A White Life.

Our great home cause of the white ribbon, which seeks to confirm every child and youth in the white life, has been the motive power in bringing it about that of the sixteen million children who are in our public schools, all save those of Georgia and Arkansas are under the protection of laws requiring that they be daily taught physiology and hygiene with special reference to the effect of stimulants upon the human body. We have also worked hard to gain laws whereby the selling of cigarettes to boys under sixteen becomes a punishable offense; for it seems to us that no form of deterioration is to-day more surely handicapping the boys, and giving the larger opportunity of financial success to the girls, than the cigarette habit at present well-nigh universal among the boys and young men of our country.

In this holy fight for a clear brain
and wholesome physique, the Christian Endeavor young people are our best allies, and I earnestly urge that they shall seek to ascertain whether the laws are obeyed; and if not, to secure the enforcement of new statutes. For the young brain is like wax to receive and marble to retain, and it is our duty and ought to be our highest pleasure to help work into the warp and woof of youthful character the knowledge that science is on the side of temperance reform, so that each child may enact a prohibitory law for one—that one himself.

In all this let us teach from God's point of view; and the Bible is packed with precepts and illustrations ready to our hand.—Frances E. Willard.

How to Eat Green Corn.

The question that now agitates
The bosom of the average man
Is not our war in foreign States,
Or some new-fangled tariff plan;
Nor is it how to stand the heat,
Or how to dress at night and morn.
But, rather, it is how to eat
In proper way an ear of corn.

It must be eaten from the cob—
So far it is agreed,—and yet
To eat it thus is quite a job.
And still observe strict etiquette;
It must be taken in the hand,
But not be brandished like a club;
We're told to nibble gently and
Not munch it like a woodchuck cub.

We eat it with our teeth perforo,
But woe unto the diner rash
If any kernel escapes its course.
And weakly olings to his mouthache.
The butter should be thickly spread,
But only adds unto our woes,
For condemnation on our head
If any bit besmears our nose.

Both ends at one we may not grab,
Tho' that has been a mooted point;
Our neighbor's ribs we may not jab
By flourishing our elbow joint.
For each dilemma there's a horn;
So, rather than get in a muss,
We answer when they pass the corn,
"No, thanks, I'll take asparagus."

Exports to Porto Rico have more than doubled under American administration. So they will to the Philippines as soon as the Filipinos accept the free
pardon offered them by the President, and settle down to the agricultural and commercial development of their own country.

The surplus of receipts over expenditures for the current fiscal year just ended amounted to $81,229,770. This was almost twice the estimate made by Secretary Gage, last November. Receipts since then, from both customs and internal revenue, have been good,
and expenditures have been falling off.
The total receipts for the year were $568,417,347, and total expenditures
$487,803,490.

There are now at the Paris Expontion five Kansas farmers from one township. This is merely a sample prosperity fact.

The Republican national platform doesn't equivocate or dodge. Every issue is there squarely met and frankly treated.

It is true that President McKinley has not utilized the veto power in an indiscriminate manner. Excessive voting is a Cleveland specialty.

A Republican surplus of $81,229,770
in time of war is better than a Democratic deficit of $146,702,915 in time of peace.

The failure of the Democrats to do-nounce the annexation of Hawaii was doubtless due to the fact that Hawaii's vote alone enabled them to revive the 16 to 1 corpse.

Mr. Bryan is so opposed to McKinley becoming an emperor that he has been working several years to secure the acceptance for himself. He has already proven himself a pretty good boss.

It may be assumed with a good degree of confidence that this campaign will not be as profitable to Mr. Bryan as was the last. People will be slow to part with their good money to hear his hard luck stories.

The Kansas City convention attempted to square a circle when it tried to construct a sound-money-free-silver platform and nominate a pair of free-silver-sound-money candidates. These two things will not mix. One is right and the other is wrong, and no amount of word juggling, wool pulling, hedging or evasion can deceive the people.
Those who sincerely believe in the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, without awaiting the aid or co-operation of any other nation on earth, should vote for Bryan, for he is pledged to that very thing. All other citizens of the Republic, no matter what their previous political affiliations may have been, should and must unite against that financial heresy, which, if adopted, would plunge the country into a state of business anarchy such as has never been experienced by any people
since the invention of coined money.

LONG-LIVED PEOPLE

A FEW CURIOUS INSTANCES OF GREAT LONGEVITY.

East Indian Who Is Claimed, Was 370 Years of Age at the Time of His Death—Authenticated Cases of Persons Living to Be Over 100 Years Old.

If Maffens, the historian of the Indian, can be believed, one Nemesio de Cugna, a native of Bengal, lived to the astonishing age of 370 years. Although the story is confirmed by Lopez Castaneda, who at the time of Cugna's death, in 1650, was historiographer royal of Portugal, and although it is altogether the best proved instance of so great longevity, its correctness has been somewhat doubted. But whether or not Cugna or his friends mistook the time of his birth by a century or two, there is no denying him the distinction of the greatest age of which we have anything like reliable evidence. He is described as a man of great simplicity of habit, and of very easy and quiet manners; though wholly illiterate, he was possessed of a memory so remarkable that he could recite the minutest details relating to most of even the daily events of two and a half centuries. He is said to have had many wives during his long life, and it is related that the color of his hair and beard changed several times from black to gray and from gray to black.

