MR. EDITOR:—I received, through the post-office, a document issued by a "committee" (their names being omitted for reasons best known to themselves) that I judge to be of but little account in justice. What justice in a few in a community clubbing together and stalling candidly their purpose and position, and confidently, too, (having conferred with eminent lawyers, a class whose interest it is to have ways and means that they have something to do for gain) and make rules for the mass of producers to be governed by.

As to the confusion and noise attendant upon public traffic, it looks as if the old saw would apply,—“Strain at a goat and swallow a camel.” The railroads are capable of making much more noise than the poor and useful fruit growers. The difficulty with this committee's constituents is mostly in the “think.” If they would do as Z. M. suggested, the real injury inflicted upon them would be very light.

I think when any one writes on a subject, and withholds his name, it is a sign of doubt as to his being right. Not many years ago, there appeared in your paper an article on the Sunday question, signed H. The writer recommended agitation. Soon after, “Agitator” wrote a few lines, endorsing the plan, and quoted some of the prophet Isaiah's saying on the subject; and it seemed as if the article squelched the proposition, as never another scratch by H upon the subject. Whether this H be a mover in this League business, I know not, but this seems like a new tack, and as if argument was not safe, force thought more sure.

I will close by quoting two or three mottoes:

“That which may be thought right and found convenient in one age, may be thought wrong and found inconvenient in another.”

“Prejudices are like the knots in the glass of our windows,—they alter the shape of everything that we look at through them: they make straight things crooked, and everything looks blurred.”

“Men who look upon themselves born to rule, and others to obey, soon grow insolent.”

P. S. Since writing the above, I find myself arrested for immoral conduct, inasmuch as I found a few of my berry crates in the street, put them in the wagon and drove on the public way home, molesting no one more than if driving homeward empty-handed. My respects tendered to the informer.

A peaceable citizen of the sixth community in my time, but now, in the sixth month of the seventeenth year of my life, arrested for a heinous crime.

TIRED OUT!

At this season nearly every one needs to use some sort of tonic. BROWN'S IRON BITTERS enters into almost every physician's prescription for those who need building up.

For Weakness, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, etc., it HAS NO EQUAL, and is the only iron medicine that is not injurious. It enriches the blood, invigorates the system, restores appetite, aids digestion. It does not blacken or injure the teeth, cause headache or produce constipation—other iron medicines do. Dr. G. H. BIRKLEY, a leading physician of Springfield, Ohio, says:—“Brown's Iron Bitters is a thoroughly good medicine. I use it in my practice, and find its action exceeds all other forms of iron. In weakness, or low condition of the system, Brown's Iron Bitters is usually a positive necessity. It is all that is claimed for it.” Dr. W. N. WALKER, 1213 Thirty-second Street, Georgetown, D. C., says:—“Brown's Iron Bitters is the Tonic of the age. Nothing better. It creates appetite, gives strength and improves digestion.” Genuine has above Trade Mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other. Made only by BROWN CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

THE LATEST IN CANES.

A Brooklyn Dealer's Chat About the Woods Now in Use.

"The very latest in canes is the basket stick," said a Fulton street shoemaker. "It resembles a miniature tree, is big at the end and has a large body. Here is one. You see that the wood is finely grained and that the bark is genuine. The stick cost seventy-five cents and one dollar, and are much affected by impecunious young men who are the New York crowd. Cane is not a new thing, but brought to the city in carloads. In some mountainous districts many of the inhabitants do nothing else but cut and split cane wood. In one factory in New York over ten thousand canes are turned out daily. They are hewed and turned wholly by machinery. Expert cane-makers can earn big wages."

"What are the principal woods now in use?"

