Why It Succeeds.

Because It's For One Thing
Only and Hammonton People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything.
Doing one thing well brings success.
Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.
They cure sick kidneys.

They cure backache, every kidney ill.

Here is Hammonton evidence to prove it.

Mrs. R. N. Farmer, Bellevue Ave., Hammonton, N. J., says: "I cannot speak too highly of Doan's Kidney Pills, as they are the only remedy that ever gave me relief from kidney trouble. The secretions from my kidneys were too frequent in passage and at times contained a sediment. I also suffered from a pain across the small of my back and felt miserable in every way. I finally procured Doan's Kidney Pills at the Red Cross Pharmacy and they entirely cured me. The pains in my back were disposed of and the kidney secretions were regulated. I gratefully recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I know they can be relied upon to act as represented."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

the holder to sell liquor in Atlantic County.

The new dog ordinance passed second and final reading.

The subject of better protection at railroad crossings was left with Law and Order Committee, for the present.

On motion, $336.53 was ordered transferred from license fund to gravel fund.

Voted, that an order for $1800 be drawn in favor of Mrs. M. Sutton, to complete purchase of six acres of gravel.

OUR LADY'S DAY.

Our Italian people will have their celebration next Friday, as usual.

Three bands will furnish music during the day.—Marine Band, City Band and Hammonton Band. The first parade will be at 7.30 a.m., but the great parade starts at 3.30, going over the usual route.

Morning masses, 8.00, 9.00 and 10.30, in St. Joseph's Church.

Two games of ball will be played, at 10 a.m. and 3.30 p.m.,—Hammonton vs. Cedar Brook.

Crystal lights will be placed across Bellevue at various points, and Third Street to the location of fire works, back of John Walther's. A thousand more fairy lights will be used than last year.

A grand pyrotechnic display will begin at 9.30, or earlier, at the usual place.

Special train service is advertised by the Pennsy, to Phila and Atlantic.

We heartily endorse Council's action in refusing a renewal of license. Not that we have anything against the applicant, but there is no need for a saloon on that corner, or on any other corner, or between corners, and every license turned down is a step toward abolishing the iniquitous traffic in rum. We have always claimed that it was a grievous mistake when the first license was granted, and we hope to see the day when this blot upon the moral landscape of fair Hammonton will be entirely obliterated.

THE STRUGGLE.

Say not, the struggle naught availed,
"The labor and the wounds are vain,
The enemy faints not, nor faileth,
— And as things have been they remain

If hopes were dupes, fears may be liars;
It may be, in your smoke concealed,
Your comrades chase e'en now the flies,
And but for you possess the field.

For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
Seem here do wear their useless thrones,
Sea men, a painful inch to gain,
Far back, through creeks and inlets make log.

Come silent, flooding in, the main.

And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light;
In front the sun climbs, low and slowly,
But westward, lo! the land is bright.
— Arthur Hugh Clough.

Humble Pie

"I overheard the offer my father made you. You think the device is worth more."

"Very much more."

"I have some money lying idle, Mr. Andrus, money I would be glad to invest in your 'marmalade'—let me by my Grandfather Atwood. Will you wait, please—let me buy an interest in your device?"

The young man's face flushed. He stared at her.

"You are quite in earnest about this?"

"Your question is not complimentary," said the girl. "I am in earnest, however, and assure you that the investigation conducted by my lawyer will be a painstaking one. Does that mean to you approval?"

"I thought it might be quickly answered. But is it possible that you really mean all this?"

"At 10 o'clock to-morrow morning you will be at the law office of John Dandfield, in the Cranston building. Mr. Dandfield is my adviser and holds an agency in trust for me. I will call on you at the time you come—Is that understood?"

She watched him narrowly.

"Yes," he answered, "unless I wake up and find this is all a dream."

"I trust," she gravely said, "that you will not force my word upon a standing offer. My interest can be shown up to the full satisfaction of my adviser you are to sell me a half interest in the Andrus transmitter for $20,000 cash. Is this your understanding?"

He was quite overwhelmed by her directness.

"That is my understanding," he answered. "Shall I put it on paper?"

She shook her pretty head.

"This is a test transaction," she said. "You have faith in your device and I have faith in you."

"You are later and Brereton Carior sat before the blazing hearth log. But the rheumatic leg was no longer resting on the cushioned stool. A soft footfall drew his attention.

"Come in, Florence," he called.

The girl came and sat by his side on the sofa.

"Hello, daddy," she said.

She rested her brown head against his arm.

"Well, dearie?"

His hand lovingly stroked the brow of his daughter.