The next greatest instance of longevity known to us is that of Peter Zocron, a French peasant, whose death is recorded on Jan. 25, 1724, at the remarkable age of 133 years. Immediately succeeding Zocron is the instance of Louisa Truxon. This person was a negro of Tusculum, in South America, who, in October, 1780, had reached the age of 95 years, and was living in good a degree of health that she promised many years in addition.

However extraordinary these facts, a family by the name of Rovin, which resided about 1720 in France, furnished three particulars, each of which is without a known parallel. (1) The combined ages of the parents amounted to 888 years, the father, John Rovin, being 174, and the mother, Sarah, being 164. (2) They had been married 147 years, and lived to be nearly as extraordinary, they lived throughout this long period in much peace and contentment. (3) At the time of their death they had three children living, the youngest of whom was 113 years.

DOG MAIL CARRIER.

Now Wags for the Train and Takes Charge of Mail.

Out in Kansas, where so many things are different, there is a big St. Bernard mail-carrier. It lives in one of the little "cow" ranches, where it is the only dog, and it is the postoffice, in thirty rods from the railroad track. The train always goes whizzing by at a good rate of speed, and as it approaches, the dog barks and hurries to the crossing and waits for the coming of the mail. The mail clerk picks the letter bag out of the dog's mouth, and it is then that the dog barks and hurries to the crossing and waits for the coming of the mail. The mail clerk picks the letter bag out of the dog's mouth, and it is then that the dog barks and hurries to the crossing and waits for the coming of the mail.

It does this every day, in spite of the weather, and the whole country knows and is proud of the dog mail-carrier.

It is 4 years old, and is 2 feet 7 inches in height and weighs 250 pounds. It has no difficulty in carrying the sack, though the mail is often very heavy with the weekly papers from the country, for his teeth are strong and he has carried over 100 pounds at a time.

A Barker's View.

Barber: "This young man takes you to the theater in a carriage?"

Daughter: "No, he took the elevator."

"I thought he would. I knew he was too mean to live the moment I met him."

"How did you?"

"He wears a full beard."—New York Weekly.

ON HIS CURVES.

When He Tried to Discover Her Sentiments He Struck a Snag.

He was a young man, as some young men are who are over-eagerly paying their devotion to pretty girls, and never reaching any definite business conclusion.

A man like that learns exactly what a girl thinks of him, and when he finds it is favorable, even to matrimony, he begins to hedge, and after a few painful struggles of a chafed cupid, the affair is all over, and the girl wonders what the man laughs softly to himself and seeks fresh fields and pastures new.

Really there ought to be a law against it, and if Judge Lynch would intervene now and then it would clear the atmosphere, but public sentiment isn't sufficiently educated yet, and we must wait awhile for the needed reform.

However, all girls are not the same, and the one this chronicle was different, though the young man was like those referred to.

He had been paying assiduous court to her for six months, and it is not to be denied that she liked him. Most well-balanced girls do, and nobody can or wants to censure them for it. He wasn't quite sure where he stood in her affections, and he was anxious to know so he proceeded in the usual fashion. Only this time the girl wasn't an idiot.

"What would you do, Frankie," he said, in his pleasant off-hand way, "if a fellow should tell you he loved you?"

"That would depend," she responded with a little frown as she didn't exactly know what.

"Depend on what?" he inquired.

"Oh, on a good many things," she said, rather weakly.

"And suppose he were to ask you to marry him?" he asked next, concluding that promptness was the soul of discretion.

"That would depend, too," she answered nervously.

"On what?" and he became very tender indeed.

"Well, you ask me to marry you and see," she said, so forcibly that he was disconcerted to the point of utter rage, and he has been kicking himself ever since, for he learned afterward that the girl was worth $100,000 in her own right and he might have won her—Detroit Free Press.

PIANO KEYS OF DOGWOOD.

Connecticut Lovers Fashions an Acceptable Substitute Hereby.

How many of those who play piano and organs know what the keys represent shapes and forms are made of? Owing to the high price of ebony, the manufacturers of keyboards have been searching for a substitute which would be cheaper, but it seems impossible to find a material so close to ebony, to take the necessary polish upon experiments with our native dogwood shows that it could be colored and polished until it equaled ebony in looks and utility. It is a wood which seems to have no particular location for growing, and is scattered throughout nearly every forest, and on rare occasions a number of trees are found in a group, says the Hartford Current.

It grows as a large bush or small tree, requiring twenty-five or thirty years to reach a diameter of five or six inches. It is an exceedingly fragrant growth, giving a profusion of handsome white blossoms during May. Owing to the small amount of wood contained in a tree it is rarely cut unless to clear up a place.

Thus, when E. B. Nettleton, of Deep River, Connecticut, with Connors, Keeney & Co., of Ivoryton, and Pratt, Lord & Co., of Deep River, to furnish them some 800 cords of it saved into an inch square, in lengths from eight to twenty inches, he asked the farmers to get it for him, and he had to offer $4.50 to $5 per cord for it. In a short time the supply came so fast that nine miles were kept busy sawing it into strips. These strips are piled up in a pile, and then they are planed and polished, and they are ready to be put on to the keyboard.

