SAVING THE LOST.

As the beautiful powers of spring unfold, more and more to the light and glory of the sun, so these impressive gospel lessons of the Trinity season show growth upon us week by week, developing in our practical Christian life; link upon link forming the great chain that binds us to the eternal certainties, the sure hope of heaven.

The Saviour.

Let us stand still in this gallery of art and view the three master paintings before us. The Good Shepherd in the midst of His lost sheep. The Good Shepherd stands through by a motley crowd, the publicans and sinners are drawing near eager to drink in His words of compassion and love. The Good Shepherd stands by a motley crowd, the publicans and sinners are drawing near eager to drink in His words of compassion and love.

How often the question arises in our hearts, why do not the publicans and sinners draw near to us in the days of old, to hear the messages of divine love and forgiveness? Why is it that our churches are not thronged to-day with these precious but lost souls for whom the Saviour died? Why? May not the answer be found in the fact that we fail to do what the Saviour did? We fail to receive sinners and eat with them.

He went out into the streets and lanes of the city, seeking the lost; do we? We preach from the synagogues and the highways, by the seashore, and lost no opportunity to tell the wonderful story of God's love; do we?

Is it not a fact that most pastors to-day are kept so busy looking after the spiritual welfare of their own flock, to feed it and care for it, that they do not find time to reach out after the publicans and sinners about them, after the boys and girls, the young men and the young women who are beginning to stray from the fold? Let us examine ourselves and see—perchance the trouble is that we are taking the place of the publicans and sinners, ready to complain when the lost are found, when the publicans and sinners are finally received and fed.

A beautiful sight greeted the writer's eye one bleak Sunday afternoon in Pittsburgh. More than one hundred poor men, many of whom had been on their knees for many months, were gathered together in the basement room of one of the city's largest churches. Here they sang hymns and listened to fervent prayers and an earnest sermon, while their shivering bodies were warmed and their hearts were cheered by the words of the Holy Spirit.

Who can say that the spiritual coldness was not also driven out from some soul and into the street, that the better things at least partly satisfied?

His Methods. The second picture is that ever beautiful one of the shepherd seeking the lost, finding, bringing home his lost sheep. The third, that of the housewife, patiently and diligently seeking the lost piece of silver. Both of these pictures are intended to teach the Saviour's methods, then the glorious results. Surely we cannot expect the results unless we pursue the methods.

Those who know the shepherd-life know that when a sheep is lost the shepherd takes his staff in hand and goes out to find the lost sheep. He does not wait for the lost sheep to find its way back to the fold again. It is not alone the value of the single sheep, but the loss of the whole flock that drives him forth over the hillside and through the valleys, seeking the lost one. Again and again his voice rings out, as he calls the lost one, he stops and listens for the answering cry, until at last he hears it, faint and far away. How his heart beats faster for joy as he harkens up the rocks and through the branches until he finds it! How radiant is this picture overcast! Behind the sheepfold, the shepherd stands in the arms of his flock, the lost sheep is home, and the shepherd is satisfied.

How anxious even the writer of this soul-saving war, as the Saviour, the joy of the one who sought and found the lost sheep, the joy of the one who sought and found the lost sheep, the joy of the one who sought and found the lost sheep.

MALICIOUS UNBELIEF.

Text: 20-25.

GOLDEN TEXT.—This is the condemnation that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil—John 3: 19.

Mark's Gospel differs in character from those of Matthew and Luke in that it is a series of pen pictures rather than a connected narrative. Mark seems to have been vividly impressed with the pressure under which Jesus worked. Butheos ("strong") is a favorite expression of his to form a connecting link between one story and the next. In this lesson Mark tells us that Jesus and His disciples could not even get time to eat, because the multitudes followed Him even into the house.

"When His friends heard it," The Greek expression is in the plural, those near to Him, which is correctly translated "His friends," but might with equal correctness be translated, "His relations," and in this case it evidently does mean His relations, and not merely some unidentified friends or well-wishers; for we find in the 31st verse that it was "His mother and His brethren," who came after Him.

It gives us a view of the mother of Jesus very different from that which is commonly entertained to learn that she, too, thought He was out of his mind, and to save Him from Himself by taking Him home.

We learn from John 1: 3-10 that the brethren of Jesus did not believe in Him, and that is not surprising. It must have been especially difficult for them to accept the idea that the man who had grown up with them among the stunts of their native Galilee and streets, or even among the wicked "well-to-do's," or the home mission work of following our scattering sheep, should be the Son of God, and that He would be different from all other men. And she certainly had believed in Him and had expected Him to work miracles. Her place of disbelief was not a new one, for at the wedding feast in Cana (John 2: 1-11) she proved this. But at the time of the incident here related her faith seems to have been shaken.

As truly as the angels could find out sheep and the woman her lost piece of money, so truly shall we find and bring to the light some poor souls who are groping in the darkness of unbelief, and who are waiting for the Master, and if in His name we cast our nets on the right side of the sheep.