"Feeling pretty good, daddy?"

"Yes, dearie."

"No twinges?"

"Not for a long time."

They watched the crackling blaze.

"You didn't eat much dinner, daddy."

"Didn't I?"

"I think sure you didn't."

He laughed.

"Perhaps the humble pie I ate to day spoiled my appetite."

"I thought pie, daddy?"

"I guess that's what they call it."

"Well, no about it."

He laughed again.

"It doesn't put your daddy in a very flattering light. But I'll tell you about it. I had an appointment this afternoon with a certain party at your old friend Delmonico's. I was a little early in getting there—I wanted to ask that noble question."

"Yes, daddy."

"Well, the certain party—"

"The man you were to meet?"

"Yes. He's a young man. His name is Andrus."

"That's it, Robert Andrus. He wasn't there when I arrived, and that gave Delmonico an opportunity to tell me about him. If Delmonico is right, he's a remarkable worthy young fellow—bright, honest and full on all sides."

"What's the matter, daddy?"

"The fire makes my face burn, daddy. I'll move a little back."

"Perhaps you don't care for the story?"

"Yes, yes, daddy, go on."

"Well, the funny part of it is that I once turned this same young fellow over to my lawyer. It happened one day

When I was home here with the machinery in my leg. And there I was in Deindefeld's office, keeping an appointment with the very same youngster."

"Go on, daddy."

"The boy had perfected a valuable device, a transmitter of a remarkably ingenious type. He brought it to me. He thought the Carter Motor Company could use it. I knew it was a good thing the instant I looked at it. But I thought I'd keep it from him and destroy it. He wouldn't sell. Somehow

"TELL ME ABOUT IT."

"I tell sure he would 'come back and accept my offer. I was positive he couldn't get the capital he needed to start a plant and manufacture the thing—and that's where I was wrong. Somebody let him have the money."

"Who was it, daddy?"

"I don't know. But the plant was built and proved a good thing—the very start. The boy found a market for his invention almost immediately, and the little factory has been working right up to its limit. It got me scared some time ago. And I was all with more scared when I heard that the National Engine Company wanted the factory's entire output. The Carter Motor Company couldn't stand by and let that happen. And so I was there in your old friend's office, prepared to arrange a deal with this gifted youngster. Well, he came in—presently—a fine looking lad, really—and scrupulously polite. He readily seemed glad to see me—which might be wondered at. Well, I made up my mind long less than no time that there was nothing to be gained by making a deal about the bush, and so I came right out and offered him $200,000 for his plant and his patents, and, in addition to this, the position of manager of our works with a $10,000 salary."

"The girl suddenly laughed."

"Why, that was fine, daddy. And what did the gifted young man do?"

"The gifted young man never turned a hair. If he was surprised at my offer he carefully concealed the fact. He thanked me, but added that he would be guided entirely by his partner, who owns a half interest in the factory and patents. He promised to let me know his partner's decision very soon, and I had to be satisfied with this promise. And that, I thought, was all I could lumber home—and lots of it."

"There was a little silence."

"Daddy," said the girl, "I want your advice."

"But I know nothing about hats or gowns."

"She softly laughed."

"I'm a money snorter this time, daddy. I bought a half interest in a manufacturing plant a year ago and I've just offered $400,000 for it. The old man stared down at her. "That sounds good. What's the plant called?"

"The girl hesitated."

"Try the Andrus Transmitter Company, daddy."

"What?"

"Yes, daddy. I'm the partner who cannot be consulted."

"You?"

"Yes, daddy. What do you advise me to do?"

"I'd no got my breath, you rascal!"

"All right, daddy. Take your time. The luck turned down the door. 'Hold on!' he cried. And Robert Andrus entered the room. 'Here in my partnership, daddy.'"

The old man stared at the newcomer.

"Well, well," he murmured.

And, daddy, Robert's price has gone up. I found it out this afternoon. He wants you, too!"

The old man stared from Robert to the girl. Her arm stole around his neck.

"You're all right, daddy."

He hung back with a sigh of resignation.

"More humble life," he murmured—

His Model.
Many a youth is taken with the desire to "write," "compose," "dramatize," exactly what he wishes to compose, but the itch for the pen is strong. The Hollman tells the story of an ambitious young man who called upon a Chicago publisher.
He said to the publisher that he had decided to write a book.
"May I venture to inquire as to the nature of the book you propose to write?" asked the publisher, very politely.
"Oh," came in an offhand way from the aspirant to literary fame, "I think of doing something on the line of 'Les Misérables,' only livelier, you know."
The cost of the central station plants existing in 1907 in the United States was just $1,000,000,000; the capitalization of the street cars was $1,000,000,000, and the capitalization of street railroads was close upon $4,000,000,000, making a grand aggregate of $4,100, 000,000, or for 1909 about $7,000,000,000.

