EMBALMER

BASE-BALL.

It was a busy time in base-ball circles about Hammonton, and for once lovers of the national game had enough--three exhibitions in two days.

On Saturday, the home team just escaped whitewash by careful work in ninth inning. Those who are posted in the business will know all about it when they read the score.

Shall I, by Life's close commonplaces hedged,
 Migrate the casual urban, or austere,
 Regard the wilds and wastes, and say, "I'm here,
 Scorned the song-bird's dust, the dicker lodged?
 Nay! Heart's ease, Fortune, I have never pledged.
 A hostage for thy favor all too dear.
 Ah, Heaven's light downbathed strangely near.
 When outward view hath long been casement-eged.
 Though grim mischance with evil hour conspire,
 The balanced soul they shall not overway,
 Nor drumbeats abash, nor fallure bare.
 They vex me not, the lamps of old desire,
 Unlighted in the bare room of to-day,
 Somewhere the morning waits! Meanwhile a star.

The Republican.

[Entered as second class matter.]
SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1904

Republican Nominations.
For President,
Theodore Roosevelt
of New York.
For Vice-President,
Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana.

The Republican party seeks the vote of the farmer because it has furnished him better markets and better prices for his products than ever before. The Democratic party never expects the farmer's vote except when he has been ravaged by drought and the clutch bug. The country is not yet ready to forget the four years of Cleveland disaster between 1893 and 1897.

THE FOURTH.

Monday was a delightful day, warm, not hot, a pleasant breeze stirring all the while, and clear, not a drop of rain to ruin the fine rain and patriotic decorations. It had been an uncommonly quiet night, no booming of cannon nor ringing of bells, and only faint echoes of the usual noisy patriotism. And the day, also, was remarkable for a comparatively quiet celebration, and we approached it.

'Twas nearly noon when the Red Men's big celebration began; but the whole town was in it before they got through. The parade went up and down the avenue, and was a success, if not as lengthy as could have been desired. It was this way:—

Chief Marshal Burgess, on a horse and under a white tent.
The Band.
Wicks & Nicholson's wagon, with a bower of beautiful plants and flowers, in which were seated two pretty little girls.
The chemical fire engine, drawn by horses.
The handsome horse wagon and team.
Skinner & Son's wagon, with decorations, and display of rich cut glass.

'Big fear' of the 'Devil'—Order Sons of America, with specimens of its membership.
Whitmore & Treat's animated advertisement—an outline of a boat with sails of netting, mounted on a barge.

Jackson & Son's invitation to patronize their market—a big four-sided banner, with blue and silver inside.

Red Men's float, containing tapes, young brave, and etc., followed by Indians in fancy garb and spiritous mood.

Then came 'gentlemen of color' (various colors, and robes from nowhere, 'come to rage, come to jay,' and some in clothes, all mounted on mules imported for the occasion from the Window Dressing Yard.

Two followed, while folks in wagons and carriages and on wheels.

We enjoyed that parade, and so did the rest of the spectators.

Things were not specially lively at the Park, though there were many there. Folks—evidently families and neighbors, came from all directions, brought or bought their dinners and hammocks, and spent the day, as happy as one could wish. Of course there were games, base-ball, etc.

In the evening, the whole town turned out. The entertainment was well patronized, and enjoyed.

Last of all came the fireworks, which were good, and lasted until the majority were willing to call it a full day, and go home. Of course there was a dance, and many took part in it, while others enjoyed the music.

Guests at Hotel Royal appeared to be having a royal time of their own. They were gathered in a far corner of the grounds when we passed, late in the afternoon, trying their skill at marksmanship. In the evening they had rockets, roman candles, and more noisy pyrotechnics.

There were other private celebrations, family gatherings, and neighborhood parties, about town.

Altogether, it seemed much like an old-time Fourth of July. There was no noticeable disorder anywhere, and not a case of injury requiring surgical aid has been reported.

May we all be here to enjoy the next national birthday.

That the cheapest things are not always the best, is probably what a tramp now in the Atlantic City hospital thinks, after getting pinched between car bumpers, at our station, while stealing a ride, with others, on Thursday's midnight freight. Dr. C. Cunningham could find no broken bones, but he was evidently injured internally. He gave his name as Harry Robinson, Chicago.

When you think of Watches, think of Steele's, the Watch House. It's a safe place to buy a good time-keeping Watch. In repairing watches, how well we can do our work is our first consideration.

IT IS, OF COURSE, worth something to you to know you can buy a suitable wedding gift as low as $1, and so on up. A more complete line you need not wish to see.

