HAMMONTON, N. J., SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1917

No. 31

Town Council meeting on next Wednesday evening.

John Young has accepted a position with the Prudential.

Born, on Thursday, Aug. 2nd, to Mr. and Mrs. Chester Ford, a son.

Mrs. E. M. Fairchild was down from Camden last Saturday, on business.

Editor Holmes, of the Medford "Central Record," was in town yesterday.

P. Dimeo, an aged Italian resident, succumbed to a heat stroke on Tuesday.

Mrs. Tomlin will spend August with her son, Dr. Hurlburt Tomlin, at Wildwood.

Mrs. C. S. Newcomb and Miss Minnie will spend this month with relatives in Brooklyn.

Fred Measley, Sr., is quite ill in a hospital in Philadelphia. His friends here hope for his ultimate recovery.

The Board of Trade expect to hold a meeting of importance next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Frank Horu and son, from Atlantic City, are here, visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel B. Reed.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, of Philadelphia, are spending a month in Hammonton, stopping at the "Jackson."

Frank Emery is now sexton in Greenmount Cemetery; but he has been there before, and understands the business.

Al. Powell has moved to Clementon, where he has a good position. He was a very satisfactory sexton at Greenmount Cemetery.

Regular meeting of Woman's Civic Club next Tuesday, Aug. 7, three o'clock, at the Club House. Your attendance requested.

Samuel L. Drake was in town on Saturday and Sunday. On a business trip from Florida, he turned aside to visit his mother.

The Baptist "Bulletin," which will be out to-morrow, will contain a very striking illustration, drawn by one of the Sunday School pupils.

W. O. Hoyt was in Bristol, Pa., on Wednesday, as a witness for the relatives in a case concerning the estate of Keziah Anna Ramsey, deceased.

Don't forget that your attendance at Litke's picture show, next Wednesday evening, will help the War Relief Committee of Needlework Guild.

J. F. Jenison lost a fine horse last Saturday, from some unknown cause. Was taken suddenly sick, and died after about six hours of constant pain.

The Thimble Bee at Woman's Civic Club will be discontinued during the exceedingly hot weather. Kindly call Mrs. Little for information as to work.

Dr. W. E. McIlvaine resigned his position with the munitions corporation, and enlisted, having a very satisfactory appointment in the Medical Corps.

Lieut. J. C. Bitter was at home on a furlough, over Sunday, also on Thursday. He likes the work to which he has been assigned, in the new camp at Wrightstown.

Red Cross Society.

This is especially Red Cross week, although effort will be made continually to increase the membership. It is hoped to enroll an even thousand in Hammonton before October 1st. Small children, and even babies, are encouraged to join. Miss Dorcas Bitter is at present the youngest member of the local branch.

Churches and organizations are urged to form auxiliaries. Elwood has a branch of the Hammonton Society.

To-day will be a big enrollment day. Besides the canvassers from house to house, the Civic Club House will be open all day, with ladies in attendance. A lady will also be stationed in the Post-office with blanks and receipt books.

Workingmen's Loan Association meets on Monday evening next.

At their adjourned meeting last Friday evening, Town Council decided to reject all bids for a motor-drawn hose wagon, the lowest figures exceeding the amount they had appropriated.

Bathers and residents near the Dam, who circulated the petition to have the nets removed from the gates, wish to thank the Board of Health for their prompt investigation and action in the matter.

At noon on Thursday, the last concrete was laid on the Bellevue Avenue paving, making connection at Third Street. It will take two weeks or more to harden, and some little time to clear away the debris on each side.

Sympathy is felt in Hammonton in the death of Jonathan Weeks, Jr., of Weckstown, a nephew of Mrs. Charles Sorden. He was drowned in the river at Greenbank on Monday evening. Members of the family attended Hammonton Schools the past term.

Harry A. Crossdale, in Medical Department of U. S. A., was home on a two days furlough this week. He has been assigned to transport duty, and has been "somewhere in France," and expects to go several times more. He speaks of an eventual voyage, and enjoys his work very much.

Mrs. Theodore B. Brown died on Sunday morning, July 29th, in Philadelphia, after prolonged illness aged 84 years. She, with her late husband, were residents here for many years, holding the esteem of hosts of friends. Burial service was held at Greenmount Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon.