The total number of persons of foreign birth living in the United States in 1900 was 10,400,000, forming 13.7 per cent of the total population, while in 1890 the persons of foreign birth formed 14.8 per cent of the total population; in 1880, 13.3 per cent; in 1870, 13.4 per cent; in 1860, 13.2 per cent,
and in 1850, 9.7 per cent.

The birth of a son to the youthful Duke and Duchess of Suderama in 1890, the first of foreign birth, is not far from two hundred ten years—namely, a great-great-grandmother. The lady to whom this honor has come is the Grand Duchess Constantine Nicolae-vitch, whose, was, before her marriage, Princess, Alexandra of Saxe Altenburg.

How huge is the cost of underground railways in shown in a comparison of the total cost of all the tube railway systems of London with the total cost of the railway systems of London. The figure includes 2,500 miles of road and its total cost was $222,222,500,000. The railway tubes of London, which aggregate 8½ miles, have cost about $137,500,000.

THE MOUSE-TRAP.

The mouse was a very little one, but the lady of the house was none the less disturbed by its unexpected presence in the library. It was the first mouse that had appeared on the premises in a long time. The maid was saying that she saw it in the kitchen. "The house was swarming with mice," and not to be expected back inside of an hour. And yet there was the mouse! The lady of the house was not lacking in courage. She remembered that somewhere in the kitchen, whence the cook had departed to spend the evening with a sick relative, there was an old mouse trap, and she determined to catch the mouse.

She found the trap, a round one with five holes for mice to enter, laid out on the floor in the pantry, and carried it back to the library. There she placed it on the floor, and sitting down on the couch, drew up her feet and awaited developments.

The room was silent. Presently the mouse came out cautiously from the hole. The lady of the house watched it, and knew somebody was watching him, and he approached the trap.

"I just tucked my foot under me," said the lady of the house afterwards to a startled and admiring group of friends, and "and—wondered how it really felt just like a mouse's foot," but knew somebody was watching him, and he approached the trap.

"Well, my dears, you should have seen it!" cried Mrs. Mount took his time about it. He looked that the hole ran all over pecked in the shingles one after another, and finally made up his mind which was the best door to the dining room. Then he gave a little hop, and ran.

"My dear, I gave a little hop, too, but nothing happened. I could see his hind legs and his tail sticking out, and the way he shook I know he was just gobbling cheese as if he hadn't had a square meal for a week!" That made the "feet" remember that ever, and every time he ran he would give a little hop and catch him by his poor little neck.

"But—would you believe it?—the old work didn't go off. When I had got so long waiting for it that I was all ready to shout and make him get out before anything happened, sure he came."

Then she took up his hind legs, like a squirrel in the park, and actually wiped his whiskers with his paws, for all the world as if he had a little napkin in them. And then he went back to the dining room.

"Well, the Bassett place up on Birch Hill was for sale, and he took a fancy to it—I looked just like the house where he was born, he said."

"But don't you let it out," he said to me. "They'll be asking some fancy price for it if they know I want it."

"Well, I drove him up there after he'd made up his mind, and we found Isaac Bassett out in the yard."

"I mean this place is for sale. How much?" asked Mr. Millington.

"Isaac opened his mouth, but there was as far as he got."

"I'll give you $500 for it; not cent more," said Mr. Millington, stamping.

"I'll take it," says Isaac.

"I ain't mean," he says, after he made out a check—and he'd started-of nor close, but I won't be done," says he, "jest because I've made my pile."

"I didn't tell him," chuckled Mr. Bates. "He'll be doing himself."

"Had he?" questioned Mr. Bates' companion.

"Sure!" said Mr. Bates. "The farm was put up for sale for the taxes, and all they asked was $500." And I heard that Isaac had privately offered it for $600."

Wanted—A Man.

Writing for Success Magazine. Orison Swift Magazine says: Never before was the opportunity of the educated man so great as today. Never before was there such a demand for the trained man, the man who can do anything superbly well. At the door of every career is a sign out: "Wanted—a man." No matter how many millions are out of employment, the whole world is hunting for a man who can do things; a trained thinker who can do whatever he undertakes a little better than anybody else before him has done. Everywhere it is the educated man, the man whose natural ability has been enlarged, enhanced one hundredfold by superior training, that is wanted.

