Unpatriotic, un-American.

One act of our Town Council, at their last meeting, seems to be generally regretted and disapproved. They undid the work of the former Council, by repealing the ordinance forbidding idolatrous and sectarian parades on our public streets. This last action is a step backward. The spectacle that was presented last 16th of July on our public streets, when images of so-called saints were carried in procession, receiving the reverence of a crowd of superstitious people, is a sight for a heathen community, but out of place in an enlightened one.

In authorizing such an unseemly exhibition, the Council, besides showing an utter disregard for the action of the preceding Council, officially sanctions an idolatrous and superstitious exhibition of which the more intelligent members of the Roman Catholic Church are themselves ashamed and disapprove. More than that, it is giving up the public streets to the advertising of a purely sectarian matter and forcing on the attention of the public an exhibition that is offensive to the majority. Such a procedure is un-American and unpatriotic. There is no comparison to be drawn between this sectarian exhibition and the displays of a patriotic nature sometimes seen in our streets. All are interested in these latter, as citizens, and there is nothing unseemly or un-American about them. But the public street is the last place to be handed over for an exhibition of anything that savors of pure sectarianism; especially when it has the additional objections of the matter under discussion.

It is a satisfaction to hear that two councilmen—Adams and Patten—opposed the action. We hope the other members will realize that the action taken does not meet with general approval. HERBERT R. RUNDALL.

Antonio Lisi and Carmine Tomasco, imported berry pickers, were gathering huckleberries on Thursday, near Iron Mills, five miles from here. They were on the Rider cranberry bogs about noon, when Samuel Craig, who has charge of the place, came out and ordered them off. Owners of cranberry meadows are constantly complaining of damage by this tramping over berry laden vines, and have "No Trespass" notices posted. But these men refused to leave, and when Sam insisted, one of them drew a knife, which was knocked out of his hand by a clever blow. Then came a scuffle, and Craig brought out a double-barreled gun and gave each intruder a dose of small bird-shot. This is Craig's account of the affair. Of course he was arrested, and gave Justice Atkinson satisfactory security for his appearance at court, as did all the witnesses. Dr. Cunningham dug something less than a pound of shot out of the men, who do not seem much worse for their popping.

The law requires that, to enact an ordinance our Town Council must, after its introduction, lay it over for one month, when it may be definitely acted upon. This is evidently intended to give people an opportunity to know what has been proposed, and to act for or against it before it becomes a law. We believe the same rule applies to the repeal of an ordinance; and hence Section three of the parade ordinance has not been repealed. If the rule does not work both ways, it would be in the power of Council to repeal anything even our anti-license ordinance, and to grant a half-dozen licenses to sell rum before the people had an opportunity to express their wishes.

Cases of whooping cough are reported in town.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve

Mrs. David Vincent died on Tuesday, June 30, at her residence, on Vine Street, aged about 52 years, after prolonged illness. Funeral services yesterday afternoon, conducted by Rev. J. C. Killian.

Thursday, Pasquale Palombo and Henry Moline, driving in opposite directions, came in collision. Words followed the crash, and blows succeeded words; then each swore out a warrant for the other's arrest, and Squire Atkinson put both under bonds to behave.

Friday morning, Louis Emper was driving down Bellevue in Black's delivery wagon, when the horse fell. Louis took a "header" from the seat, striking on his head on the horse, and turned a somersault to the ground, uninjured.

Frank Hines and family are visiting with Mrs. H.'s parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smith. Mr. Hines' home is just across the river from the scene of the recent mine disaster at Pittston, Pa., and his house was shaken by the cave-in.

D. M. Leopold, lately in the ticket office at Chestnut Street wharf, Philada., has succeeded J. L. O'Donnell at the Reading-Hammonton station. Mr. O'D. has been tendered another position; but all Hammonton regret his retirement from the station office.

Some folks are anxious to know where we procured those McKinley buttons. We can easily satisfy their curiosity. We sent to the factory for them, and paid cash for all we received. No; they did not come from anybody's campaign fund.

At the M. E. Church to-morrow. Communion at 10:30 a.m. Evening, Patriotic service, topic, "Citizenship and discipleship in the Kingdom of Heaven." Music appropriate. During July and August, the Epworth League early meeting will be merged into the public service.

Don't stand your bicycle against the inside of a hitching post. Some man may tie his horse there, and while endeavoring to free himself from flies, the equine may ruin a dozen spokes or spoil a wheel with his foot. A shade tree will hold the "bi" just as well, and run less risk.

