A VISIT TO THE COUNTRY.

BY E. F. F.

CHAP. I.—THE JOURNEY.

"What a treat!" exclaimed Eva Fancett one day, as her friend Reba proposed a visit to the country. The two girls lived in a large city, where everything was crowded, one house built close to another and the streets always crowded with people and vehicles, and they very seldom saw the trees and flowers that in springtime are so beautiful in the country. So it was no wonder that Eva uttered her joyful exclamation, and her eyes grew large with anticipation, for it was in reality a treat to her.

Can my readers imagine how anxious they were for the happy day to come? How the time did drag, and how terribly long the last day was, for they were to take the last train. But the longest day must have an end, and at last it was time to go.

They hurried to the station, for what a disappointment if they should miss the train. But alas! owing to some mistake, it did not leave for another hour. And what an hour it was, the girls thought it would never pass, and how they did watch the big clock until at last the conductor called out "All aboard for Hammonton!" They were soon seated in a comfortable place and speeding away toward their destination, which they reached in about an hour.

Bebe, whose grandparents live in Hammonton, was on the lookout for some one to meet them, and soon spied her cousin Lewis; so, after greeting him they were all seated in the wagon and soon on their way to the farm.

They passed through the town and turned down a country road. It had grown quite dark and cloudy, and we could not see very much; but what refreshing air! After a time it began to rain, and the outlook was indeed dreary; for the country seems very lonesome to a city girl, especially when it storms. But after riding a little while longer, they saw the cheering lights of the farmhouse in the distance, and their drooping spirits began to rise once more.

CHAP. II.—THE FARMHOUSE.

Of course, my readers are anxious to know all about the farmhouse; but first let me make you acquainted with its inmates.

There was grandmother Wescoat, a dear old soul with silvery hair and the sweetest face, who won the heart of Eva as soon as she saw her. Next came dear old grandfather, then aunt Stella, who was quite a jolly person, as we shall see later, and poor blind uncle Danny. Cousin Lewis we have already met.

After greetings were over, they were all seated at a well covered table; and the visitors certainly did justice to the luxurious meal set before them.

After supper, the girls, Aunt Stella, and Lewis paid a visit to a cousin of Reba's, who lived near by; but owing to their long journey the girls were very tired, so soon returned, and after bidding the folks good-night, were soon asleep, dreaming of the glorious time they expected to have on the morrow.

CHAP. III.—SUNDAY MORNING.

Bright and early the girls were up, but alas! the weather proved to be cloudy, and their prospects for a lovely day were not promising. But after grandmother Wescoat had read the customary chapter from the Bible, and prayer had been said, a tiny ray of sunshine came peeping through, kissing all the beautiful flowers and making the outside world beautiful once more.

After helping to clear the breakfast away, the girls went out into the garden to look around. How sweet and fresh everything was, and how trees and flowers sparkled with raindrops when the sun touched them. After aunt Stella had finished her duties in the house, she and Lewis joined the girls, and they all strolled down to the stream. How they enjoyed themselves, I'll tell you next week.

The Christian Churches at Constantinople, Turkey, and Yokohama, Japan, have long used the Logman & Martinez Paints for painting their churches. Liberal contributions of L. & M. Paint will be given for such purpose wherever a church is located.

F. M. Scofield, Harris Springs, S. C., writes, "I painted our old homestead with L. & M. twenty-six years ago. Not painted since; looks better than houses painted in the last four years." W. B. Barr, Charleston, W. Va., writes "Painted Frankenburg Block with L. & M. Shows better than any buildings here have ever done; stands out as though varnished, and actual cost of paint was less than $1.20 per gallon. Wears and covers like gold." These celebrated Paints are sold by E. McD. Little.

Our Experiment Station.

