Children are Important Customers

In our estimation. When they are sent to us on a trading errand we always remember that they are not discriminating buyers, and take special pains to see that they get what both you and they want. Then we always try to be prompt in waiting on them—there is always a little worry at home when they are sent on an errand and stay too long, often through no fault of their own.

W. J. LEIB, Druggist,
Hammonton.

The M. E. S. S. Picnic.

We all met in front of the church between the hours of seven and eight a. m., and after Pa Treat said "We are slower than standing stock still, getting started," we got aboard, starting about 8.15.

We had a very enjoyable ride via Folsom, over a new road that John Myrose found somewhere. We don't know how he found it, but it was a peach of a road. It was just as he said, "a little sandy, and the bushes a little low." The low bushes seemed to annoy Pastor Middleton and Mrs. McAnney particularly.

Trafford saw a patch of cucumbers on the way, and told some one they were cantaloupes. He isn't much of a farmer.

No, P. H. Jacobs wasn't there.

Arriving at Inskip about 10.15, we at once commenced hunting for shady places. Claude Myrose and his best girl found a shady spot, swung their hammock, and were very comfortable until the rope broke. Awful sad!

About 11.30 we all got hungry. The ladies unpacked the baskets, and we all did justice to the good things, and the pickles. After dinner, George Bassett took some pictures, and also told us a yarn about the "blue hole"; but the preacher didn't believe it.

The base-ball game wasn't much,—the only feature being the magnificent stick-work of John Myrose. There were several games of quoits pitched by various cracked pitchers; but the only really exciting game was between Messrs. Bernshouse and Steel, vs. Middleton and Trafford,—the latter team winning two straight.

W. R. Tilton was there, and helped serve the ice cream.

The youngsters had a fine time paddling in the brook. Later, we all sat down again and ate supper, then took down our hammocks, loaded them in the wagons and got in ourselves, and were driven home.

The day was an ideal one for a picnic, and we all had a good time except Pa Treat: he said the ice cream was too sweet.

O. W. W. T.

A QUESTION

MR. EDITOR: Have berry shippers or others a right to obstruct travel on the streets, with teams, while they haggle with fruit buyers?

At the Reading station, the street is often blocked so as to prevent one from passing, even on the sidewalk. Then the buyer tucks his card on the crate, and if he has a few tacks left in his hand he throws them on the ground, and the first wheelman who comes along picks up one or more of them in his tires.

It seems to me there should be a remedy for such evils. A man has the same right (if right it be) to scatter bricks, stones, or stumps in the street, as another has to leave carpet tacks there,—menacing safe travel on the highway in either case.

Let the town authorities station an officer there, to see to it that no person interferes with the safety of travelers or their vehicles.

WHEELMAN.

Rev. H. F. Loomis and wife, of Elkins, West Va., were given a cordial welcome by people of all denominations on the occasion of their visit to Hammonton, from Saturday to Wednesday last. Mr. Loomis preached in his old church (Baptist) on Sunday evening, and on Monday evening several scores of their friends greeted them at the Wm. Vernier homestead. The house, lighted throughout by electricity, was tastefully decorated, which added to the pleasure of the occasion. There was instrumental and vocal music, choral music, with ice cream and cake for all. Good-byes were said, after which the company dispersed.

They didn't get that band pavilion built last week, as they expected, but it was completed on Wednesday. It is built in rustic style, the frame of cedar, surmounted by a flag-staff, and looks well. Gas and electric lights will probably be installed.

MID-SUMMER

Clearance SALE!

Such as will interest Everybody,

At Bank Bros. New Store

111 Bellevue Ave, Hammonton.

To be up-to-date means not to have any goods left over from one season to another; therefore, we have planned a mid-summer clearance sale, when every piece of summer merchandise is cut almost to half its former price.

With a few months of summer weather ahead of us, it is your duty to take an interest in Bank Brothers' mid-summer Clearance Sale,—which means an unparalleled saving on high-class merchandise, such as was only in our store for a few weeks or a month. No two or three years old stock to dispose of, as our business career is only a little over three months.

This is positively the greatest opportunity ever offered to see the goods. Everything is marked at such a low price that you can hardly believe it.

We beg to call your attention to the fact that nothing will be misrepresented, so that a child can do your shopping.

Save Men's Suits AND Trousers Ready-to-Wear

As Good Variety As When the July Sale Began and Prices Which Make Your Dollars Have Unusual Buying Power.

Some new kinds, some of the best, brought into the Sale within the last few days. Different patterns—like good quality materials, the same high grade cutting and tailoring.

Every one of the garments is of the stuff we esteemed best when we were selecting cloths. They are of the clothing our customers deemed best in the earlier choosing. We guarantee our assurances, just as when they were sold at full prices. It is the same as in their fellows that are gone.