"Florida oak, English hazel, dogwood, thorn, boxwood, apple, mulberry, chestnut, willow, orange, yucca, red gum, cedar, chestnut, hickory, pear, lignumvite and bog oak. The last named wood comes from Ireland and makes a most handsome stick. The natives are quite clever at carving. They ornament the canes with shamrock, harp and tulips, while on some canes in which the Blarney Stone is said to be locked up are carved. Here is a perfect bog oak. You can see that while the carving is rough it is well executed. The line lines show the best. The work is all done by hand, and to carve a stick as this one must be the work of many days. Bog oak is found in the bogs of Ireland. The older the wood the better stick it is. I should wonder but that the work of which this stick is made has lain in the water for a hundred years. No gold-headed canes are now considered fashionable. They are affected by elderly men, but the canes will be worn as long as the duds continue to exist. I heard the other day that a fashionable young man, a resident of Brooklyn, was poisoned by sucking a cane, the head of which contained brass, but probably this was a libelous tale," said the man of canes without blushing.

Continuing, the reporter's informant said:

"Bogwood and rosewood are the stick sticks. They are appreciated because of their strength, and surely what can be more handsome than a huge silver-tipped stick with a gold head? Silver-tipped sticks sell as high as ten dollars, but many of those sold by unscrupulous dealers contain less than two dollars' worth of silver. The fraud is often practiced in gold-headed canes, which sell from twenty dollars up. The blackthorn stick has had its day and is now a little used. The cane is perhaps more popular in America than England. In the latter country it is considered a weakness for a man to carry a cane and they are not affected by the cane mania. The canes are preferable in summer. In umbrellas have many novelties are shown. The natural wood handle is best. The cane is for a rainy day, but many prefer gold and silver handles. Yes, there is a profit in this business, but not so big as many people imagine," said the cane man in conclusion.

CHARMING TOYS FOR BOYS.

One of the pleasantest children's playthings that we have seen for some time is called "the young protector pistol," a plaything, moreover, which can be carried about in the pocket. Parents will be gratified to learn that in this pretty toy a pellet may be driven clean through a half-inch board, at a distance of twenty feet. The scientific value of this toy may find pleasure in calculating how far a pellet that would go "clean through a half-inch board" might pierce the own individual. The toy is a valuable addition to the list of the already rich treasures of a school-boy's pocket for the low price of 75c. (by post, 75c. 9d.) is a matter for agreeable reflection. The toy is a simple one, would be a safe, provided one could be sure that a boy would endeavor to take aim at once with it, but if he were to try to hit a bird or a dog, he would not guarantee that an accident might not happen. It is pleasant to read that "several thousands" of the "young protector pistol" have already been sold, and so great has been its success that its makers have been "induced" to bring out another pistol, costing less, more, which will "fire a half-inch pellet with the greatest accuracy." This beautiful instrument is about four inches long, and might be mistaken by the uninitiated for a Derringer. It is a comfort to think that every other boy one needs may have one of these weapons in his pocket. But the nicest of all playthings for children that has come under my notice is a "powerful six-chamber revolver," which can be obtained at a certain toy shop for 6d. Like the other pistols that we have noticed, it has the advantage of being without any guard for the trigger. It is a toy, and has the future young man as its object. It is a toy, and is a very safe person, but a boy, of course, always is. Children whose parents object to their using firearms may console themselves by having a well-known toy shop a sword-cane having "all the appearance of an ordinary walking-stick, the sword being inside the stick," for 15c. By the way, we wonder if there is any shop now where birch rods are sold.

ENTERTAINING SPORT.

Hunting Poisonous Reptiles on the Shores of Lake George.

Perhaps in no part of the country can be found a more desirable place for the seeker of recreation and rest to spend his vacation than on the shores of Lake George. The clearness of its waters and wild beauty of its mountain surroundings, its fine atmosphere, and its historic recollections make it a place of more than common interest to the tourist. Its facilities for hunting and fishing are unsurpassed. There is one kind of game that is hunted with much zeal by lovers of this sport, which is seldom mentioned as an attraction to the region. This is the hunting of rattlesnakes on the mountain ledges and rocky hillsides every spring. Several of our oldest residents make a trip each spring, when the weather becomes warm enough, to the home of the reptiles of which there are several well-known dens on the lake. Mr. Harshel Colvin, of Glen Falls, and Reuben Ripley of Lake George, have long been noted for their annual rattlesnake hunts. This year Mr. Colvin returned home much disgusted, having only killed twelve snakes. Their mode of capturing them is dangerous, to say the least. Taking their guns they proceeded to the places where the rattlers are wont to assemble and be at about among the rock until one is discovered. Then they shoot him. Sometimes they appear suddenly to the hunter. The sensation is not so pleasant. The snakes are hunted for the sport, but some old hunters have great faith in their oil, which they claim is very penetrating and a great remedy for rheumatism. The killing of large numbers of them in the spring lessens the number to wander abroad all around the lake later in the season, to the annoyance of cottage campers and hotel-keepers.