Our McKinley and Hobart buttons have proved popular, and are worn by some who voted against the last Republican candidates for the Presidency. We have more of them on hand, but will hereafter give them only to subscribers on our list. Others will have to pay a nickel for one.

Tickets are out for an entertainment to be given on Tuesday evening next, July 7th, in Union Hall, by Miss Williamson and her classes in physical culture. Admission, 25 cents; children under twelve, 15 cents. This is something new here, and ought to be interesting. Go and see.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
Wm. McKinley.

For Vice-President,
Garret A. Hobart.

On the 26th of June the women of Canton, the home of Hon. Wm. McKinley, paid their respects to the nominee for President, to his wife, and his mother, during which a Mrs. Jones addressed the women and Major McKinley in the following pathetic and we believe prophetic words:

Sixteen years ago, on the Sunday following his nomination, James A. Garfield walked into the old home church, hearing on his arm his aged mother, and on his left, Sabbath morning into the church of his early faith walked our future President, and with him walked his mother. With home anchorage such as this, we women have no fears that under the coming Administration there will be any dimming or counting rooms be closed. Our men may deal with questions of tariff and finance and political policy; we women believe that the importance of pure living is higher than all and are satisfied that should you be called to preside over the destinies of the Nation, we shall have a man at the head with a character so pure and a record so unimpaired that any mother here to-day would feel proud to know that the steps of her little boy might be in the line parallel with this.

In the evening of the same day, a delegation from Newark came to pay their respects and in reply to remarks made to him, by way of introduction, Major McKinley said many good things; but none better or more right to the point than those in the following paragraph. It shows where this man stands in patriotism, in the principles of his party, and on the platform on which he was nominated.

"No man anywhere throughout the country doubts where the Republican party stands to-day. It stands for a reunited country; it stands for the American factory; the American farm; the American inside; for American labor, and American wages, and American property throughout every part of our much beloved land. It stands for a protective tariff that protects every American interest (loud applause); it stands for a reciprocity that reciprocates—that gets something for what we give from the nations of the world; it stands for the reciprocity of Blaine and of Harrison, and of the great Republican party (loud applause); and it stands now, as it has always stood, for sound money (vociferous cheering), with which to measure the exchanges of the people—a dollar that is only good at home but good in every market place in the world (cries of "Bravo!"); and with these principles emblazoned on our banner this year, 1896, we appeal to the deliberate judgment of the American people, and as Lincoln used to say, "There is no safer tribunal in the world than the American people, and to that tribunal we commit and submit our aims and purposes this year."

In announcing the physical culture entertainment for next Tuesday evening, it is but fair to add that in so short a course, only a vision of the work for a whole school year can be given. The thorough study of the body by the aid of the finest books on the subject is of necessity omitted, but exercises have been selected for the evening that bring into use every muscle of the body. While some of the exercises represent work for the development of muscle only, others are selected for mind drills, and still others for grace alone. The recent increase of the work in schools proves the unexcelled method of quickening and making more accurate the mental action. However true these facts may be, the results are nevertheless lost to all who have not the will power to continue the work individually. "Labor conquers all things."

The Higher Power, to which mankind is too unwilling to submit, called for Elwood, N. J., on Saturday, June 27th, one of the oldest residents, Miss Abbie M. Plow, in the 63rd year of her age. The family moved from New York State to Elwood in 1807, of a large family, only two survive her. Her integrity and consistent Christian character endeared her to all who knew her. She had many friends in Hammononton. The funeral, on Tuesday, was very largely attended.

The School Board having rented the little building near the school house for the Kindergarten, Mr. Andrews is having it put in prime shape for the little folks. Between standing bricks are laid, the walls and ceiling plastered.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Regular meeting of Town Council last Saturday evening, June 27th. Members all present except Mr. King who was sick.

Messrs. Spigard, D. D. Foo and D. Campanella, a committee from St. Joseph's Church, were present and asked permission to parade on the feast day of "Our Lady of Mount Carmel," July 16th. This called up the ordinance in regard to parades (published in another column), which was read and commended upon by members. Mr. Anderson moved that Sec. 3 be repealed; this was seconded by Mr. Ballard. Roll called resulted as follows: Yens, Anderson and Ballard; says, Adams and Patten. Chairman Cunningham voted in favor, and declared the section repealed.