As good fruit of the loom and expert makers as the clothes tree branches. Yet it requires but a short money-pole to knock off great prizes.

SATURDAY, JULY 29, 1905

A Middle Road farmer has two boys, which he named "Automobilist" and "Chickur."

Volunteer Fire Company had a special meeting Thursday evening, the principal items of business being recommendations to Council in regard to salary, fines, etc. They reversed the fine suggested, making them fifty cents for absence from fires, and one dollar for drills. Several of their best members would otherwise resign.

Last Sunday, a big auto was stalled on upper Bellevue. A passing farmer was asked by the owner to tow the machine to the repair shop, which he did, going a half-mile out of his way to do so; and received not even the courtesy of a "thank you" from owner, driver, or mechanic.

The canoe is a success, the boys say. Ernest and Leroy Jackson and Eugene Cogges started down the Pennsylvania on a beautiful, as could be desired, and everybody enjoyed it. They came home early, too, wagon number six passing up street about nine o'clock.

The Methodist Sunday School went to Insipid on Wednesday, and took the largest crowd that ever started from Hammononton on a Sunday School picnic. The day was as beautiful as could be desired, and everybody enjoyed it. They came home early, too, wagon number six passing up street about nine o'clock.

As the picnic wagons passed Winslow, Wednesday night, a little son of J. R. Imhoff was thrown from his bicycle and fell directly in the path of one of the great wagons containing more than a score of passengers. The little fellow's arm was run over, bruising the bone, but not the skin, nor were any bones broken. He is getting along nicely.

If you received one of our little green reminders, kindly pay heed thereto—if you have not already done so. Don't think that the amount mentioned therein may be small, that next berry season will be a satisfactory time to have it received. With several hundred of such dollars due and divers bills of our own on file, your little contribution, multiplied by the others, will render the best less oppressive.

There will be a busy session of Town Council, this evening. An ordinance granting franchise to the local Telephone Company will be considered; the question of paying our firemen twelve dollars per year is to be decided; the dog pugna ought to be abated by the appointment of an efficient catcher. There may be several other questions pertaining to public comfort and quiet introduced by petition. All this aside from routine business.

We are informed by the Methodist picnic attendees that the articles published in the Philadelphia papers in regard to the "excellent recuses" at Insipid are without adequate foundation. The truth is, several girls were walking across the creek on a log, over shallow water; Mr. Steel and others staided them, to prevent getting, their dresses wet, and one nervous one was carried part way across. Not one of them was at any time in danger. Behold, how things grow!

QUEER STORIES

Norway has a company of men who drill on skates or skis in the winter. It is said that they can get about the country about as quickly as cavalry.

All native-born and naturalized Danes over sixty years of age receive pensions of 10s to 18s per month. If unable to support themselves or their families.

A German newspaper states that within the last decade the population of Europe has increased about thirty-eight million, of whom Russia contributed fourteen million and France less than one hundred thousand.

A plan is now on foot to connect some of the scattered islands in the South Sea by wireless telegraph. It is thought that it will be of great benefit, as there is now no means of communication between them.

William Andres and William Jones, two prospectors, report the discovery of another cave in the southwest portion of Nevada. The cave has been explored to a depth of three hundred feet and shows evidence of a prehistoric race. Between the myriad statues that hang from the walls, hieroglyphics have been found. Some stone seats showing signs of use have been discovered. Efforts are now being made to explore the innermost caverns.

John G. Carlisle has discovered down in the fastnesses of Setauket, L. I., a man with a new attribute. Mr. Carlisle spends his summers there and takes more or less interest in the farming operations. "No," said the head farm hand to Mr. Carlisle, in discussing the hiring of a new man, "I wouldn't bother to take on Frank. He wouldn't suit." "Why not?" "Well, because you couldn't place no dependence on his stickin' to the job. He's such a freckle-minded cuss he never stays at any one string."

Two Germans have discovered a method by which they can bear plants grow. In the apparatus the growing plant is connected with a disk, having in its center an indicator which moves visibly and regularly, and this on a scale fifty times magnified denotes the progress and growth. Both disk and indicator are metal, and when brought in contact with an electric hammer, the electric current being interrupted at each of the divided interstices of the disk, the growth of the plant is as perceptible to the ear as to the eye.

A Curious Advertisement.

An old London paper contains the following curious advertisement: "anted, a man between twenty and best years of age to be a footman in a gentleman's great family. He must be of the Church of England and have had the smallpox in the natural way. Also a woman, middle-aged, to wait upon a young lady of great fashion and fortune. The woman must be of the Church of England, have had the smallpox in the natural way, very sober, steady, and well behaved and understand dress, getting up lace and fine linen and doing all things necessary for a young lady that goes into all public places and keeps the best company. Inquire of the printer of this paper.—Oct. 1, 1774."