Work upon the Hammon "farm" has proceeded systematically, though quietly, with definite objects in view.
Two acres of ground, owned by Col.
B. W. Richards, were chosen by Prof.
Voorhees, one of them exceedingly sandy, located opposite the Lake school house. This was subdivided into ten plots, by survey, and is being worked for improvement of the soil. Each plot was planted with cow peas, the first fertilized with—

Carbonate of Lime.....100 pounds
Acid Phosphate.....50
Ground Bone.....50
Muriate of Potash.....10

The second plot has added to above formula, eight pounds nitrate of soda and sixteen pounds dried blood. Some have omitted the lime; others vary the formula. Everything is weighed and measured, and an accurate record made of everything done. When the crops ready for use as green manure, or for harvesting, the result will be noted for future use.

The other acre is of more promising soil, is divided into five plots, planted with corn, cow peas, soy beans, barley, millet, and mangels. These crops are to be followed by crimson clover, rye and sand vetch, red clover, wheat and rye. The whole plot was fertilized with—

Lime.....100 pounds
Acid Phosphate.....50
Ground Bone.....50
Muriate of Potash.....10
Dried Blood.....10

This was well barrowed in. Mangels, millet and corn were also sown. The nitrate of soda per plot, as top dressing.
The same care is given to this acre; the same record kept, and results will be reported at the proper time.

Some of our farmers are watching these experiments, and propose to profit by them. All should do so, as that is the sole object in view in expending State money in this way, and employing the best talent obtainable for combining chemicals and ascertaining best methods of treating different soils and growing various useful crops.

Prof. Voorhees has given the work much personal attention, and did many days' work with his own hands, particularly in "moulding" peas for two plots, the process for which we may describe later, after it has been proven desirable.

Sneak Thieves.

John Q. A. Greenwood left his house unlocked while at the station with berries, last Saturday. Some one called, during his absence, and helped himself to a pair of pantaloons and a variety of underclothing.

On Wednesday afternoon, between five and half-past six, while the family were temporarily absent, some one forced open a front window of Geo. F.
Nicholson's house, on Central Avenue.
It was a bold stroke, as the house is in plain view from the street, and teams are constantly passing at that time of day. We understand that nothing was stolen.

The men's meeting, last Sunday afternoon, was well attended, and all were decidedly well pleased with the address by Mr. W. T. Ellis. He is a clear and forcible speaker. Taking the recent disaster on East River for his text, he referred to the many acts of selfish cowardice which occurred among crow and passengers; also, the less numerous heroic deeds, and said: "No one becomes a hero or a coward all at once, in a sudden emergency. What he is has been, lacking only opportunity to display his weakness or his strength." From this he showed the importance of character building, and recommended the life of Christ as man's best example of moral strength. This music was an inspiration,—made voices, with cornet and clarinet. A male trio sang two pieces, and the meeting would gladly hear them again.

WHEN THE CLOCK TICKS LOUD.

There are times when life is something more than meat and drink and sleep; when the sun rises, when the stars are in the sky, when the clock ticks loud. When the clock ticks loud, the world is in a hurry, and you are in a hurry. When the clock ticks loud, the world is in a hurry, and you are in a hurry. When the clock ticks loud, the world is in a hurry, and you are in a hurry.

When the clock ticks loud, the world is in a hurry, and you are in a hurry. When the clock ticks loud, the world is in a hurry, and you are in a hurry. When the clock ticks loud, the world is in a hurry, and you are in a hurry.

Not a word to break the stillness, yet there's music in the air—music born of silent silence, music sweet and low and rare. For the one who sits beside you in your sweetest hour, and you know that she loves you, for the one who sits beside you in your sweetest hour, and you know that she loves you.

A Converted Clergyman

THE Reverend Boswell Holland sat alone in his study. The room was dimly lit, and the only light came from a small lamp on a table. He was looking at a book, but his mind was elsewhere. He was thinking of the day when he had been converted, and how much he had learned since then. He was a man of many talents, and he had achieved much in his career. But he was also a man of many doubts, and he was often troubled by the questions of life and death.

"But I could not come to-day, you know," said the lady, deprecatingly. "It's raining day." "What if it is? You do not wash, I presume?" "No, dear, not exactly; but Katie does." "That you are not Katie?" "I beg your pardon, but I am on washing and ironing days." "What do you mean?" "Only, of course, that when Katie is washing, I have her daily work to do. I do not see what great amount of work there can be to do in such a family as ours."