The Baptist Sunday School are planning an enjoyable time at their picnic excursion, next Tuesday, at Lenape Park, May's Landing. In case of rain (which is unusual on picnic days), they will go on Wednesday. Trucks will start from the church at eight o'clock, sharp. Price for round-trip ticket, fifty cents.

A proposition has been made to Volunteer Fire Company, by a large carnival company. If agreed upon, they will spend a week in town, bringing a small train load, including ferris wheels, merry-go-rounds, whip, side-shows (but no woman exhibitions) and various other amusements not of a gambling nature.

Mrs. Mary B. Brown, widow of the late P. H. Brown, died Friday night, Aug. 27th, aged 88 years. She had been feeble for a long time. With her husband, she came to Hammonton about 1865, and both won and held the esteem of neighbors and associates to the end. An earnest Christian, her example was one which all might well follow. Funeral services at the home, on Tuesday, conducted by her pastor, Rev. B. vanDright.

Yes, we have a library in Hammonton. It is located at the Civic Club, open Wednesday and Saturday. We have a splendid assortment of books on different subjects. Come in and look over our list; spend an hour or two there at your leisure, any time that it is open. There are some current magazines always on the table, for your perusal. New books coming: "Red Planet," "My Home in the Field of Honor," and a dozen others.

We desire to express our thanks to the many friends and acquaintances for the interest shown and sympathy extended during the illness and upon the occasion of the death of our mother. It was especially pleasing to us, and very highly appreciated, coming as it did from old friends and neighbors of 1865, and of later dates down to the present. It was also highly gratifying in that it came not only from members of the religious society with which she had long been associated, but also from all others represented in the community. We shall ever entertain a most kindly feeling for all.

CERTAINLY not, you man!" Conway, ironmaster, looked rather superciliously at the good-looking young fellow who stood with downcast eyes before his fact! I have strict instructions from him to ask if I can to increase the revenue of the estate, and I must do my duty by my employer."

"This unctuous talk from a man who had been a hard taskmaster in the old squire's time, and who was hated by everybody, and especially by those who flattered him most, sickened Gladys. She felt an utter loathing for him. Besides, she knew, deep down in her heart, that this was but his prettily way of revenge. But she did not anticipate a renewal at such time as this of his former procreations."

"You stand in your own light, Miss Gladys," he said. "Yes, and in your mother's as well. I must let the cottage. That is my plain duty. You say there is not another house for miles to which you could go. There is. There's mine—for you—and your mother, too."

"I had always been one of his subtle babbles to sin Mrs. Conway for all she was worth, and to Gladys he knew also wrote everything."

"For your mother, too," he said, and looked at the flushed face of the schoolmistress from under his thick brows.

"I—I—would—rather—you—didn't mention this—matter again," said Gladys, hardly knowing what she did say.

"That's final, then," he said, twisting viciously on his heel. "In the future you go your way, a foolish and a hard way. I go mine. If you think better of it, in the course of the day, after you have seen your mother, well, we shall see."

The next morning she found her mother in tears over an open letter.

"Gladys—oh, Gladys—what shall we do? What—what shall we do? It means the workhouse. Road that!"

Gladys did not need to "read that," but she took the letter as it was handed, upon handling a serpent. It was just working up to this point since morning.

"I was just thinking, Gladys," she said, "that you must not think of sacrificing yourself to Isaac Sharp. Let him do his worst. If he turns me out of my home, I'll go to my mother. I'll beg your pardon. I thought it was my daughter. She has just gone down to the rose garden with the new acquaintance, Mr. George."

"I must apologize if I startled you," said the stranger. "I'm an old friend, and know George well. Did I hear Isaac Sharp mentioned? The estate belongs to him, doesn't it?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Conway, afraid to commit herself.

"What house, may I ask, are you to be turned out of? The one you live in now, or the one you are going to live in now, acting so arbitrarily?"

"No, but I don't suppose he knows a thing about it. Here's the letter I got this morning," Mrs. Sharp took as he spoke.

A curious look came over the stranger's face as he read the letter. He looked up quickly.

"What's something about sacrificing herself? Did you refer to your—daughter? If I see the suite I ought to be well posted."