SEEING LONDON IN A FOG

Graphic Description of a Weird Day with Prentice Mulford.

He knew his London well. He went forth into a fog that was of the pea-soup variety, says a writer in the National Magazine. It seemed useless to wait any longer for it to clear off. The days were all alike and were darker than twilight ever dared to be. I clung to Mulford's coat sleeve, for I knew if he were once to get beyond my reach I could never hope to find him again. We groped blindly among the streets, where the atmosphere was only less palpable than the houses that walled us in. At intervals we inquired where we were, for otherwise we could never have known at all. We had to feel our way carefully and take soundings at intervals. "Here," said Prentice, as we paused in space, "Here is Temple Bar!" I thought I saw something that might have been the ghost of an arch hewn out of the solid fog. The top of it, though it was not lofty, was lost to view.

Temple Bar, now gone forever from the place where its gates once swung in the wall of the old city. It was here her gracious majesty, Victoria of England, was wont to receive the keys of the city from the hands of the lord mayors, when she drove in state to St. Paul's cathedral. We threaded Fleet street, but could not see to the farther shore.

"Here is Her Majesty's tower," said Prentice, but nothing of it was visible, not one stone upon another. We crossed London bridge almost without knowing it; the waters of the Thames, which are only condensed fog, were invisible from the parapet, and the steam ferries were picking their way cautiously and looking very like marine monsters in a muddy aquarium. We crawled through the tunnel, for foot traffic under the Thames, which was like a hole in the fog, and for hours carried the sky about on our shoulders; it was a woolly, greasy and ill-smelling sky.

Our nostrils were clogged with the cinders, like chimney fumes, and there were smudges all over our faces. Sometimes for a moment or two we saw a spot overhead that was like a pale red wafer and we knew it for the sun, now lost to us. The lamps that burned all day were like glow worms for dimness; and so we explored the wonders of the town and saw as much of it as a blind man sees, but no more.

His Honorable Birth.

An amusing example of baboo English came to the author of "Notes from a Diary" by way of Miss Cornelia Sorabji, the Indian woman who was educated in England.
Over a baker's shop in Pune Miss Sorabji saw this notice on his Excellency's door:
"Best English Biscuits."

"Is it possible?" exclaimed his friend Weeks, admiringly.
"It is," answered Meeker. "She simply has it without my permission."

VALUE OF CAMPHOR TREES.

By-Products of Formosa's Growth Are of Considerable Worth.

Every part of a camphor tree, even to the leaves, contains camphor. The forests are not confined to Formosa alone, but are also found in Japan proper. With the extension of the industry the large areas of this tree have been greatly reduced, though replanting and cultivation are practiced to a considerable extent, a tree requiring 50 years to attain a diameter of one foot.

In Formosa, however, there is still an extensive supply of native forest growth and many huge trees are to be found in regions still unexplored. The supply, therefore, is assured for years to come.

Camphor is found in the form of crystals in the wood tissues and is separated from the crude oil by double distillation. From the first distillation is secured an oxidized product, camphogenol, the principle of the camphor oils of commerce. The crude camphor is a dark-colored substance, fusing at 170 degrees centigrade.

Among the by-products may be mentioned crude camphor oil, which comes out simultaneously with the camphor-white oil, obtained by sublimating the crude oil and used in the manufacture of soap. Red oil also is obtained from the crude camphor oil, as well as a black oil, which is extensively used in the preparation of varnishes. A turpentine is secured from the white oil that is in great demand for medical and industrial purposes. From red oil is obtained the product known as safrol, employed to a considerable extent in the manufacture of perfumery and also soap; and a disinfectant is also distilled from red oil, after the addition of other substances, claimed to kill the cholera bacillus. Another product is an insecticide, which when mingled with 100 parts of water destroys insects injurious to farm crops.

The annual export of camphor from Japan is about 6,000,000 pounds, three-fourths of which is produced in Formosa, the other fourth coming from Japan proper, chiefly from Kyushu and Shikoku. By a provision of the law of 1903 the sale of camphor produced in Japan is monopolized by the government through a restriction of the sale of crude camphor and camphor oil.

SCIENTIFIC DUSTER

A Woman's Scheme to Suppress the Deadly Germ.

The cult of the modern housewife forbids the use of the erstwhile universal feather duster and favors woolen polishing mits, or fabric dusters of some kind, silk ones most of all. One of the fabric dusters recently invented by a New York woman is built up of a densely woven fabric of a comparatively hard, long nap or threads. This is doubled upon itself, and a center tube, or pocket, formed by a double line of stitching, over which is stitched a tape reinforcing strip. The warp threads are comparatively soft and form the duster proper by the removal of the warp threads as far as the stitching, producing a fringe. Into the completed tube a stick of convenient size is placed, with a portion extending beyond the duster proper to form a handle. When the tube of fabric is mounted upon the handle it furnishes a convenient dusting device that will effectively operate over a large surface. When the fabric becomes soiled or loaded with dust it may be readily removed from the holder and beaten or boiled to sterilize it. The loose, soft character of the fabric is such that it readily takes up the dust and retains it.