For Manicure, do not spend money for fancy handles. I have a reliable line of Scissors, Files, Corn Razors, Corn Files, Nail Clippers, etc.

Now is the time to enjoy picture taking. A full line of Cameras and Photo Supplies.

J. P. Callahan, late engineer at the Electric Light Company's plant, has gone to Somerset, Pa., and expects to continue farther west. His successor is Edw. Schlensky.

Miss Mary Tillery started last Saturday for a two months' trip. She will visit relatives in Ohio, go thence to Chicago for a while, and from there to the great St. Louis Exposition.

Several persons remarked, on the Fourth, that they had never seen the Lake so low. Its present condition is principally due to the scarcity of rainfall, as can be seen by its feeders.

BUILDING Lots for sale—Inquire of GOODWIN & CO.

We have it from one of the Water Commissioners, that their recent order does not refer to the sprinkling of streets to lay the dust. This will be allowed, in moderation, at any hour of the day.

Jos. S. Mart had one of his buses nicely renovated, a week or so ago; but Saturday night his driver made too short a turn, and a badly damaged vehicle and an injured horse resulted.

WANTED—Board in Hammonton for a young lady, State teacher. J. E. FRENCH, Atlantic City.

It seems peculiar that mail matter addressed to a post-office only two miles distant should be compelled to travel fifty-eight miles to reach its destination, and require three days for the journey.

Miss Linda Gamson called on Thursday afternoon. She is spending two months here, her old home, the guest of Mrs. Frank Ransom. This is her first visit for six years, her home being in Colorado.

PLAIN HEWING done at my home. 116 Horton St., Hammonton.

Major McCauley, who with his family have been frequent visitors in Hammonton, bought the Dr. Edward North homestead, last Saturday, at the Master's Sale. He also bought from H. J. Byrne the house and lot adjoining, on the corner of Washington Street. Considerable improvement to the property may be expected before October 1, when the new owner will move in.

Three more tough characters were taken in, Wednesday night, and committed to county jail for thirty days. They were begging food and money, and when questioned did not care to give an account of themselves.

The following auto parties, all friends of Dr. and Mrs. Waas, called during the past week: Dr. Wood and wife and Dr. Dawson and wife, from Camden; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. S. King and son Arthur, and Miss Maloney, of Philadelphia.

There will be trouble for some one, supposedly boys, if they persist in dancing boats on the Lake. This week brought more complaints of malicious mischief. Remember, one man had to pay five dollars for his boy's fun among the boats.

Everything seemed to be drying up; but Tuesday night's rain was supplemented by a light shower on Wednesday night, and a more copious gift on Thursday night. They say it came too late to save raspberries, but there are other crops.

POCONO'S GERMAN SYRUP. We can not understand why any person suffering with cold or cough and sore throat will neglect to purchase a bottle of German Syrup. It is a simple case of safety. There are thousands of consumptive right here in New Jersey that give Borden's German Syrup the sole credit of their being alive to-day. Ask W. J. Lenz. Price 2 and 75 cents.

Not a little interest has been excited by the rapidly with which the gutter pavers are doing the work. On Thursday evening, they had completed the paving to Second Street, and were partially ready for the grouting up to Horton Street.

One of the finest sail-boats built in Hammonton will be launched early next week. It is the Lake. It was designed by W. H. King, and constructed by Messrs. Lob and Klue; in the rear of the drug store. It has all recent improvements, including a collapsible centre-board.

Mr. and Mrs. John McCoy, of Burlington, N. J., celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Saturday last. They were married and lived in Hammonton, but moved away about forty years ago. Among the one hundred and fifty guests were Mrs. A. G. Niepling and Miss Estella Wescoat.

There was another attempted robbery this week. About one o'clock, Wednesday, Marshall Myers was notified that the house of W. Peterson, at DeCosta, was being robbed. One man was ransacking the house, and another stood guard outside, while the family were picking huckleberries in the woods. When Myers got there the men had fled. Nothing was stolen, although $40 in gold and $10 in paper were in plain sight. Two young fellows were picked up this side of Egg Harbor, but allowed to go as their stories seemed straight. It was a blind hunt, as the descriptions varied; but the men were located in Atlantic City, and a warrant sworn out and sent down yesterday morning.

NEW WAY TO TELL TIME.

Time Clock Will Show the Exact Hour and Minute in Figures.