For as soon as hot weather begins the snakes leave their dens and roam over the surrounding country. They are great swimmers and swim across the lake and make no choice of a landing place. Those interested have men engaged the season through in killing rattlers. Each morning they go out with a pole and poke into all places where a snake might be hidden and kill all they may find. In some spots a man is kept on the watch at all times for snakes, so that boarders at hotels as visitors rarely leave a snake. In fact, there is not an attendant at a hotel on the lake who can be entirely sure that he ever saw a rattlesnake, to say nothing about killing one. In spite of all this watching a rattler will manage to get into a house once and awhile, and then there is music for a short time among the ladies. Old campers on the lake who have visited it for years can seldom be forced to admit that there are many snakes there, unless they may be involved in telling snake stories, then one gets an idea of snakes. Two species of rattlesnakes exist, there, but as a rule they will trouble no one if not disturbed. No cases of anybody being bitten by a snake is recorded unless he was engaged in hunting them or had invaded their dens. An old snake hunter several years ago became so careless that in trying to capture one he undertook to catch the snake by a tail as he slipped under a stone, and was bitten. Not enough whiskey could be got into him, and he never hunted any more rattlesnakes. Most experienced campers keep a supply of snake-root and whiskey on hand in case it should be needed.

HAIRS ON PLANTS.

How They Serve in Many Ways as a Help and Protection.

The surface of many plants is covered with hairs. These hairs are usually slender outgrowths of the epidermal cells, and may consist of rows of cells placed end to end. The end cell may be sharp pointed or consist of a nearly spherical body. Many of the hairs branch so as to give the plant a woolly or felt-like covering. Some plants have stiff hairs with sharp hooked points and these are easily broken off, after which an irritating fluid may flow out. Of such are the hairs upon the nettles. The structure of the hairs upon plants is so various that it is natural for any one to inquire as to the use of these surface outgrowths. When we look at the buds which are formed in the autumn, and have the future young branches as their vital parts within it, it is found that the scales are thick and often covered with a dense growth of hairs. Over it all there may be a coat of varnish which serves to keep out the moisture. It is not difficult to see that in such cases the hairs serve as a protection. In short they help to keep the young inclosed tender parts from withering in much the same way that the hair upon the animal body is a protection against cold and other external trying circumstances.

In like manner the hairiness of ordinary leaves and stems may aid in protecting the plants that bear them. These hairs form a layer through which the liquids of the plants do not readily pass. This may be of great advantage, and it is a matter of general observation that plants which are at home in an arid situation most abound in hairs. Thus the grasses and even shrubs of the dry plains of this country are characteristically light colored, due to the multitude of hairs that cover the surface. The scale is so well observed that an expert man could easily claim the ability to determine the natural habitat of a plant by noting the nature of its epidermis.

It is true that the hairy covering may serve to protect the plant from animals which would otherwise feed upon, and possibly destroy it. In such cases the hairs are often large and stiff, and become disagreeable to the palate of the animal. But, however this may be, the chief use of hairs is to mitigate the sudden changes of temperature, and act as a check to rapid transpiration of moisture.

When we go below the surface of the soil the plan changes, and then the plants are provided with hairs for the purpose of increasing the absorbing surface exposed to the food-bearing particles of soil. These root hairs, as they are termed, are most abundant upon the young plants, and therefore are located where the surrounding circumstances are most favorable for the rapid taking up and quick transmission of the soil water.

Hairs serve many special purposes, as for example in the flowers, where they may form structures which materially aid in the cross-fertilization of plants through the visitation of insects. Deciduously a Farland Idea.