OLD Favorites

The Girl I Loved in Sunny Tennessee.
On a morning bright and clear
To my old home I drew near,
Just a village down in sunny Tennessee.

I was speeding on a train,
That would bring me back again
To my sweetheart who was waiting there for me.

It was but a few short years
Since I kissed away her tears.
As I left her at my dear old mother's side,
And each day we've been apart
She's grown dearer to my heart
Than the night I asked of her to be my bride.

As the train drew up at last
Old familiar scenes I passed
As I kissed my mother at the station door,
And as old friends gathered 'round
Tears on every face I found.
But I missed the dear one I'd been longing for to see.

And I whispered, "Mother, dear,
Where is Mary; she's not here?"
All the world seemed lost and sad and came to me,
For she pointed to a spot
In the churchyard's little lot,
Where my sweetheart sleeps in sunny Tennessee.

Chorus—
I could hear the darkies sing
As she bade farewell to me,
Far across the fields of cotton
My old homestead I could see.
And the moon shone in its glory,
As I told life's sweetest story
To the girl I loved in sunny Tennessee.

Song.
He that is down needs fear no fall;
He that is low, no pride;
He that is humble ever shall
Have God to be his shield.

And, Lord, contentment still I crave,
Because thou savest such.

Fullness to such a burden is
That go on pilgrimage;
Here little, and hereafter bliss,
Is best from age to age.

KITCHEN FOR A BACHELOR.

The Modern Architect Lances One More Blow at Matrimony.

As a concession to the home-making instinct bachelor apartments are now built with kitchens. They are not ordinarily intended for men who employ others to do their cooking, but for those who cook for themselves.

The kitchen, indeed, in the small bachelor apartments intended for men of modest means are about the smallest things of the kind ashore or afloat. There is just room enough for a small gas stove, a little sink, a tiny refrigerator and the necessary floor space to enable the bachelor to turn around.

All the permanent appointments are provided by the landlord. The tiny refrigerator will hold a moderate supply of milk, butter and the meat of at least three meals.

Some of the bachelor cooks are content to get breakfast merely, but others also prepare dinner. The gas stove will do either.

Few minutes will ordinarily suffice to prepare, cook and serve the bachelor's dinner, and if the breakfast is done in partnership the day can be made ready in less time.

Bachelor apartments with tiny kitchens are on the whole an economy for men who cannot endure the ordinary boarding house. The kitchen does not add greatly to the rent of an apartment, and the cost of meals is astonishingly small.

The breakfast of coffee, rolls and eggs the year around need not average more than 8 to 10 cents a head, and with fruit included it is hardly more than $1 a week. Dinners, including an occasional night off at a restaurant, need not average more than from $2.50 to $3 a week, so that the weekly cost of two meals a day is below the price charged by a pretty cheap boarding house.

The man who must restrict himself to a hall bedroom and a cheap boarding house table cannot afford even the smallest of bachelor apartments with the thinnest of kitchens, but two bachelors who are able to pay a fair price for board and lodging and who do not mind being their own cooks can be exceedingly comfortable in an apartment with kitchen.

As things are now going in New York the bachelor apartment, which is really a home, begins to compete with the club on a different to matrimony.

Mistaken Idea.
"But, my dear," remonstrated Mr. Meekton, "there's a good deal to be said on both sides."
"No, there isn't," answered his spouse, "I've told you what I think about it, and that's all that is going to be said."

TRICKS OF WEAK ANIMALS.

Instinct of Self-Preservation Causes Them to Use Deceit.

There are a surprising number of quaker animals—animals whose regular method of self-protection is to offer no resistance to their enemies.

The possum's trick of "shamming dead" is an old story. A writer in the London Spectator cites several other cases of combined cunning and meekness. The hedgehog, the porcupine, the Australian echidnas and some of the armadillos refuse to fight, but they are protected by sharp spines or armor. Some of the armadillos are great diggers and take refuge in holes, while porcupines often hide in hollow logs or trees.

Among marine animals is a starfish, often called the "brittle star," which is the despair of collectors. It seems to make it a point of pride that none of its family shall be shown in a bottle or on a museum shelf. When taken from the water this starfish throws off its legs and also its stomachs. The story is told of one collector who thought that he had succeeded in coaxing a specimen into a pail only to see it dismember itself at the last moment.

