Pleasant Mills Church.

On Saturday and Sunday last, Pleasant Mills celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of the Little Church in the Pine.

The opening service, Saturday afternoon, was led by Pastor Casperson. He was followed by an interesting historical sketch of the church by Chas. F. Green, which was perhaps the most interesting part of the celebration.

Mr. Green had his sketch printed, in pamphlet form, which was sold at ten cents per copy for the benefit of the church. We are told there are a few copies left.

At three o'clock the Rev. J. Morgan Reed gave an address on One Hundred Years of Methodism.

Saturday evening, Kate Aylesford Chapter, D. A. R., took charge. The principal features were songs by Paul Seely, Mrs. D. M. Chapman, and Mrs. Rooney, with recitations by Mrs. T. E. Evans, a short sketch of the Chapter by Mrs. W. F. Bassett, and an exhibition of Indian club swinging by Mr. Honey.

The Sunday morning sermon was by Rev. L. O. Manchester, the oldest living ex-pastor.

In the afternoon an hour was devoted to addresses by former pastors. There were three present, Rev. J. Morgan Reed, and two others.

In the evening, former Presiding Elder Rev. D. B. Harris gave a masterly address, after song service.

BLOODLESS yet fiercely contended is the campaign now in progress on American soil. The weapons used are the printing press and the millions are enlisted in the opposing armies, and the prize at stake is the nation's future. The contest has been going on for years. Indeed, a Presidential contest has come to be a battle fought with all the weapons of the great campaigns can exert and inspire.

Perhaps this is due in a measure to the fact that the chairman of a national committee is usually a man whose name has been mentioned with confidence and respect. The chairman is almost always selected by the Presidential candidate himself, and his selection is generally one which places implicit confidence, both as to his loyalty and his political wisdom. The place is one of honor from the very nature of things, and it is an extremely trying one, and Marred Jewell, who knew where he was going, used to say that the man who occupies it is like a poor man's page, and who did it, was a fool, and "If he is a poor man," Jewell said, deficit, or at least too great a one; a technical business man, and, generally, if he comes to be known as a hardy man, he get along with by the aid of some other person, and by some of the committeemen, early in the campaign. In 1888 John Wanamaker was at the head of the finance committee of the Republican campaign funds, and carefully supervised all disbursements, for which he received no salary. He has frequently noted, the disbursement of party funds is in large measure a matter of honor and the innovation of Mr. Wanamaker has not been repeated.

Not less important in their way are the duties of the committeemen who direct the movements of the campaign orators. During the months of a national campaign not less than twenty men are necessarily constantly employed by the State and national committees, the efforts of those under the direction of the national committee being confined to the close and doubtful States. The members of this class are nearly all men of national reputation, and they are the men who direct their movements are neither an easy nor a pleasant one. Some orators decline to speak in telegraphing to be done, and prevent exposure of plans to the enemy, much of this must be done in cipher—this is necessary for military movements, but for military movements, and there probably never was a national committee that could make generous use of the cipher.

Perhaps the most difficult duty of a national committee, the one that requires the greatest judgment, is how to place most effectively the funds and forces at their command. Time and money must be expended in proportion to what is needed, and at an early stage the doubtful States become the battle-

The chairman is the head and front of the political forces of his side. But he is safe from beginning to end in a campaign. He is the only one who is not exposed to night by men who want to dip their hands into the committee's treasury, and to live almost in luxury, and reap the fruits of the campaign and medicaments. The bulk of his work begins in mid-campaign, and from that time on he is the center of the campaign. He has hardly a moment to be his own. He must lead all party decisions and present an harmonious front to the public. He is the center of the campaign, and the committee must revolve around the committee room. He is exposed to exaggeration by the proposition that it needs great tact, great nerve, and great energy to keep the diverse elements of a national party organization together. He is the only ordinary executive not exposed to the intricacies of the position.

While all others are busy with tears and with woe,
For I mark I forget these in grief, guilt or guile
While I lurk up my tears with a smothering smile
And though poverty's hand is stretched out to me,
All others lay down to the Holy Prince of Pity,

Contract—Breach—Counter Claim.
The Supreme Court of Minnesota, in the case of Hall vs. Parsons, the cause of action for damages for breach of contract arising simultaneously and concurrently with the commencement of an action may be proposed as a counter claim thereon. In this case it appeared that the plaintiff entered into a contract, by terms of which he agreed with the defendant not to bring suit upon promissory note held by him against the defendant within a certain time, and concurrently with the time he thereafter brought an action on a note before the expiration of the time. The court held that the breach of contract and resulting damages, if any, might be interposed as a counter claim in the action.

sureties—Indemnity—Contribution—
The Kentucky Court of Appeals
in the case of Broughton v.
et al., that where a co-surety forcoming bond became a surety on the superseded bond, he thereby forfeited the right of his cosurety in the forcoming bond to protect himself as such surety, and that act relieved the surety in the coming bond from all liability to
for indemnity or contribution.
The court held that there is no substantial difference between the effect of an obstruction of or interference with the rights of the surety creditor and an obstruction interference with the rights of the another person who might be wise but not a surety.
Contribution or indemnity if there been no obstruction.