Paris has hit upon a new idea in cafe chandeliers. The spectator is first introduced into a pretty cafe, carpeted, elegantly furnished and lighted with gas dimmed by blue glass, which gives a soft and mysterious appearance to the surroundings.

From the drawing-room cafe one is introduced into another room, or rather a sort of passage or gallery, perfectly dark, along which are ranged comfortable chairs. Seated in one of these the spectator is then him a long ledge, into which are set framed pieces of glass, each about a foot square, one before each person. Looking closely there are seen in the glass the exact representation of the stage of a theatre; the scenery, curtain, etc., etc. In this miniature stage appears a performer three and a half inches high, who sings and dances in the usual cafe chantant style. This little stage, and indeed the stage itself, is simply a reduced copy thrown by some arrangement of light or reflection on the stage of the theatre. The actual performer who is singing on the other side of the partition. Every word is heard with perfect distinctness in the natural voice of the singer. Every expression, every color, the slightest jewels, even to the rings on the fingers, are reproduced in the figure three and a half inches high. Every facial expression may be seen as clearly as though one were looking on the real performer. They are excellent variety performances, and concerts are given in this way, singers, jugglers and dancers all being in miniature. Fifty-six reproductions of the stage are made in the manner described, and only fifty-six persons can see the performance at one time, so each has, in fact, a little stage all to himself. The management had sixty artists, including some of the best known in Paris, and it required an entire opera or play might be performed on this dwarf theatre.

Persian Antiquities in Paris.

It has been found necessary to close the gallery of antiquities which have been lately brought to Paris from the excavations among the ruins of Susa, the old capital of the Persian kings. The atmospheric influences were rapidly destroying the beautiful terra cotta objects, which had existed unharmed since the times of Darius and Artaxerxes, some 2,800 years ago. The wonderful enamel was blistering and cracking. After some consideration the experts it has been agreed to try a remedy for the preservation of the objects in similar cases. The endangered objects will be thoroughly smeared with pure permanganate and then related at a temperature of 200 degrees centigrade. The permanganate will penetrate into the enamel, and a fine transparent glaze will be formed that will defy the influences of the weather.

A Shrewd Old Chief.

The Indians on the Dilger reservation at Nevada have been invited to a number of them went in and witnessed the dance, but upon attempting to leave they found the old chief had the door who told them that it cost nothing to go in, but would cost 25 cents to leave.

A LITTLE girl wrote to Governor Gordon, of Georgia, for a lock of his hair. His excellency says she will have to wait until it grows longer. He doesn't want to give her all of it.

HAUNTED.

The Adjective Does Not Apply to Many Desecrated Mansions.

In some parts of London we may come upon several foreign and neglected-looking mansions, dispirited, with every window broken, covered inside with black dust and cobwebs, a picture of decay and desolation. The poorer inhabitants of the neighborhood explain this by saying that they hear their bleating coming on the night air, and the laughter of young men and maidens indulging in rustic sports. I look off into the street where flocks of sheep come and Rachel, a stranger, on the interesting errand of looking for a wife, comes to the well, and beautiful shepherds come to the same well. I see her approaching, followed by her father's flock of sheep. It was

A MEMORABLE MEETING.

Two young ladies were sitting together in a street car. One of them was very pale and thin and seemed to be suffering. At the next corner the invalid got up and left her seat. A gentleman, who was sitting opposite said to the remaining lady:

"Excuse me, I am a physician. I perceive your friend is an invalid."

"Yes," replied the lady, "she has a heart trouble."

"Probably an aneurism,"

"No; a West Point cadet."

OF A MAN (in amazement)—"Ten dollars a part for done as that?"

Life (very naturally mistaking the cause of his surprise)—"That's all, isn't it a bargain? Only ten dollars, just think of it."

"Oh, don't worry about that, dear. I was careful to make every allowance for that and got twice as many yards as usual."

BOARDING HOUSE CHAT.—"Why is marble cake so called?"