"Work," said the parson, freely. "One would think to hear you talk of your work, that we lived in a palace and entertained company every day of our lives." "I am very thankful that it is not so," laughed the sweet-tempered little woman. "I am not a princess, and I am not a queen. I am only a woman, and I am only a wife."

Fire In

MORRIS, I know better, and I know that I am a man of many talents, and I have achieved much in my career. But I am also a man of many doubts, and I am often troubled by the questions of life and death. I am a man of many talents, and I have achieved much in my career. over efficiency, quietly took them out of his hands, and returned them to their rightful owner. And all this was done so sweetly by the amiable lawyer that neither party could gain any ground. The lawyer, however, was not a man of many talents, and he was often troubled by the questions of life and death.

"And this was but a sample of their daily lives," said the parson. "Mrs. Holland, Lucy's mother, was a widow of some property. After the marriage of all her children she had broken up housekeeping, and had been making a long visit to each of her married sons, and now she wrote to say it was agreeable to Mr. and Mrs. Holland, she would come and make them a visit of a few weeks."

"Of course, Lucy, who was a very good child, and a daughter, was delighted. She came, all tears and smiles and blushes, to show the welcome letter to her husband. Of course he was not quite so much interested in the letter as she was. He was more interested in the fact that she was coming, and he was more interested in the fact that she was coming."

"Work," said the parson, freely. "One would think to hear you talk of your work, that we lived in a palace and entertained company every day of our lives." "I am very thankful that it is not so," laughed the sweet-tempered little woman. "I am not a princess, and I am not a queen. I am only a woman, and I am only a wife."

"What have you got there, Lucy?" said the parson, looking at the book. "It's a book about the life of Jesus Christ. I am reading it, and I am very interested in it. I am reading it, and I am very interested in it. I am reading it, and I am very interested in it."

"Oh, I am going out to dine with the Allenes," said the lady. "I am going out to dine with the Allenes. I am going out to dine with the Allenes. I am going out to dine with the Allenes. I am going out to dine with the Allenes."

"No, I did not think of it; and I do not suppose it makes much difference to you," said the parson. "I thought it would be a good day for you to go over to see that old dear Mrs. Otis. I hear she tells everybody she does not know her minister by sight."

"Well, she won't acquire that knowledge to-day, any way. Mary Ellen promised to call for me at the Allenes, and take me for a drive in her pony carriage down to the lower mills at the Allenes, and that is much pleasanter."

In Chancery of New Jersey.

Between
Arthur Elliott
Petitioner,
and
Anna E. Elliott,
Defendant.
On Petition for Divorce

The Petitioner having filed his petition in the above stated cause and process of citation having been issued and returned according to law; and it appearing by affidavit that the defendant Anna E. Elliott resides out of the State of New Jersey, and that process could not be served upon her; it is on this thirty-first day of May one thousand nine hundred and four, on motion of A. J. King, of Counsel with petitioner, ordered, that the said absent defendant do appear and answer the petitioner's petition on or before the first day of August next, or that in default thereof such decree be made against her as the Chancellor shall think equitable and just.

And it is further ordered that the notice of this order, prescribed by law and the rules of this Court, shall, within twenty days hereafter be served, personally, on the said absent defendant, by a delivery of a copy thereof to her, or be published within the said twenty days in the "South Jersey Republican," a newspaper printed at Hammonton, in this State, and continued therein for four weeks; and in case of such publication, that a copy thereof be also mailed within the same time to the said absent defendant, directed to her post-office address, if the same can be ascertained, in the manner prescribed by law and the rules of this Court.
W. J. MAGIE, Chancellor.

In CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

NOTICE:
To Anna E. Elliott:
By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the data hereof, wherein Arthur Elliott is petitioner and you are defendant, you are required to appear and answer the petitioner's petition on or before the first day of August next, or in default, such decree will be taken against you as the Chancellor shall think equitable and just. The said petition is filed against you for a divorce from the bonds of Matrimony.
Dated May 31st, 1904.