Statute of Frauds—Guaranty.
An action for enforcement of a guaranty was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, who was a partner in a firm. The complaint alleged that the defendant had agreed to execute a guaranty in writing, but had refused to do so. The plaintiff sought judgment for the amount of the guaranty. The court held that the statute of frauds required the guaranty to be in writing, and that the plaintiff's failure to produce a written guaranty barred the action. The court also held that the defendant's failure to execute the guaranty constituted a breach of contract, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount of the guaranty.

Urry—Contract—Partnership—Profits.

Supreme Court of Illinois held, recent case of Clemons vs., that where a person advances to another in good faith and without any understanding or intent it in his business, and that area, to become partners in share profits; which the latter guaranty will not fall below 15 per cent of the profits in investment, it is held that the latter is not a loan for purposes outside of business, although he continues solely to account to the former for share of the profits, does not constitute a loan, but is an unsecured loan. The court held to constitute unity at law there be a loan or forbearance of, or something circulating as such, which repays itself, but all events for the use of something is exacted in addition the interest allowed by law.

Utile—Eminent Domain.
 The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held, in case of Walker vs. Shanta Power Co., that a public use which is equally a private use, and that the question whether it is public or private is for the judiciary to decide, but generally, where it is uncertain for the use it is of a public or private character, the legislative declaration of the question is of no force, and the courts will not follow it. It is a public use where the taking of land for a way for a ditch and a flume convey water used in furnishing electricity to the public generally, where in the State for light-power and heating purposes, when used in a private use, providing California code authorizing the exercise of the power of eminent domain on behalf of certain public uses.

Evidence—No Written Contract.

Supreme Court of Iowa held, in case of Hendrix vs. Lefebvre, that where a written memorandum by one party has not been read or concurred in by the other so as to make it the written act of the parties, any compulsion of the terms of an oral contract into which they, in fact, entered, is inadmissible. The rule cannot be applied to a contract made by a written memorandum having been concurred in.

"No," replied the other woman; "I'm afraid you overheard me talking about you. Perhaps—er—a bit too severe."

We thought the limit had been reached with the Singer-building, with its thirty stories, but here it has been started before the Metropolitan line of fifty or more stories is planned, and now—before that structure is even started—the plans filed for this Equitable monster. The announcement of the Equitable building is greeted with less astonishment than was that of the Singer project.

We are becoming habituated to these cloud-piercing piles, so it would be going to have the 100-story building towering 1,500 feet above Broadway than it was to say a few years ago that the fact that a sixty-story structure of more than 1,000 feet at height.

There must be a halt ordered, however, to the degradation of what the people regard as the standard of these tremendous piles are a horror and a danger and it is just as well

had been observed there would have been no holocaust.

It is not that to my amazement there are few fire-fighters in Chicago, considering the reckless disregard of precaution with which the houses are built, but such fires as we have had, the fact that they have never could have occurred anywhere in the old country.

There is no absolutely fireproof building in the world today, and the knowledge we use here positively no fireproof material in the construction of buildings such as our skyscrapers. Buildings so constructed, should be entirely fireproof. When heated the frame of the skyscraper becomes molten iron and molten steel.

There is no safety in the case of a cyclone or an earthquake would bend it. The factor of safety is three times the pressure to the square foot, so that the ordinary pounds per square foot. This is thirty pounds pressure.

any other time.

But New York does not now or after disaster in the skyscraper build- ings its structures in a majority of its tenements—those—great double-berth tenements—are worse than the skyscraper.

Like the Saburs of old Rome, New York to-day does every building law existence, particularly on the East side, the place the finest and best in regard to building, the city is governed by the greatest architects in the world—Seymour and Cohens, who built Rome's great temples dis- carded by the builders of New York they had been followed they would have turned their eyes toward the conservation of life and property in the case of the skyscrapers, which is a constant menace to the safety of the city.

Alas, then, that a cyclone comes along, and that a pressure, such as was made in the case of the Louis when small pieces of wood the thrust—straight through from the top of the building—thrust through the bodies of trees. Can you imagine what devastation such a cause among the skyscrapers of New York would be. The defiance of every rule laid down by Severus?