W. H. Hudson describes the death-feigning habits of a small South African fox common on the pampas. If caught in a trap or overtaken, it collapses as if dead, and to all appearances is dead. The deception is so well carried out that dogs are constantly taken in by it. When one withdraws a little way from a feigning fox and watches him very attentively a slight opening of the eye may be detected. Finally, when left to himself, he does not recover and start up like an animal that has been stunned, but slowly and cautiously raises his head first and only gets up when his foes are at a distance.

"I was once riding with a gauche when we saw on the open level ground in front of us a fox not yet full grown, standing still and watching our approach. All at once it dropped, and when we came up to the spot it was lying stretched out, with eyes closed and apparently dead. Before passing on, my companion, who said it was not the first time he had seen such a thing, lashed it vigorously with his whip for some moments without producing the slightest effect."

Dogs show much the same tendency when they lie down meekly, with their heads down and tails tucked in, and invite a beating. Puppies are just as good at this as hardened veterans.

Some kinds of beetles, many of the woolly caterpillars which have poisonous hairs on their backs and numerous spiders adopt similar tactics. Even the weevil has the same trick, and rolls itself into a ball.

In the whole animal kingdom, if anything runs away, there is always found something to run after it. The badger, which defends itself wickedly when attacked, is often used for baiting.

Perhaps the commonest instance of passive resistance is the land tortoise, which draws up its front legs and pulls in its head and legs and defends its foes by locking them out.

Professional Advice.

Tramp—Would you give or pore man not be starvin' somethin' to eat?

The Pursuit of Art.

"Is your papa making any purchases from the exhibit?"
"Not yet. It is so hard to find what he wants."

"What is he looking for? Landscapes or figures?"
"It really doesn't matter so much, if the picture is of a size that will fit the odd shaped space on the wall over the fireplace."—Chicago Tribune.

THE FIRST ONE.

I loved a girl when I was young,
A girl I dared not try to kiss;
Our love was shy and found no tongue,
But eyes told tales we could not miss.

The years have stretched a lifetime now,
And I have loved more girls than one;
And I have kissed with deepest vow,
And kissed before I knew 'twas done.

And that first girl I never met
After her pigtail coiled her head;
And I can't say my eyes were wet
When someone told that she was dead.

Yet there it is; she is the one,
The only one of women all,
Now that the list is closed and done,
Whom dreams of day and night recall.

Only last night she came to me,
Still silent came, as shy and sweet,
And then I learned what life might be—
Dream-dawn I sought my sweetheart's feet.

I laid my head upon her breast;
Within that haven reached at last,
There came no echo save of rest,
From all the lifelong years' past.

To each poor dog his day, we're told;
Of my queer luck here is the best;
I dreamed that girl, forgot of old,
Caressed my head against her breast.

PETE'S PULL WITH THE POWERS.

ON the dry, sun-parched crest of the mountain, four thousand feet above the desert dust, reposed the Nymph, the "Sea Nymph," little scow schooner, twenty tons burden, Pete Nicholson, master; master and builder, mate and owner, crew and cook, in one. The ship's cat alone shared watch with Pete. She was crouched on the end of the bowsprit, alertly watching a bevy of quail, scratching in the shade of the prow. Suddenly she pricked up her ears, her eyes dilated, and without further hesitation she scrambled aloft, upsetting in her flight a stack of survey maps. Pete was mending sails by the cabin door.

"What's ahoj, Matilda?" he cried.
"What's ahoj?"
Then he listened. He caught the sound of horse hoofs on the flinty rocks. He heard the cracking of a twig, and then the creaking of a saddle. The next instant a cowboy rode into view.

SPURRED HIS HORSE AND HURRIED ON.

"Hello, there, captain! Seen any stray steers up this way?"
"Nary a steer, Antonio; nary a steer. How's things down the canyon?"

"Hotter than ever. Water holes all dry except old 'Olla.' Grady's lost thirty head in the last week."
"It won't last, it won't last. Mark my word, Antonio, we'll have water; plenty of it."

"You've preached water for the last five years, and it's getting scarcer all the time."

Antonio slid off his horse, tied it to a tree, and, clearing a space on deck among the scattered papers, he sat down to a chess with Pete.

"Good to hear, that. Got any more in the hold?"

"Plenty, so long as it lasts."

The two played in silence for a while. Pete continued his mending, his strong frame bent to the task, his brown hands deft with the needle. Antonio flipped pebbles at the cat till she came down and disappeared aft.

"Say, Pete, what's the use wasting time on them cats?"

"Wasting time, you call it. Well, I'm not going to be caught with torn sails. Port's the place to get ready in. I've been hid up here for five years waiting for a favorable breeze, and it'll come, mark my word, it'll come."

"Brooze enough, captain, but don't you think you need a little moisture; just a little?"