With all the modern products of the twentieth century, clockmakers have not longer a luxury, it seems somewhat surprising, as well as audacious, for any one to declare that he will revolutionize all systems of recording the hours, minutes and seconds as they go flying past.

Let a man from Connecticut, the home of the clockmaker and the land of clocks, has the precocity to make such an announcement. He is not a clockmaker, but just a plain Yankee genius.

Samuel Powers Thrasher, of New Haven, Conn., has an invention that bids fair to make Yankee clockmakers green with envy.

CLOCK SHOWS TIME IN FIGURES.

In fact, Mr. Thrasher proposes to tell time in figures the same as we read on the time tables of over-road in the country. No longer will we have to wait for the hands of a clock to point to the hour or "half-past 2," but as we look at his invention he proposes and insists that we must say 2:45 or 2:30. In the twentieth century haste and bustle this proposal seems likely to meet with more than mere approval. Mr. Thrasher proposes to reconstruct the familiar face with which Father Time has been wont to remind us of the passing hours and to do away entirely with the quaint old dial with its Roman numerals in use from the middle ages, and likewise take away the old clock's hands. Instead of pointing the way and telling us figure out the time for ourselves, Mr. Thrasher's new time-piece will tell us in plain figures at a glance just what time it is. It will be no more trouble to tell the hour, the minute and the second than to read the A. B. C.'s or see at a glance in the time tables the hour and the minute. Any one with eyes and the ability to use them can tell time, and a mere comparison with a time table and the knowledge of figures and the ability to read them will be the only essential to know the precise moment when a train is supposed to arrive or depart on any event.

Three sets of figures, one each for the hours, the tens and the units of minutes, revolving on separate rolls with measured accuracy and appearing in a given space at the proper time, give us the hours and minutes on this wonderful new clock. A pointer constantly traveling in a half-grooved circle tells the exact seconds. The pointer and the rolls interlock and the whole is impelled by a device which is simpler than the simplest clock mechanism ever made, which seems impossible to get out of order and never needs winding.

"Old Prob." The Weather Prophet writes, and having writ, Denies that rain among his clouds doth sit; Nor all the cold Sursum of the Press Can hinder him from thinking he is it.

And that inverted Bowl we call the Sky— Regales from Day to Day with varlel Lie.

Myself, when young, did eagerly peruse The "Indications" in the daily news; For Pleasure and for Baile, but ever-more—

What'er they promised I did surely lose. I sometimes think that never glows so red—

The Dew, as when the Weather Man has said: "To-morrow, Cloudy, Heavy Winds, and Showers."

And that comes out right dazlingly in stead.

Ah, Laval couldst thou and I somehow conspire To grasp this Weather Bureau Scheme entire—

Would we not quickly get to the Job, And then remold it to our Heart's Desire?

CURIOUS INSECT MIMICS.

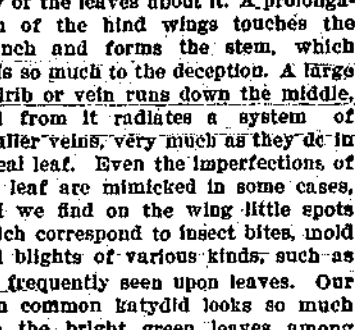

Moths that Resemble Leaves and Twigs.

Many beautiful examples of mimicry are to be seen among the moths. The underwing moth, for instance, so closely resembles the lichen-covered bark of the tree on which it is in the habit of resting that it is often difficult for one to see it even when it is known to be there, and the dagger moth is also difficult to find at times. A question-mark butterfly with wings folded looks almost exactly like a part of the tree or partly eaten dead leaf on which it may be resting, and there are other butterflies in which the deception is carried even further.

Some of the most extreme cases are to be seen among the tropical butterflies, a number of which are best known as "leaf-insects," from the fact that they look almost exactly like leaves growing from the branch on which they have alighted.

The closed wings are at all appearances a leaf, the same in shape and color as any of the leaves about it. A prolongation of the hind wings, which is the branch and forms the stem, which adds so much to the deception. A large midrib or vein runs down the middle, and from it radiates a system of smaller veins, very much as they do in a real leaf. Even the imperfections of the leaf are mimicked in some cases, and we find on the wing little spots which correspond to insect blotches, and blights of various kinds, such as are frequently seen upon leaves. Our own common katydid looks so much like the bright green leaves among which it is feeding that we often pass it by unnoticed.