Then, the Singer building, for instance, the Singer building, the city! The steel structure twisted, still standing, but in contortions, the building now a raw, whirling through the air, the steel structure of projectiles, the gas escaping and lighting, the electric currents discom- pacted, the building now a mass of fire with the wooden structure in contact with the structure, breathing untold tongues of fire and destruction.

Wild Life the World Over

A Notable Case of the Success

If anybody tells me that the unions could not thrive under the open shop plan, I will show him that he is in error. As one illustration of this fact, I will cite the case of the Amalgamated Brotherhood's Society of Great Britain, which has more members on its roll and more money in its treasury than any other labor society in England.

This organization started out by being as fiercely devoted to the closed shop as any labor society in the world. But it was, nevertheless, held that tyrannical and was upon the idea of a widely as affirmed of the American Federation of Labor. This practice had the usual result—its society's numbers became careless and its influence fell. In their work, unfatigued in their attitude toward non-union men and toward their employers, efficiency, lookouts and general turlence came when it collapsed. The cause of this and the remedy were quickly obvious. They had their own way of thinking of the pockets they were working for—they found them and they who worked for them were not so much interested in opportunities for advancement or equality.

E. PRELINI

at Manhattan College

One such building alone could do terrific damage to New York in such a cyclone as visited St. Louis. Helped along by the condensation and scattering of the other skyscrapers, alone in line, there would be no hope for Manhattan.

A cyclone is full of undulations equal if not surpassing those of an earthquake. In an undulation the floors are the first to collapse, particularly if they are built after the fashion of the skyscraper, saving every detail of building, are of wood. I grant you that some few are of stone, but mostly they are built of wood. The wind would support the floors and push them to the depth of only three stories. The reason for the use of stone is that we have the slums; the Suburra of old Rome, which it was necessary to burn and rebuild.

In Harlem you see the same way of building; the same spurious means of escape. Death is the result of the fire, but not so many people crowd themselves down the fire escapes as in the East-End, where one family, no matter the number, lives in one room.

In Harlem there is some slight chance of escape. In the slums there is none. Those people are threatened with the same fearfulness of the scrapers of lower Manhattan, if they are attacked by a cyclone would altogether demolish them; and by the weight of their own buildings, the narrowness of their escape, and the inefficiency of their fire equipment.

The skyscraper is the outcome of a small value of land which is to be found nowhere.

is only here in New York and is that it is necessary to have strong fire engines, such big woodwork has time, quite structures are gone. There is no room to speak of in the buildings gone. There are tiled roofs, invariable, there is wrought iron.
If a fire there are wide staircases, and the fire may win-
out of which you may find without serious accident if it is wrong, which it is not, for there is little to burn. A little all in Rome. In other words, is much respect for life and lit-there is next to no respect for and much graft. It begins with the presidents of corporations
the rich, descending lower and lower
to the poor, the people of the slums.

The thing is being done now. It will be accomplished in time. When it is as easy to get to Long Island or the Westchester as it is to get to The Bronx, the people will live there in preference.

Paid as Usual.

The commercial traveler of a Philadelphia home, while in Tennessee, approached a stranger on the train and said about to start and said: "Are you going on this train?" "I am."

"Have you any baggage?" "No."

"Well, my friend, can you do me a favor and not cost you anything?" "I see, I have two round-trip tickets, and they always make me pay extra for one of them. You can get checked on your ticket and I will reimburse them, See?"

"Yes, but I want any ticket."

"But, though I am, said you were going on this train?"

"So I am, I am the conductor."

"Oh!"

The paid extra as usual.

Convention Stories.

K. Orr, of Atlanta, Ga., who has been a speaker at the convention, told a funny story on the topic, "Have you taken a back to stay." A Little Cuban was employed in the store, and a customer came in and asked for "tan shoes." When he had examined them, he asked the price and said, "I'm coming back." When the boy heard him say: "These tans have a back to stay," he said, "I'm coming back." When he had told about it to a boy who was sick and who wanted him to come for a few days. The employer said, "Don't tell me a lie. I have a son, your sister in which you are not, let me hear from you." The boy replied: "I don't know if I'm the worst liar, or I have a sister."

Real Poverty.
 old beggars were traveling
 through the residence sec-

What happens? Does the blackbird sing? No, it chirps, while the enormous range of notes which we only see so well!

It is distinct goes far with the creatures, but but instinct alone cannot make a young bird sing like the young of its mankind, have, and how they learn you can easily prove for yourself if you pull up a young bird from its nest in some small wood or shrubbery. It is not haunted by the harmful easily proved, young birds also learn the art of nest building by imitation. You can almost invariably find the first attempt of a young pair who have just set up housekeeping. Their home is not so finished a product as that of other birds.