A Bit Farther.

The editor was good-natured. He condescended to read the manuscript.

"Not half bad," he said, finally; "but don't you think you carried this joke a bit too far?"

"Well, you," the humorist replied; "just about the limit, I should say. This is the fourteenth joke, I believe, and the elevator isn't running."—Philadelphia Record.

Hardly Pleasant.

"It vexed me horribly, I tell you."

"What was that?"

"Why, when Mabel's husband pulled a tooth for me this morn'g, I don't know, he gave her the dollar right before my face and eyes to go off and buy tea cream."—Indianapolis Journal.

ANECDOTE INCIDENT

When Senator Hoar of Massachusetts was recently asked what he had been reading of late he replied: "For serious work, 'David Harrow' for light reading and amusement, 'I've been going through Gibbon again.'"

Charles Haddon Spurgeon, the non-conformist preacher, was a great punster. One day, while on a visit at Monticello, he was visiting by the seashore at a time when the Mediterranean sea was raging furiously. Suddenly he interrupted the conversation and asked: "What are the wild waves saying?" and then he gave his own answer to the question: "Let us (spay)!"

It is said that a certain Colorado millionaire, who is getting up an art gallery, recently went to Whittier's Paris studio, and glancing casually at the masterpieces on the walls, asked with the confidence of one who owns gold mines: "How much for the lot?" "Four millions," said Whittier without a moment's hesitation. "What?" ejaculated the astonished millionaire. "My possible modest prices," replied the painter, as he added, "Good-morning!"

Sir Robert Finlay, the new English statesman generally, was engaged on a case for the government of a horse, the age of the animal being the chief matter in dispute, and had to cross-examine a host of jockeys with every appearance of rustic simplicity. "Upon what authority do you swear to the age of the mare?" he asked. "Half a dozen," was the reply. "Half a dozen?" more questions failed to elicit from the witness any more specific answer. "But how do you know?" thundered Sir Robert. "I know," said the witness, "because I saw a month!" replied the host.

During Hans von Bulow's leadership of the orchestra at Hanover, while one of his grand intermezcos was being played with great feeling by his musicians, a peculiar noise, annoying the leader for some little time. "At first he thought it resembled the flutter of wings; but when he discovered an elegant lady fanning herself in one of the boxes close by, Bulow kept on with his gestures, and his orchestra went on in a manner which meant respect.

The lady, not heeding this, was suddenly surprised by the leader dropping his stick and turning toward her. "Pardon me, a certain individuality," he cried, "if you must, please, at least keep your fan with your infernalulance."

The tutor in one of the smaller schools near Chaucey Depew's native town of Peekskill had drilled a number of his brightest scholars in the history of contemporary politics, and to test both their faith and their knowledge he called upon three of them one day and demanded a declaration of personal political principles: "You are a Republican, Tom, are you not?" "Yes, sir." "And Bill, you are a Prohibitionist, I believe?" "Yes, sir." "And Jim, you are a Democrat?" "Yes, sir." "Well, now, the one of you that can give me the best reason why he belongs to his party can have this week's check, which I caught on my way to school this morning." "I am a Republican," said the first boy, "because the Republican party saved the country in the war and abolished slavery." "And Bill, you are a Prohibitionist?" "I am a Prohibitionist," replied the second, "because rum is the country's greatest enemy and the cause of our overpopulation." "Excellent reason, Bill," remarked the tutor, encouragingly; "now, why are you a Democrat, Jim?" "Well, sir," was the slow reply, "I am a Democrat because I want that woodchuck."

May: "Why do you call him 'Circus'?"

Mr. "No matter when you see him he is always the same."

But Outlook for the Boy.

Most exclusive salons of the Faubourg St. Germain. The entertainments of the aristocracy, at her magnificent country home, the Chateau de Versailles, and at her town house, were noted for their splendor.

Baron Rothschild was one of the eleven Barons Rothschild whose family for the last century has been within the past ten years aggregate more than $500,000,000. The head of the Paris house was a hard worker and devoted to business, but, like all his family, he had a hobby.

This was a passion for buying rare books. His collection was one of the most valuable of a private kind in Europe. While he lived he bore the reputation of a stern, uncharitable man. The result of his will renounces this reputation with one of a diametrically opposite nature.

SERMON.

Rev. Dr. Calmidge.

Subject: The Mission of Christ—How Jesus the Son of God Came to Earth to Save the Sinners Who Will Enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

Washington, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Calmidge puts in an unusual light the mission of Christ, and shows how divine power will yet make the illness of the world-fall back to its original state. The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear.

"Dorothy," I said to a distinguished surgeon, "do you not get weary with your constantly seeing so many wounds and broken bodies?" "Oh, no," he answered, "all that is overcome by my joy in curing them."

A sublime and more marvellous art never came down from heaven than that of surgery. But under what name? The earth so early that one of the first wants of the world was a doctor. Our people and apostles have been called for surgeons and family physicians for many years before they came.
