, are spread in tin-covered trays or baskets or closely woven mats to protect them from the storms and other enemies and moved to the salt marshes on the east side of the basin to grow. When they have become a little accustomed to an independent existence they are placed in trenches a little below water level, which are provided with sluice gates by which they can be flooded at will.

They are then prevented from being "chilled" in winter or dried up in summer and are usually protected from being covered with mud by being written in this way: but the primary aim of the garden is to accustom them to being deprived of water—that is, to teach them to keep their valves tightly shut when out of it.

In about eighteen months their education in that respect is completed and they are raked up, barbed and sent on a journey of several days to the copper rock at Marquise, France, and thence to London, to fatten and to be sold as "choice" oysters.

About 250,000,000 are shipped annually. The work is done by barefooted men and women, both clad in bright crimson knee breeches and waders, which reveal the naked quite incredible thighs.

Not (continued).

She Why? people borrow trouble so much?

He O, because they never have to cut up any anxiety, I suppose.

The Wise Mother.

FOURTH OF JULY ASSOCIATION.

There will be a meeting of the Fourth of July Association on Saturday evening, June 19th, at 8 o'clock sharp, in Town Hall.

You are earnestly requested to be present.

COMMITTEE.

Monday was dog day.

George B. Grele has been soliciting advertisements for the huge Fourth of July program, and report it nearly filled up. Hustle in your order, or the pick will be taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sevenhair, of New Brunswick, were visitors at the M. E. paragon this week, on their wedding trip. Pastor Shaw married them on the 9th.

Supper or light refreshments at Jap. Tea to-night, at Universalist pa-ronage. Cold ham, deviled eggs, potato salad, tomatoes, pickles, sandwiches, lettuce, tea, cake, lemonade.

A. B. Davis, Collector, announces that July 1st is the limit for payment of taxes on real estate. All properties on which taxes are not paid by that date will be advertised for sale.

WANTED—good home for female Sutter Wap. Price very reasonable. Reason for selling, too large for small child.
This office.

There was a rumor, Saturday, that Mrs. Edw. Altemus had died, in Philadelphia. Later, it was learned that it was Mr. A's sister who died, and that Mrs. A. is recovering.

The local telephone company held its annual meeting on Monday evening. There were no changes in officers, excepting the election of Thos.
Sturges in place of C. W. Richards, deceased.

WANTED—a man to do house work on farm. Apply to L. M. Parkhurst.

On Wednesday, John W. Roller removed the pickets from one-half of his lot on the County Road, substituting wire thereon, to replace those torn off by the boys in front of the residence. John says he'd like to catch 'em.

The Telephone Company are to send out a special announcement another increase in rates, to take effect Aug. 1st.

The Directors find that the original charge—twelve dollars per year—will not pay running expenses.

FOR SALE, Good six room house, about three acres of land, 1/2 mile from railroad station. Price $1200. Good location, very deep.
Wm. H. Bernhouse.

Japanese Tea and Lawn Fete, bought Blackmer Home for Girls, Tokyo, Japan, at Universalist paragon, on Maple Street, this evening, 5:30 to 9:30.
Supper, 20 cents for adults, children 10 cents. Light refreshments, 5 cts.

INTEMPERANCE.

There is nothing more degrading and no more atrocious insult to civilized life than the American saloon.
It has poisoned the social atmosphere for the masses; in it the working man squanders his savings, and the healthy man devotes his energies and becomes a wreck. Political corruption irradiates from the saloon into the whole public life, and a thousand ways lead from the saloon to the penitentiary.

It is a blessed movement which now turns with overwhelming energy against the horrors of this evil and unites the clean minds of the whole nation in an untiring fight against this source of infection. There may be disagreements as to the best ways and means, disagreement whether strict prohibition or education toward temperance is the more reliable method [why not both?] But there is no disagreement as to the fact that the saloon has to be wiped out, and the day seems near indeed when—thanks to women—the fight against saloons will be taken up in almost every state.