On all sides we meet with small brains, but well trained, pushing ahead of those who have greater capabilities, but are only half trained. A one-talent man, superior trained, often gets the place when a man with many untrained or halftrained talents is better qualified to do the work, and at such a disadvantage as to-day.

While the opportunities awaiting the educated man, the college graduate, on his entrance into practical life were never before so great and so numerous, it is never before more dangerous and temptations which, bent him were never before so great, so numerous and so insidious.

There is nothing else, perhaps, which the graduate needs to be cautioned against, it is these money temptations which has seduced the American people, for nothing else is more dangerous to the development of the higher, sterner instincts and nobler desires.

The Party He Belonged to.

A matron of the most determined character was encountered by a young man reporter on a leading country road. "I am going to interview the leading citizens as to their political views," he said.

"My I see Mr. ———?" she asked of a stout-looking woman who opened the door at her own house.

"No, please don't," answered the matron, "I've decided."

"But I want to know what party he belongs to," pleaded the girl.

"The woman drew up her tall figure and said, "I can't tell you, but I can tell you that I'm the party he belongs to!"

Pain is a horrible. A "pain" which is local and of short duration is a twinge. If local and continuous it is an ache. Agony, torment and pain, when not the mere hysteria of an overstatement, are employed to designate the higher degrees of pain.

In China not only girls but boys change names. When a boy is born he gets a nursing name; later his teacher gives him a school name; when he is given the cap of manhood his official name is given him; and finally he selects a name for himself, to enable him to call him by and for letters.

At a prisoner at the sessions had been convicted of theft, when it was seen, on "proving previous convictions," that he had actually been in prison at the time the theft was committed. "Why didn't you say so?" asked the judge of the prisoner angrily. "Your lordship, I was afraid of prejudicing the jury against me."

Fourteen million persons are insured in Germany under the invalidity and old-age pensions act. Last year the total cost of administration was $3,774,250; old-age pensions amounted to $4,325,000; invalid pensions amounted to $2,600,000, and $2,000,000 was spent in returning prisoners in case of marriage or death.

It was a Scot, of course, whose minister reproached him as an habitual absentee from kirk, and who pleaded "his distaste of long sermons." "If ye dunna mend, ye may land yersell where ye're no to be troubled," said the minister. "Weel," said the answer, "but it mayna be for want of ministers."

Following the example set by the New York Central on its Adirondack line, the Atlantic Central Railroad has placed in service on its branches running through forest regions a number of oil burning locomotives. AN EARLY CENSUS TABLE

The first industrial census—that of 1822—was taken in France, and only in the last interesting from a geographical point of view, the account to G. L. Apperson, I. S. O., the secretary of "Gleanings After Time," through much light upon the industrial condition of France, and, indeed, of all the countries of that early period.

Paris then, at now, occupied a leading position in trade, and particularly in the manufacturing trades associated with handicraft. In the thirteenth century machinery did not enter much into the calculations of an artisan, and such as did exist was of a rude kind.—Thus we have in the mass of operatives whose names were found in the lists prepared for taxation purposes, both in 1822 and a half-century later in 1907, scarcely a view of the crafts which prevailed those days. A writer who was interested in these subjects estimated the number of artisans in Paris; excepting a special calling in 1822, at 4,159; the list of 1907 increased them to 6,000.

The textiles and clothing trades were pretty conspicuously in these lists. Paris lists. They include dressers and ampuoleurs, whom the writer of the time believed to be the same as the flax-spinners, although—but who were really workmen stretched the cloth upon the poles between two axes, and used the loom. There were also caenderiers; or makers of flax and hemp-dressers and spinners, the materials of which they spun, although subsequently two spinners of wool-thirty-six of silk are mentioned; tilters of cloth, both men and women; whose duty it was to raise the pobbins makers; carders of textile materials, cloth shavers, who gave the desired gloss to yarn, mangle-makers probably acted the parts of our dressing-and-rolling-machines; silk wrights; linen weavers; cloth fullers; one velvet maker.

The textile dyers included three general grades of silk, makers of azure blue, and one of a peculiar color called fustic.