Pete shifted his tobacco tin, and spat overboard and replied:

"That's just it, Antonio. You've struck it right. I was telling Matilda last night that was all I was lacking for smooth sailing. And we'll get it, too."

His eyes grew bright with enthusiasm.

"We'll get it," he continued. "That blasted hole of a desert down there was once the bottom of the sea, and the water's coming back. It's going to be again. It's too economical to waste a good basin like that. We're partial to water. He and I. Didn't He make three-quarters sea and only one-quarter land? That's proof enough, Antonio. He's mighty partial to oceans, and He won't waste such a chance as that," waving his hand toward the hazy desert. His face was glowing with conviction.

"So, you see, I keep thinks ship-shape, ready to sail."

"Well, good luck to you, Pete. You don't want water more than we do down in the canyon though. But if you've got a pull with the powers, Pete, have it fresh. It's better for drinking purposes."

Antonio remounted and rode down the steep, shifting trail, leaving the bright-eyed captain, sewing industriously in the sunlight.

"Poor old ludy," said the "why-to-himself." "He's too smart—to be wasted. What with his surveying and planning, he might be of some use. Must be mighty lonesome up there, alone; enough to turn any man's brain."

He spurred his horse and hurried on toward the beach. The boys were there, and they were not ludy.

A few days later they were all at breakfast in the adobe outhouse. At that early hour the sunshine gave promise of intense heat to come. The air was still and stifling. Occasionally the hoarse bellowing of a thirsty cow mingled with the rattling of tin cups and plates, and a smell of yucca blossoms mixed with the bacon fumes. Over the rocky shoulder of the mountain a great white cloud appeared.

"There's a thunder shower coming," said Antonio.

"Maybe, if it don't change its mind," said another. "The clouds all blow away this year."

"That one's coming all right. Hear it bang!"

Cloud after cloud massed in the blue—great soft puffs of white, until, covering the sun, their glory changed to somber gray, deepening on the horizon to violet. Flashes of lightning streaked the blackness, and distant rumbling blended with nearer reports.

"It's a tough old storm, boys, but it's bringing water."

And then, with a suddenness which left no time for words, a great black blanket-like cloud descended on the mountain above the camp. Instantly the men ran for higher ground. They knew the peculiarities of the cloudburst. They knew that landslides were imminent, and their canyon the vehicle of escaping waters. But to the usual characteristics of such occurrences was now added a phenomenon such as man had never seen.

The terrific force of the cloudburst had shattered the top of the peak, washing it, with a mighty volume of water, down the mountain side, covering the canyon into a veritable river. In midstream, sails set to the wind, danced the Sea Nymph. At her bow, Matilda, howling in terror; at the halyards, Pete Nicholson, plying his long-unused skill as sailor—his huge muscles straining at the ropes, thick with sweat, his face ashy, his eyes wild, and his voice raised in joyful cries.

"Heave ho, my lads!" he yelled, as he passed the silencing group of men huddled on the hill.

"Heave ho, heave ho, heave ho!" The torrent bore him round a curve, and his voice was lost in the roaring storm.

"Get the horses!" cried Antonio, and the men with one accord rushed for their broncos. Over the sliding trails they chased—now catching a glimpse of the plunging Sea Nymph, now losing her in a bend. On, on they rode by the racing river.

"She's give out, boys! She can't stand the strain. On, on! she's lost!"

It was a tough work of rescuing the lariat did their part. The animal had spent itself, and the waters were subsiding. They found Pete unconscious, and they took him to camp. The Sea Nymph was bottom up on the rocks, and Matilda was safe on top.

When Pete opened his eyes he looked for Antonio.

"Plenty of water, eh?" he said.

Then he sat up excitedly.

"The maps, the drawings, boys! Save them! Never mind me, but get the maps!"

He closed his eyes again in a stupor which lasted for weeks. Things were straightened out in that time. His brain had rested, and he awoke to sanity and to his rescued maps.

That was twenty years ago. To-day the cattle have gone from the range, and with them the cowboys, and in their place orchards thrive, vineyards yield, and settlers bring their lands from the great reservoirs built by the government, under the supervision of the eminent civil engineer, Peter Nicholson. The water has come to stay, for "Pete had a pull with the powers."

Had All Around.

"True. And she talks about them so much that she makes everybody else sick."—Detroit Tribune.

Teddy's First Pockets.

"I want pockets in my new pants," said Teddy.

"You are too little," said mamma.

"Please, mamma!" Teddy pleaded. "Pockets go with pants. All the big boys have them."

"Well," mamma replied, "I suppose you must have them. Yes, I will put some in."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Aunt Emily. "Clara, you don't mean to let that baby have pockets? He will have them full of rubbish and in a dreadful condition all the time. He's too little for trousers, to say nothing of pockets."