Mr. Anderson moved that the Society be allowed to parade. Carried, two votes in favor, one against.

D. Colwell asked that Railroad Ave. be graveled to Fairview. P. H. Brown made a similar request for a portion of Second Road. Both referred to the committee.

Attention was called to Egg Harbor Road, above Thirtieth Street, and the Overseer was instructed to make needed improvements, to cost not over $200. The Park question was introduced, and the lease read. After discussion, Mr. Anderson moved that the Town Clerk be directed to notify Mr. Fowler that Council desire to terminate the lease on Sept. 1st. Carried.

The subject of numbering houses was introduced and discussed. Resolutions were adopted, approving the project, and recommending that all property owners have the work done. For convenience, the town was divided east and west from Bellevue Ave., north and south on the C. & A. Railroad.

Adjourned.

Your Boy won't Live a Month. So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill St., South Garden, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had lung trouble, following typhoid malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying, "Your boy won't live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles cured him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in the world for lung trouble. Trial bottles free at Croft's Pharmacy.

A MONTH'S OUTING.

At this season of the year many go to watering places, or to the quiet country, where it is cool and refreshing. The C. E. Society of the Baptist Church have decided to spend the month of July in a quiet "ramble over the C. E. farm."

In order that more may be known about this valuable farm, so that its owners may appreciate it more, and with the hope that others may wish to own or become partners in this farm, (which, by the way, pays a large dividend), Pastor Killian, on each Sunday evening will speak about the farm,—the topic for to-morrow evening (July 5) will be "The Farm and the Farmer."

The meetings will begin at 7:30. Singing and the devotional services will be under the direction of the Society, and the house will be appropriately decorated. Each member will have his or her part to make these meetings a success, with the prayer that they may be a spiritual stimulus. We extend an invitation to all interested. PRESS COMMITTEE.

The REPUBLICAN office is a busy place every forenoon, while we are editing the Union's Daily Bulletin, the Association's Berry Dispatches, and Italian Colony Dispatches. Then come the fifteen messenger boys who bring the forty or more telegrams and carry the publications all over this section, to hundreds of berry growers who are waiting to know the best markets for to-day's picking. It's a hustle-bustle, but business.

Mr. George Steelman has concluded that a tailoring establishment will not pay in this community. Ready made and home made clothing seem to be preferred. For this reason he has closed his establishment, under the REPUBLICAN office; but he can be found at his residence, on Bellevue Ave., and will attend to any work—new or repair—that may be wanted. He is a skillful workman, and ought to be patronized.

We add, this week, two new confections,—Cracker Jack and Golden Molasses Candy. They both sell at 5 cents per pkg. Cracker Jack is pop corn prepared as you would for making molasses corn balls. The Golden Molasses Candy does not get sticky, so you cannot complain about its sticking to your teeth.

My life began on my father's large

We wrote so often that she grew constantly more and more attached to me. I went to her while I was away, and when I went home at my vacation I found her more and more grown more lovely, but I was conscious of a change in her moral. In her letters she would recall, in effusions, and bring up old associations, but when in actual presence she would avoid all renewal of them. If I wanted to walk, she was sure to be in an indolent mood; if I proposed a private and confidential conversation, there was sure to be an interesting passage in some book which I must read to her. She was ever ready with an excuse, some device to prevent a renewal of our old familiar intercourse. Her manner puzzled,

"I was provoked, and said, almost angrily, "Lily you are capricious, and I almost believe cold hearted: I never did see anybody so changed."

While still a child, I heard her describe how she loved me only as a brother, had abandoned her wishes, and wished to marry a long time ago. I started out with a heavy heart, but that memorable day when I wrote to her, but I never received an answer. I wandered about a lot over Europe mingling in society, but never forgetting the face around which all my hopes had clustered since that memorable day when I left home for school. After two years' absence I returned home. My welcome from my parents was warm, but I felt acted with that reserved reserve which had no puzzle in it.