The "walking sticks" are a group of insects which live chiefly on the trees and bushes, and take their name from their remarkable protective resemblance to the twigs and branches on which they are found. They are most numerous in the tropics, but we have one species, the common walking stick, in the United States. This is a slender, long-bodied insect, which sometimes occurs in very great numbers in certain forests of the Northern States. The young, most of which are hatched in the spring, are green, corresponding in color to the leaves at that season, but when they are adult, in the fall, their color has changed to gray or brown, to correspond more or less with the foliage. When the leaves have fallen, they closely resemble the twigs on which they rest, stretching out their forelegs straight in front of them to give the finishing touch to the twig-like effect.—Woman's Home Companion.

A PECULIAR ORNAMENT.

Berlin has probably one of the most peculiar ornaments for a reading room in the world.

This is a grave-stone, which stands, large and massive, in one corner of a small room. It is only a grave-stone, but in its legitimate position at the head of a grave. The history of its location in the house is interesting. It was not put in the house, but the house was built around the stone. Its original position was in the burial ground in the churchyard of St. Hed-

HE REASONED IT OUT.

How a Small Boy Accounted for Bad Weather.

There is always some one who has a good theory to tell, and here is the latest. This baby is one of a larger growth, a small child who has reached the mature age of 6 years. He had a great disappointment the other day. He was to be taken on a nice little excursion, but he certainly would have gone but for the weather, which on this particular day was so very bad that no mother would take a small boy out to it. Being a boy, the young man did not cry, but he felt hurt, and set out in a logical, masculine way, to reason matters out. He is a well-taught smart boy, and he has learned many things among other something of the creation of the world ages ago and the Creator. He also knows that the Creator of the world is the Creator of what is known as the weather. After thinking the matter over, he went to his mother.

"Mamma, it is a long time since God made the world, isn't it?"

"Yes," answered mamma, "a long time."

"Then, don't you think, mamma," he went on, earnestly, "that he is getting a little tired, and he has frequently heard remarks as to her inability to do this, that, or the other on account of her age—New York Times.

"The young man's reasoning had what he must have considered a sound basis, for he had a grandmother who is now an old lady, and he has frequently heard remarks as to her inability to do this, that, or the other on account of her age—New York Times.

CONTROLLED BY AN IDEA.

Body and Mind May Be Dominated by a Single Thought.

"Nothing is so powerful as the way in which the body and mind may be controlled by a single idea," said a physician of this city who makes a specialty of diseases of the nervous system. "What remained me of the subject," he went on, "was a very curious case that came to my attention not a great while ago. A 12-year-old boy, the son of a very respectable family in moderate circumstances, who lives on the lower side of Canal street, had a slight attack of inflammatory rheumatism last winter and upon recovery some months later found himself unable to straighten his right arm. It was bent in such a position that the back of the hand almost touched the shoulder, and while there was no particular soreness about it, the boy simply insisted that he could not move the elbow and held the limb straight. I saw him several times, but he would not say any such result from his slight rheumatic attack and was persuaded from the outset that the boy, while no doubt perfectly honest, was simply a victim of self-deception.

"During his illness he had probably found the arm more comfortable when bent and gradually his mind had become dominated by the fixed idea that it was impossible for him to extend it. In such cases it is useless to argue with the patient, but frequently some lucky accident will dissipate the illusion. One day last fall I dropped in to see the boy and while I was in the house an old negro woman remarked in his hearing that 'somebody done put a charm on dat arm' and that she knew how to 'take it off.' 'How would you do it?' I asked. 'I'd use a red charm stone,' she said. 'I rub it on his shoulder an' dat arm straighten out afore I could say 'Charm!' 'I was deeply impressed and I gave the old woman a quarter and told her to be around with the charm-stone next afternoon. I was on hand myself before the appointed hour and the child, with a great show of falling him in confidence, said I rather expected the charm was going to cure him. The magic stone turned out to be a piece of common red flint, but after the old auntie had mumbled several incantations, which he abouted vigorously and worked him into a state of high excitement I took his wrist and suddenly pulled the limb straight.

"Why, abies, does it cure, sure enough?" I shouted, watching the show rigorously before he had time to object; 'try it yourself! Your arm is as good as ever!' He moved it, cautiously at first and then more freely, and finally declared that he was all right. The next time I saw him he was perfectly sound. It was merely a case of mind cure—that was all. As the trouble was imaginary the needed to remove it. The old dandy, by a show of working the show rigorously before he had time to object; 'try it yourself! Your arm is as good as ever!' He moved it, cautiously at first and then more freely, and finally declared that he was all right. The next time I saw him he was perfectly sound. It was merely a case of mind cure—that was all.