But mamma put the pockets in, and Ted was happy. He went round with his hands in those little snuggeries, feeling very proud and grown-up, and trying to whistle, and by and by he began to put things into them.

"If I had the darned cotton I would mend the stockings," said grandma. "but it isn't in the basket."

"Here it is," said Teddy, taking a little black ball out of his right pocket. "I found it behind the door, grandma. I didn't know it was darn-cotton; I thought it was just string."

"You didn't happen to find my pen, did you?" asked Sister Sue. "I lost it yesterday, and I can't find it anywhere."

"Yes," said Teddy. "It was in the waste basket. I picked it out and put it in your pocket. I didn't know it was yours, Susie," he said as he passed it to her.

Pretty soon mamma could not find her thimble. "I had it this morning," she said, "and all at once I missed it. I am sorry, for it was the one you gave me, Emily."

"Here it is," said Teddy. "I found it down in the pansy bed. I meant to give it to you, but I forgot."

"It must have fallen off the window-sill," said mamma. "I remember now; I was sitting by the garden window."

That afternoon sister Mary asked if anybody had seen a button, for she had lost one off her blue dress; Tom inquired if anybody had run across his jack-knife, which he was using at noon and mislaid; Johnny heeded a piece of string in a hurry; and grandma could not find a little nail. All these things Teddy produced as they were wanted.

"I take it all back, Ted," said aunt Emily, laughing. "Your pockets certainly are the most useful ones in the family. You don't happen to have a box of chocolates, do you?"

"No," Teddy replied, soberly, "but I have some candy that isn't chocolate. Mr. Smith gave it to me. It's laffy."

Aunt Emily laughed again. "There, Clara," she said, "I told you so!"—Youth's Companion.

When I Grow Up.

Our grocer's clerk comes every day, though why he should I cannot say, for, for another mostly orders beans, and soap and mustard, salt and grease, and tea and starch, and lard and rice—so much of anything that's nice.

Food for some folks may seem best, but degree excites my interest. When I grow up, my grocer's clerk will very seldom need to work; the butcher's boy I'll ask to call just once in a while and once in a while.

Will have the candy boy call twice each day, and sometimes even thrice. Mornings it will be best, I judge, to order caramels and fudge; at night, a box of chocolate creams, to make me sure of pleasant dreams!

I mean to have the toy-shop man stop just as often as he can. New toys grow tiresome soon, you know; and then, one's friends do break them.

So! Reigh-hot what bliss will fill my cup when I grow up! When I grow up! Youth's Companion.

A Pleasant Afternoon Tea.

Oh, let me fill your cup again! There's quite enough for me. I'm always so delighted when a friend comes in to tea.

Now how is Polly getting on? (Sugar?) Only one? And is spring cleaning over? I have only just begun. But after so much dusting, this is pleasant rest for me.

And oh, there's lots to talk about when you come in to tea.

Robert on Business.

"What are you going to do when you grow up, Robert?" asked the visitor.

"I'm going to be a business man," said Robert. "Pop took me down to a business last week and I'm going to be like him and work and have a good time."

"What are you going to do in business?" asked the visitor.

"I'm going to do just like pop. I'm going to catch the cat every morning and when I get down town I'm going to light a great big cigar and sit down at my desk and say that there's so much work to do it ain't hardly any use beginning till after lunch. And then I'll go out with another big man and we'll eat and eat until we can't eat any more and then we'll go back to the business and I'll ask everybody else why the work ain't done and then I'll get so mad because nobody does anything that I'll go home early and be all tired after I get home so I can't do a thing except to read the paper and smoke more great big cigars."

Trick with Dominoes.

The performer asks the audience to match the blocks of a set of dominoes so that the number laid together corresponds. While this is being done he leaves the room. Returning, he announces the number of spots on the two last blocks.

Solution.—The performer secretly removes a block bearing no double number of spots. The number of spots on this block must be the end numbers on the set. To avoid detection it is advisable to change the block when the trick is to be repeated.

Washington's Horses.

General Washington was a splendid horseman. There was no animal he could not master, and he never lost his seat in the saddle. Fox hunting was one of his favorite amusements, and at the meet few of his friends or neighbors were better mounted than he. He usually rode a large, fiery animal of great endurance, called Blue-skin. The names of some of his other horses were Chinkling, Vaillant, Ajax and Magnolia.

"POLLY PORTER."

A Parrot Who Never Forgot What He Once Had Learned.

Perhaps all parrots have equally remarkable memories, but twenty-five years' acquaintance with "Polly Porter" enables me to say that he never forgets what he has once learned. Like other parrots, when he is alone he exercises his memory, as if amusing himself. Then it is that Polly Porter chatters in sentences; laughs aloud, hysterically; calls, in various tones, commandingly or beseechingly; calls the names of servants who, but for Polly, would have been forgotten; calls the cat, whistles for dogs who were about him years ago.