Young animals, as well as birds, have much to learn, and their parents teach them with unflagging patience. The poor creature, in the case of mankind may be worse: in wild life it is death.

If it be beyond that, she explains to them in some way of her own the wide range of foods upon which a young bird can live, and she shows them, for instance, what fungi

A Notable Case of the Success

If anybody tells me that the unions could not thrive under the open shop plan, I will show him that he is in error. As one illustration of this fact, I will cite the case of the Amalgamated Brotherhood's Society of Great Britain, which has more members on its roll and more money in its treasury than any other labor society in England.

This organization started out by being as fiercely devoted to the closed shop as any labor society in the world. But it was, nevertheless, held that tyrannical and was upon the idea of a widely as affirmed of the American Federation of Labor. This practice had the usual result—its society's numbers became careless and lax in their work, unfatigued in their attitude toward non-union men and toward their employers, inefficient, lookouts and general turlence or when they collapsed. The cause of this and the remedy were quickly found. They have their way of life, pocketbook and they who would not work for non-union opportunities towards equality.

and to eat and which are poisonous. Squirrels are fond of various cones, as well as of fruits and berries of warm birds.

The warm-blooded animal is a more or splendid swimmer than the cold. The otter is a branch of the animal which took to the water like a fish. It is able to swim and dive so swiftly that even the cold animal is hunted down.

Young otter does not swim at first. He is taught to swim by means of hunting games, how to fish, rate and other prey for food.

Animals teach by means of words. You will see a sedate old cat, who would turn up her nose at a kitten striking, turn gentle in her kitten's play. A paper or word about with her or them to run after.

Monks have been watched to train their cubs in exactly similar fashion, and the old master of staid and quarrelsome cubs, and without being seen.

In one case, reported by the explorer Meade, the old lioness chose a bush to represent a lion and taught her cubs spring at it from a certain distance.

Not only teach their young how to swim and how to climb, but also punish the cubs severely if they fail to obey orders with cuffs which would kill a human child. And a regulation of the writers claiming a lioness in Nannaguanland, came upon a family party of baboons, and a cubman, watched a mother baboon giving a youngster a lesson in catching a crow.

She turned against the wretched cub, then herself lit upon with a broken stick.

Town Council Meeting.

An adjourned meeting was held last Saturday evening, August 8th. All present.

Mayor Jackson read the resignation of Town Clerk J. L. O'Donnell, to take effect this date.

Mr. Boyer appointed Clerk pro tem.
On motion, Mr. O'Donnell's resignation was accepted.

Mr. White nominated W. R. Seely
for Town Clerk, to serve until the November election; Mr. Skinner seconded.
On motion, Clerk instructed to cast the ballot, and Mr. Seely was unanimously declared elected.

Voted, that the Finance Committee
be directed to audit the books and accounts of the Town Clerk, and are empowered to employ an expert accountant to assist, the object being to turn over clean balance sheets to the new clerk.

Mr. Frank N. Middleton, Civil Engineer, was present by invitation, and in reply to numerous questions, gave valuable information in regard to street
grades and drainage.

On motion, Council reconsidered the vote by which two ordinances were passed at last meeting; and referred the same to the Law and Order Committee for revision.

After some talk on the subject of grade crossings, Committee was instructed to ask for a watchman at Thirteenth Street and Reading Railroad.

Bill of Hoyt and Son—$25.24, for printing and advertising, was ordered paid.

On motion, adjourned to meet on Saturday evening, Aug. 15.

OUR READERS TALK.

PUBS. REPUBLICAN: I have heard many harsh criticisms of Council's method of ridding our streets of stray canines; but so far have heard no sane remedy for their not doing as they are employing out of town (uninterested)
parties to do it for them.

Speaking for myself, I love dogs; but not the useless cure and fool dogs with which our streets are infested. Not only on highways, but our neighbors'
yards. They yelp like all possessed, yelp
at the moon, yelp if they hear a cricket chirp, yelp if they hear a sound half-a-dozen squares away, but always yelp.
It does no good to complain, and there is trouble if you take the law into your hands. They are useless as watch dogs, for if their bark indicates a midnight visitor, your yard is full of them all night.

Other towns are taking even more vigorous measures than we.

A READER.

EDITOR: The residents on Main Road are anxiously and patiently hoping that our city fathers will have the gutters properly opened up on that road soon. At present they are in the middle, especially on the slope going forwards the bridge, past the Settoon farm.
Have it fixed, gentlemen, so that we won't have to wade through a river and sea of mud when fall and winter rains set in. It won't cost much.