I was thunderstruck. I felt as if I were crushed by a mountain, welch. Resisting to my room, I threw myself upon the bed and gave way to my grief. I lay there for some time, and seemed to be washed by one stroke. I felt a long time I lay tossing and groaning and lamenting that I was ever so weak and feeble. I was so weak, therefore, exhausted by my over wrought feelings, I fell into a strange slumber, so deep that I was "unconscious of the objects around me." I had my eyes closed, but I felt the presence of the great God above me. It seemed as if even my heart stood still. So horrible were my sensations that I longed to rouse myself, but I was unable to stir so I lay until, in order to grow lighter around me, I opened my eyes. I saw the light, and then I saw the room. I heard him (my aunt), and I felt as if I were being crushed and not elcely for fear of disturbing my slumber. I heard him fully against the tightly-strung chord descending through my whole frame and in its descent touching each nerve, ending through me a thrill of the intensest anguish, the most exquisite suffering; but there was the same awful stillness reigning within. They gathered around my bed

— my father, my mother, the serr-ants, all— I heard the deep sobs. I heard the grief too deep for tears—so mudden, so glacial in health, and now dead! I shuddered at the word; but many hours beside me, muttering over the death of his brightest hopes. At length I felt it grow darker—I knew that the sun was going down. I passed another long night, darkness around and within me. I remembered that I was trying to pray for the sinners and the apostate, when I felt as if I were lifted from my woe, and when I heard the broken-hearted wail which had so chained my attention the morning. My feelings trembled in pleasure—it was Lily! She had come alone, and such a sound could only come from a loving, breaking heart.

I felt the slight pressure of her hand. The deep sob went to my heart. I turned and looked at her. I said to my breast; but my arms were stiff and cold, and refused their aid. I said to my eyes; but my eyes were blind. And you, my child, you who came to torment me with vain hopes, why withdraw my arms from me, why, and I made no effort to break away from the grasp of Heaven; but my thoughts would not soar above the breaking heart. Would me! I wanted to comfort her—her heart, her soul, her life. I wanted for consolation—I wanted to tell her how, in my hour of darkness, I had been in the night. In writing to you, I had been in the same hour, I could not. At just the door opened and I felt the lights from a far land. I heard my mother's voice I said:

"You here, my child?" and I knew that her arm was around the neck of her mother, and my heart beat the exclamation.

collected. I have an indistinct recollection of shrieks, and the dragging of many voices, and I sank to a state of insensibility. When I awoke I was in my own room, and the pale, anxious faces of my mother, and my sister, and my little brother were bending over me. They were bending over me for some time. They looked weary and sad, and I knew what their life had suffered. Those weeks, I spent in bed, and were the happiest of my life. I was at last able to sit up, and day after day was my sister's sweet face before my eyes. Oh, so well do I remember one day, when left alone with my mother, I called the blush to her cheek, and an allusion to the scene in that room; and asked her if she truly indeed had my Nelly. There

A curious pneumatic bull tire for bicycles has been patented in England, substituting for the continuous tubular a series of rubber balls, set in cups the outer end of the spokes; the balls are so arranged that they may be successively inflated. Several advantages are claimed for this device, one of them being that no serious inconvenience will follow the puncturing of one or two of the balls. It is also claimed that there is a great saving of weight, and that it will increase the ease and speed of propulsion.

attempts have been made for several years to create a Rotten Row for Washington, and for one or two seasons there was a satisfactory carriage drive to be witnessed on certain lawns in the park south of the White House. When entertainments were few the fag would know where to drive to and be seen by all whom they knew, and visitors who were interested in seeing Washington on wheels, and seeking for national celebrities in the parade of the season. It has been the frequent complaint of visitors, says a writer in Argonaut, that there was no promenade where everyone

No More Singing.

Twenty years ago in Italy melody to be heard all over the country. The laborer going home to bed through the moonlit fields sang his stornello or his risorta to the sleeping fields. The boy drove his yoked oxen or cows in a square cart beguiled the way with song, joyous or amorous. The girl and the mandolin were heard at every farm house door, and the streets of the town youths went singing and playing till the moon was high. There was music all over the land, in the hedgerows as in the city, under the poplars and mulberry trees.

BASE BALL.

HAMMONTON VS. WEST PHILADELPHIA

The Hammonton players had another "off day," and were defeated last Saturday by the West Philadelphias with a score of 4 to 8.

The strong point with the visitors was the playing of their infielders. Their pitcher was very good, but Hatcher was better. The latter gave the best exhibition of pitching witnessed in Hammonton this season at least. In the first inning he gave three bases on balls, but then realizing that he would have to play the game almost unaided, he settled down, giving no more bases, striking out seventeen and holding the visitors down to six hits. As an example of his work, we take the fourth inning, in which he struck out both Downey and Sharp in succession by pitching but seven balls; five more, and Tracy would have been added to the unfortunate had the catcher held the ball or sent it to first in good shape.