Polly's cage is in the bow window of the dining room—a good place for keeping an eye on the family. When the father rises from the breakfast table Polly advises: "Hurry! Hurry up! Hurry!"

Later, with the first movement preparatory to the children's start for school, he repeats sharply: "Hurry up! Hurry up! Hurry!"

When a guest comes in he says briskly, "Why, how d'ye do?"

When he calls "Good-by" to persons passing on the street it seems almost certain that he reasons about the coming and departing guest. He quickly notices little children; coming to one particular corner of the bottom of his cage he flutters before a little one, attempting baby talk, which is very funny, ending with "Beautiful child! Beautiful child!" and a loud laugh.

When the house is quiet and his mistress has a visitor in the parlor Polly craves attention.

He repeats the names, almost as if he were reading the roll, in sweet, low tones. He says "Mamma!" over and over, a child's voice, till it is common for a visitor to say, "Do answer that child, or some one is calling you." He is very near to talking tales, but he is not.

"Ah, ah! naughty boy!" with great severity. Polly is most impatient at breakfast time, when he shrieks till he receives attention: "Polly wants coffee! Polly wants breakfast!"

He takes a piece of bread cautiously; examines it; if it is not well buttered he throws it down. He enjoys a bunch of grapes, holding it down with one claw while with the other and his beak he opens grape after grape, eats the seed and casts the pulp away. He easily crushes a pear or an apple to get at the seeds.

Last Christmas Polly was sent by his owner, a New York boy, to friends as a present. They were told of his liveliness and astonishing powers of speech.

For some months Polly moved and said nothing, but at last began calling members of the family by name. If let out of his cage he fought the pug and whined the cat; when shut up in his cage for punishment he would persistently work at the wires till he would force them apart and walk out defiantly. Recently he began upon his old lessons, and now repeats the cries of the newsboys in the street: "Extra! Extra! Journal Star! Herald!" and he sings quite well, "Yankee Doodle," which was taught him last summer.

Good-by, Polly!

THE WISE TREASURER.

How He Showed the King that Any Could Cheat Him.

There was once a king who was very vain of his sagacity.

"Can cheat me," he used to say. His old and wise treasurer better.

"Your officers are too clever for them."

He said this so often that at last the old treasurer determined to teach his royal master a lesson, and spoke thus to the king:

"Your majesty, I will prove to you that no one is too clever to be cheated. Give me even the humblest office and I will show you that the man who holds it can cheat both you and your people."

The king thought for a moment. Then he laughed and said: "I will make you the shepherd of my flock of sheep. I would like to see you cheat me, for I know that there are just 400 of them, and I shall expect you to give me an account of the flock to the last one."

The old treasurer smiled and withdrew. The next day he wrote to every city, village and estate in the kingdom saying that he had heard there was good pasture there and that he proposed to bring the king's sheep to browse there, which was the royal right.

Immediately the people of each place wrote to the new shepherd and promised him money if he would take the king's sheep somewhere else so that they could keep the pastures for themselves.

The wise old treasurer took all the letters to the king and said: "You can see now that even your shepherd can cheat you and your people if he will."

So the king was never so vain of his sagacity any more.

Highholts' Large Families.

Few birds have larger families than the highholts. But were it not for the number of his family, how could he hold a town among so many enemies?

His conspicuous size and color always make him a striking mark to the collector, for every village had in the land has collected a highholts. He is a fellow of expedition, however. If his home is robbed, his wife soon lays another set of eggs. It is on record that one pair, when tested by the removal of eggs after eggs, laid seventy-one eggs in seventy-three days.—St. Nicholas.

Town Council Meeting.
There was an informal meeting of Council last Saturday evening the object being to listen to the Telephone Company and the Firemen.
The proposed telephone ordinance was read, and seemed quite fair. Citizens asked Council to add that a phone be installed in each fire-house and in the pumping station, at a cost not to exceed six dollars each per year. A statement was made that a local fire alarm will be sent to each phone, from Central, during which time all business will be suspended.
The Fire Companies asked for the twelve dollars per year, to reimburse them for damaged clothing, etc. In turn, Council will insist on regular attendance at fires and drills, and possibly impose fines, as follows: for non-attendance at a fire, one dollar; absence from drill, fifty cents. They will also limit the membership of the down-town company to thirty-five, and the up-town to twenty.
Complaints were received from citizens in regard to the racket caused by gas engines at light plant; of incessant band practice at Third and Pleasant Streets; useless prowling and howling of dogs, and several other nuisances.

Sour Stomach
No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.
"Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says: 'I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby.'"