"Marble cake is so called because it is marble cake—carved out of the solid rock in Italy, and imported here at a great expense."

"What is the idea of that?"

"Economy. It's cheaper in the long run. You see a piece of genuine marble cake will last a long time. Now, here is a piece of cheap cake. It has been in the house ever since I came to town, thirteen years ago this summer. Examine it closely, and you will observe that it is somewhat as hard as the marble cake, and that it has some scratches. They were made by strangers who had extra good teeth. There's a spawl knocked off that has been in the house for the last of the Iron Jaw, who was through here last season with a circus."

DR. TALMAGH'S SERMON.

Watering the Sheep.

"We cannot, until the flocks be gathered together, and they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep." Gen. 29:10.

A SCENE in Mesopotamia, beautiful by pastoral. A well of water of great value in that region. The fields around about it white with three flocks of sheep. The shepherd, Jacob, is standing by the well, waiting for the flock of his brother, Esau, to come. He hears their bleating coming on the night air, and the laughter of young men and maidens indulging in rustic sports. ## DR. TALMAGH'S SERMON.

Watering the Sheep.

"We cannot, until the flocks be gathered together, and they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep." Gen. 29:10.

A SCENE in Mesopotamia, beautiful by pastoral. A well of water of great value in that region. The fields around about it white with three flocks of sheep. The shepherd, Jacob, is standing by the well, waiting for the flock of his brother, Esau, to come. He hears their bleating coming on the night air, and the laughter of young men and maidens indulging in rustic sports. I look off into the street where flocks of sheep come and Rachel, a stranger, on the interesting errand of looking for a wife, comes to the well, and beautiful shepherds come to the same well. I see her approaching, followed by her father's flock of sheep. It was

A MEMORABLE MEETING.

Two young ladies were sitting together in a street car. One of them was very pale and thin and seemed to be suffering. At the next corner the invalid got up and left her seat. A gentleman, who was sitting opposite said to the remaining lady:

"Excuse me, I am a physician. I perceive your friend is an invalid."

"Yes," replied the lady, "she has a heart trouble."

"Probably an aneurism,"

CURTIS F. OGDON, P. M.
A desperate battle has been raging for several days, in our otherwise quiet town. It is the result of a long-standing feud; and though much blood has been shed, the L. and O. League has taken no action toward the restoration of harmony. All classes seem to have taken sides, and on Sunday we saw and heard a minister, in the midst of his sermon, pause for an instant as he discovered one of the opposition present, and with a vigor worthy of a good cause, send the intruding mosquito. Let us have peace.

SATURDAY, AUG. 6, 1887.

LOCAL MISCELLANY.

The Fruit Growers' Union have purchased a new delivery wagon.

Mrs. W. B. Matthews and her children are visiting relatives at Pleasantville.

Masters Sam'l and Ernest Clark, of Holmeburg, Pa., spent the week among friends here.

The Town Council and assessors will meet to revise the assessment, on Tuesday, Aug. 16th.

Mrs. Annie Evans, Eleventh St., will sell household goods and farm tools at auction, Aug. 24th.

Notice the advertisement of A. H. Phillips, real estate and insurance agent, Atlantic City, on this page.

Lay in a good stock of fans,—the weather bureau predict another hot wave, which will prevail for at least two weeks.

We are told that Mr. William Black will move his present residence to an adjoining lot, and build a new house for his own use.

We understand that one of our most enterprising young men has bought the Weatherly place, Old Hammoncton, including the mill.

Mr. C. H. Wilson is to have a wind-mill and force-pump in the rear of his residence, to supply water for all household purposes.

Mrs. Ann Bakely has sold her farm and residence, on First Road, to a gentleman from Philadelphia, who will take possession Sept. 1st.

We went to Atlantic City, last Saturday evening, to witness "The Last Days of Pompeii." It is a grand entertainment, well worthy a visit.

Mr. O. E. Moore has sold his place, on Twelfth St., to Mr. Wood, of Philadelphia, and will move into the village and open a fish store and green grocery.