"Well, you see," said Mrs. Conway, waxing confidential now that she found herself so unexpectingly face to face with the man who had so long ago married her daughter, "Isaac Sharp wants Gladys to marry him. That's the root of the trouble. He would not have dreamt of turning us out of our home if he could have encouraged him. In my trouble this morning I advised her to marry him for my sake. You see, since Mr. Conway's failure and death, she has been alone."

"I notice the name Conway on the letter. But don't—Mr. Oswald Conway or Maplebank?" said the stranger, looking at the letter.

"That's the name of the man to whom Isaac Sharp, Conway was too short-sighted to see."

"Yes, the frontman. Perhaps you know him," she said, as the case closed, if Gladys has to—"

"Where did you say they were—Gladys? Miss Conway—and little George?"

"They went down to gather me a bunch of roses," said Mrs. Conway. "They are great chums. She might be a little late, but I'll be home soon."

"I'll just run down and see if I want to see George. He knows me well."

"I'm certainly did. I gave a yelp of delight and rushed at the new-comer crying "Daddy, daddy!"

A minute later he remembered his duty.

"Come, daddy," he said, "and see the lady I'm going to marry so she can be my very own mother."

He dragged his father towards the bushes, and then he led him to the bushes. But though she was invisible to them, they were by no means invisible to her. She would have been a good deal more than a peeping Tom, she and her father. His heart was beating a tattoo, just as it did on that

HE WAS RIP HIMSELF

Joseph Jefferson need to tell a story of his visit to a village in the Catskill Mountains. He was taking a coup of tea in the hotel when he heard a group of men talking about a certain account of legends. "Yes, sah," he continued, "Rip went into de mountains to see his folks, but he never come back here in thirty years, and his own folks didn't know him." "Why," said the listener, "you don't know what he was like then?" "I know it is. Why," pointing at him, "de man."

HARBERS IN JAPAN

In Japan not only men but women go to the barber if there be any sign of hair on their faces; they do not care to be shaved, but they grow up which the Japanese are often accustomed to see left uncombed on the heads of some Western women who have been in Japan for a few years. In recent years the female barber has become a feature of the profession in Tokio, and the Japanese women who are barbers who wish to make themselves useful to their husbands, though men are independent. Barber shops are everywhere and often a large addition to themselves. Equipped with a razor they wander from master to master as the spirit moves them, and consequently they become dress-makers.

Columbia the Gem of the Ocean

O, Columbia, the gem of the ocean,
The home of the brave and the free,
The shrine of each patriot's devotion,
A world offers homage to thee!
Thy mandates make heroes assemble
When Liberty's form stands in view,
Thy banners make tyrants tremble
When borne by the red, white and blue,
When borne by the red, white and blue,
When borne by the red, white and blue,
Thy banners make tyrants tremble
When borne by the red, white and blue.

When war waged its wide desolation,
And threatened this land to deform,
The ark then of freedom's foundation,
Columbia rode safe thro' the storm.
With the garlands of victory around her,
When so proudly she bore her brave crew,
With her flag proudly floating before her,
The boast of the red, white and blue,
The boast of the red, white and blue,
The boast of the red, white and blue,
With her flag proudly floating before her,
The boast of the red, white and blue.

The star spangled banner bring hither,
O'er Columbia's true sons let it wave;
May the wreaths they have won never wither,
Nor its stars cease to shine on the brave.
May the service united ne'er sever,
But hold to their colors so true;
The army and navy forever!
Three cheers for the red, white and blue!
Three cheers for the red, white and blue!
Three cheers for the red, white and blue!
The army and navy forever!
Three cheers for the red, white and blue!

Our Favorite Songs.

How many remember the words?

STAR SPANGLED BANNER.

O, say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming?
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?

O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming.
And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there,
O, say, does that star spangled banner yet wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On the shore dimly seen thro' the mists of the deep,
Where's the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected, now shines o'er the stream:
'Tis the star spangled banner, O, long may it wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

AMERICA.

My country 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring!

My native country, thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love;
I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills,
My heart with rapture thrills
Like that above.

Let music swell the breeze,
And ring from all the trees
Sweet freedom's song;
Let mortal tongues awake;
Let all that breathe partake;
Let rocks their silence break,
The sound prolong.

Our fathers' God, to thee,
Author of liberty,
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King!