What then is the real first of this soul-saving war? First, the joy of the Good Shepherd and of the Holy Spirit, the joy of the one who sought and found the lost sheep, the joy of the one who sought and found the lost sheep, the joy of the one who sought and found the lost sheep.

Text: 12-14.

"Take thought for things honorable in the sight of all men." Have you ever noticed the form of this injunction? Paul does not say simply, "Be honorable." Many teachers have said that, but Paul says a great deal more. He says, "Be honorable in the sight of all men." It is honorable to be honest, but it is honorable to be honest in the sight of all men. It is honorable to be honest in the sight of all men.

"Whoever shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit shall never be forgiven." This is the blasphemy against the Holy Spirit? This question is constantly being asked, but no one is in a position to give an exact definition of it. The explanation given by Mark is that Jesus said this as a warning to the Jews who had accused Him of working by the power of the Devil when in fact He was actually working by the power of the Holy Spirit. He was saying this to the Jews who were slandering Him by saying that He was working in and through Him. Yet Jesus did not say that these Jews were guilty of blasphemy against the Holy Spirit. He rather warned them that they were in danger of committing that sin.

Taking the teaching of the Bible as a whole—and that is the only way to get an intelligent view of any difficult question—it is safe to say that any sin, no matter how great it is, will be forgiven if the man repents and is truly repentant of it and humbly seeks forgiveness in Christ's name. But it is possible to sin in such a way that the heart is hardened and the man is probably incapable of genuine repentance. It was this sort of sin, evidently, of which Jesus spoke; for He explained that the reason why the Jews did not believe in Him was that they could not be forgiven, because He was "guilty of an eternal sin." The sin is self-perpetuating. The man who commits it becomes identified with it, and cannot even desire to be freed from it. An eternal sin necessarily shuts out the sinner eternally from the presence of God. It is a sin which is different from all other sins, and one who has once committed it cannot be forgiven.

An old proverb assures us that "honesty is the best policy," and that honesty as a policy is not worth much, because it is liable to be discredited by experience and to be laid aside. As truly as the angels could find out sheep and the woman her lost piece of money, so truly shall we find and bring to the light some poor souls who are groping in the darkness of unbelief, and who are waiting for the Master, and if in His name we cast our nets on the right side of the sheep.

"Thought for the month—The making of a man." Seven centuries before the birth of Jesus, the world was a very different place. It was a world of darkness and sin, a world of poverty and suffering. It was a world in which the people were ruled by a few rich and powerful men, and the poor and weak were oppressed and exploited. It was a world in which the people were without hope and without faith, and in which the only light came from the sun and the moon.

But in the New Testament there is a statement which so absolutely identifies the Son with the Father, that we are left with no doubt as to the fact that Jesus was God. The statement is found in the Gospel of John, chapter 1, verse 1. It reads: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." This statement is one of the most important in the Bible, and it is one of the most difficult to understand. It is a statement which has caused much controversy and much discussion, and it is one of the most important in the Bible.

SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1912

Hammonton's Fourth.

Beginning as early as one o'clock Thursday morning, the small boy and his big brother made merry with racket producing explosives, and only ceased when, tired and ammunitionless, they tucked themselves away to bed, to the relief of other people.

The day was fine, clear, hot, dry, dusty. Refreshment stands, ice cream parlors, and soda fountains were rushed all day.

The occasion was marked by a few accidents, faces and fingers coming too close to fire-crackers.

At the Park, the County P. O. S. of A. had arranged a good day's programme, which was carried out, including an excellent address by National President Frederick A. Pope, of Somerville, N. J., and by the State President, Chas. L. Blackman, of Atlantic City. These were preceded by unfurling the great flag, which released many small ones, to the delight of the children.

The Band rendered excellent music, afternoon and evening, being the center of attraction. Much interest was excited by the races and the base-ball game. The fire-works were good, especially the bombs, air pieces which could be seen and heard all over town.

There were many out-of-town people present, relatives, friends and strangers, and all appeared to be having a good time, boating, swimming, and taking in the sports.

But, as usual, the cane-bomb fiend was everywhere present, to the dismay of nervous mothers and sleepy infants.

We do not believe that the time has arrived to adopt the commission form of government for Hammonton. Though it contains many most desirable provisions, this law leaves us still subject to our old Charter, which outlined its usefulness years ago. To-day, we refer to this ancient document, then inquire whether its provisions in certain cases have been repealed by later laws, and govern our action accordingly. The commission law would cause further complications. Let us first drop the old Charter, adopt the city law, then the commission, and it would be easy to locate ourselves when we desire to move forward.

Bellevue Avenue is certainly a beautiful street—with its well-kept roadway and its elegant sidewalks; and yet our Hammontonians are overlooking that little curb (or insertion) between walk and curb. Makes one think of a well-dressed man or woman with a torn shoe. Cut that little curb, Bellevue residents, and make our Avenue all that we want it to be. That grass on the outer edge is on your property, and needs trimming to be in harmony with your well-kept lawn.

Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey, was nominated for the Presidency by the Democratic convention at Baltimore, on Tuesday, Governor Marshall, of Indiana, will be his running mate. When the Progressive Republicans hold their convention, we will have plenty of timber from which to choose.

One of our business men wrote a letter, recently, and receiving no reply, made inquiry. The response was, "We couldn't read the signature, and didn't know who it was from." Moral, be careful that your supply of printed stationery is not exhausted. The "Republican" office is the place to order it.

Although Postmaster Elvius is not to blame, the department should not have cut down the number of employees in Hammonton Post Office just because the business has increased to the standard of a second class office. The patrons do not appreciate this reduction.

Don't stop your team in the center of Bellevue. The street is too congested for safe travel.

Going Away this Summer?

Then let the "Republican" follow you.

Another Word Regarding Sunday Chautauques

It is most unfortunate that any occasion has arisen to create any strain of sympathy or unhappy difference of opinion on a good issue between good people desirous of bringing a means of social culture to the community.

The letter signed by three of the local pastors, in protest of the Sunday opening of Chautauques, and afterward signed in copy by two others, was not presented to the local committee, to recognize the good people of our town, or to bring about any argument regarding the value of the movement itself, or to cause a financial loss to those worthy citizens who were backing the enterprise by holding blocks of tickets.

There is always danger that in the multiplicity of good things which claim public attention, and the many institutions presented for promotion, that the supreme mission of the Christian Church may become obscured. It is possible to become so carried away with some thing of real moral value, presented at its proper time and place, as to forget that all schemes for social, humanitarian, and philanthropic uplift, find their only source of power and life in the Christian Church. All other good institutions are its by-products, and should never attempt to thrust aside the prior claims of the Church upon the interests of the people.

The whole drift of materialistic forces is an effort to lower the standards of a Christian Sabbath, and to minimize the Church's influence for righteousness. Many members of Christian Churches, in attempting to be "liberal," virtually array themselves against the Church to which they have pledged their loyalty and devotion.

Those who stand squarely on moral issues, and have the discrimination to know a moral issue when they see one, usually speak with the minority, humanly speaking, and may expect to be styled narrow, bigoted, and lacking in public spirit.

Let me say, then, that whatever the character of the Sunday programme as presented by a commercialized institution, such as the Chautauque movement, it is a deliberate affront to Christian sentiment to hold sessions at the hour of regular Church services, and cannot possibly justify its position in presenting on the Sabbath a programme which is a regular part of a series of paid attractions.

Many of our Church people had to miss that part of the programme in their desire to be loyal to their Church and pastor; and it is a significant fact that many persons known to me, who are not members of our local Churches, have, with fairness and moral good sense, flatly condemned the Sunday opening, as being a great wrong to the "square" people of Chautauque managers to hold open on Sunday than to close the tent and lose the day. The talent was hired in advance to work on Sunday, and it was to the financial interest of the promoters to fill up the time, Sunday or no Sunday; and so material interests prevailed. There were no scruples at ignoring the request of the ministers, or of violating the Christian sentiment of many of our best people.

Mr. Wm. T. Ellis, in a personal letter to the writer, dated June 16th, said, in part: "I am glad you have written me about the situation in Hammonton. . . I personally, after having visited several of the towns in the Chautauque circuit, have a great deal of sympathy with the views of the Hammonton pastors. . . I expect to talk with Prof. Pearson to-morrow morning, and I shall use any influence I may have to secure the abandonment of any exercises at all in the Hammonton tent on Sunday." Unfortunately, Mr. Ellis' influence was ineffective.

If a resident of Hammonton a year from now, I shall be glad to do all in my power to promote interest in a return of some such movement, on condition that the Sunday programme be absolutely eliminated. H. P. HOSKISS, July 1st, 1912.

CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES

Laid right over old wood shingles. No dirt—no bother, and when once laid they make a thoroughly good and fire-proof roof, neither of which can be claimed for the wood shingle. As to price, they cost no more than a good wood shingle, and in some places they cost much less. Roofs put on 25 years ago are as good as new today, and have never needed repairs.

Your property depreciates in value unless protected by a quality paint. Such a paint has a hard, smooth surface, keeping out the moisture and is a perfect armor against Nature's assaults. It is elastic—expanding and contracting with heat and cold, thus avoiding cracking, peeling and scaling.
A good paint has beauty of color. It does not fade quickly.
It proves the poet's saying, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever."
Lucas Tinted Gloss Paint
ONCE USED ALWAYS PREFERRED
is an exponent of the "good paint" doctrine. Every known science plus 62 years manufacturing skill, gives you a paint that is absolutely right as a protector and a beautifier. The Lucas reputation for quality is back of every can.