Those burglars turn out to be Thomas and Timothy Mulken, from Rancunyn, a hamlet near Vineland. Thursday's Record says that Thomas has been held in $5000 by the mayors of Sea Isle and Ocean City.

The Law and Order League on Monday last entered five or six complaints for violation of the Sunday law. A summons was issued in each case, by Justice Atkinson, returnable on Monday next, at 10 o'clock A. M.

St. Mark's Church, Ninth Sunday after Trinity, Aug. 7th. Morning Prayer, Litany, and Holy Communion at 10:30 A. M. Short Evening Prayer and Sermon, 4:30 P. M. The Rector has returned, and will officiate.

It is estimated that there have been 4,073,421,697,321 births in Hammoncton within ten days, and about 2,437,922,444 deaths. We have no reason to doubt this, for it seems as though we, ourselves, caused the death of nearly that number—of mosquitoes.

The contract for the building of a railroad from Pleasantville to Brigantine Beach has been awarded to Contractor Ryan, of Philadelphia. The road will be seven miles in length, and will connect with both the Pennsylvania and Reading systems.

Rev. Mr. Handell and wife are absent on their summer vacation,—consequently, the Presbyterian congregation have accepted an invitation to attend the Baptist Church for two Sundays. We feel like expressing our approval of the spirit which prompted the churches in this move.

Dr. J. M. Peebles returned, on Thursday, from his trip through England, Ireland, and Scotland, absent about two years ago. He came here with his family, renting a place on Fairview. Spending most of his time in the open air, working in the garden, he soon felt and showed signs of returning health, and was so much encouraged that he bought a farm on the corner of First Road and Thirteenth Street, and built a comfortable residence thereon. Last winter and spring seemed to affect him unfavorably, and in May he went to his former home in West Virginia, where his immediate relatives reside; but that treatment, and the best of care only comforted the patient in his decline.

Last week Mrs. Hoffman received a telegram, in response to which she started at once for Keyser, reaching her husband's bedside on Friday. Our sympathies are tendered to the afflicted ones, in their loss of a kind, affectionate, and thoughtful husband and father.

Mr. Robert Brown, of Columbia, had two horses killed by lightning, in their stable, last Monday. Had he insured with Rutherford, he would have been paid for the loss, as Mr. Rutherford always adds a "lightning clause" to every insurance he writes, free of charge, and no black-mailing in case of loss.

We were shown, this week, the drawings of Joseph Coast's new fruit jar. Judging from these, and the description, it will be an improvement upon anything of the kind now in use,—preserving the fruit more perfectly, and so secured that the smallest child will be able to open it with ease. A patent has been applied for, and the matter stands there for the want of a hundred or two of dollars with which to buy molds and pay for a few dozen jars for introduction into market. Mr. Coast will make good terms with any man or association who will furnish the money required. We believe it would prove a profitable investment, and would like to see some Hammonctonian take hold of it.

Harry Setley, for several years a resident of Hammoncton, died suddenly last Saturday evening, at his home, aged 42 years. Mr. Setley was a soldier during the rebellion, and afterward entered the U. S. Navy, serving there as Master's Mate. Through his frequent changes of climate, and exposure, he contracted rheumatic gout, and was placed on the sick-list. A patent has been placed on the sick-list. A patent has been placed on the sick-list.

Ordinance Committee requested to draw an ordinance regulating and licensing all kinds of shows coming into town.

Committee on Park reported that the proposed Park owners was not yet prepared to give the town a title.

Committee on railroad crossings reported that the P. & A. C. R. R. Co. would put up electric bells this week, and that the C. & A. R. R. Co. would put up safety gates just as soon as they possibly can.

Committee on detective (appointed at the special meeting) presented a bill of $22.25. On motion, Clerk instructed to draw an order for the town's proportion of the bill—$11.13.

Committee on hall and lock-up made their final report, and were discharged with thanks.

Highway Committee were instructed to see that shade-trees were properly trimmed wherever needed.

Voted to rent council-room to Hammoncton Loan and Building Association for one dollar per night, providing room is properly used.

Mr. Brown directed to purchase and set twelve hitching-posts on town lot. Adjourned.