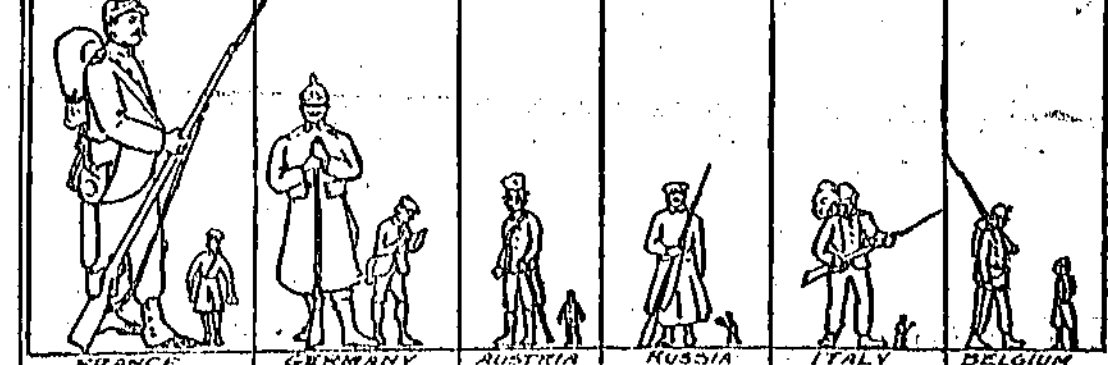

Besides these, the list of 1907 includes two makers of aiguillettes, which we understand to be shoulder-knots; three embroidery-makers; and five dress makers, who were rather numerous, and included felt hatters, pearl head-dress makers, chapeau liers de soie, who wore the silk known as coiffeur's caps. There were other corporations engaged working hand-dresses not mentioned the census of 1822—that is, in flannels, peacock-feathers and sea-bird feathers.

Then there were hood makers, sash makers, makers of corsets, the makers of ecclesiastical charity-bags, pinifiers, who appear to have been workers in a kind of trimming ribbon makers.

The list of textile workers does not embrace the list in the country, and doubtless a great deal of the wool and silk was prepared there, a portion being unknown to these days—it furnishes a curious contrast with the vast array of operatives and manufacturers seen in occupation France under this head.

Of all the textile employes in Paris the spinners were the most important, there having been no less than five distinct guilds or corporations—the male spinners of wool, taken up years apart, but they should be marked too closely, for even in the days, with the assistance of a large staff of practised experts, it is difficult to make an accurate census.

WHAT EUROPEAN POWERS SPEND FOR MILITARISM AND EDUCATION.

When the Turkish soldiers in Asia Minor sack and burn the schools people are horrified at their lack of civilization, but a French writer comes forward to explain in full this time that the so-called civilized nations are willing, the schools to support their soldiers, which seem to about the same thing. If a man spent, at times as much for guns as for his children's school, he would be regarded as a monster or a desperado. It appears that this is precisely what the powers in Europe are doing. The Paris review, Mon Monnaie, says:

"France spends about five times as much on her army as she does on the intellectual training of her child; Germany gives to educational purposes one third of the amount which she spends on her army. In Italy, in Prussia and in Russia the proportion between schools and armaments is as two to nine. Italy spends upon her army nine times as much as she devotes to public education. Belgium is exemplary in that her military expenditure is only four times as great as her educational. In the United States the ratio is only two to one. In Switzerland, which devotes twice as much to the education of her children as she lays out on the purchase of powder and shot and the pay of her defenders, she

The Fourth.

Monday was an ideal day. The unexpected cool wave made the temperature delightful, and an unclouded sun did not cause discomfort.

Thanks to Council's warning notices,
Sunday, the 4th, was quiet.

There was racket enough about town in the morning, after the small boy and his big brother got to work. But that was expected. There was little else doing until about 1.30, when Mayor Jackson raised a flag at the Park. A heavy bomb rose high in the air and exploded, releasing a parachute surrounded by a flag, which sailed leisurely earthward.

Later, Mr. J. A. Burgeon was introduced, and spoke well for about twenty minutes, dwelling much on history, beginning with Columbus, the Indians, Puritan, early settlements, the Revolution with its cause and effect, our Washington the man and patriot. It was a good speech.

Of course the band played at frequent intervals, and won commendation from every lover of good music.

Later came the crowds of people, until our pretty Park became a scene of beauty with gaily dressed ladies and children, and a liberal proportion of men folk. Everybody seemed out for employment, and found it. Swings, see-saws and boats were kept in motion.

It was interesting, toward night, to note the groups of families and neighbors gathered about, partaking of good things provided. This social feature was one of the most enjoyable things we witnessed.

In the evening came the fireworks.
Though including some pretty things, they were not equal to the displays given in past years, and not according to programme. The committee had a stout contract, and compelled the company to grant a liberal discount.

Well, the day passed, and most of us enjoyed it. Not a serious accident, and not a case of disorderly conduct, was reported. May we all be ready for something better in 1910.
