Only three weeks—
And then,—Oh joy!
First day of School.

Vol. 51

HAMMONTON, N. J., SATURDAY, AUGUST 16, 1913

No. 33

Folsom tax sale takes place next Tuesday.

School opens Sept. 8th,—only three weeks off.

Mrs. Wesley Adams was one of this week's visitors.

Volunteer Fire Company monthly meeting next Monday evening.

Word comes from Hahnemann Hospital, that Will Craig is doing nicely.

Rev. Thomas Cline was here on Thursday, calling on old school friends.

Miss Helen Abele, of Philada., spent last week with Lewis S. Spyes and family.

Mrs. J. C. Saunders has recovered from severe illness, caused by the hot weather.

We have another anonymous letter this week—good to fill the waste basket.

Mrs. W. O. Hoyt and daughter, Mary, are spending a week in Collingswood.

Farmers' and Merchants' Loan and Building Association meeting next Tuesday.

Lester Spyes is expected home from South Lyman, to-day, to spend Sunday.

Mrs. A. M. Ellsworth, of River-ton, spent Monday at her brother's, Harry McD. Little.

Our Methodist brethren will picnic at the Park next Wednesday, weather permitting.

Mrs. William Kind, Jr., and her daughter, have been visiting at New Rochelle, N. Y.

St. Mark's peach festival, Wednesday evening, was a success in every sense of the word.

Automobiles aren't expensive to keep. One of our local men reports eight punctures in one week.

Albert L. Jackson starts to-day for Maine, to join his wife and two daughters for a couple of weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. Geo. R. Shidle, from Pittsburg, are making their annual visit with Hammonton relatives.

A meeting of the Women's Political Union on Friday, Aug. 22nd, at 3.30 sharp, at the home of Miss Mary Conkey.

Samuel Bank is away on a vacation trip, which will include the "Thousand Islands," and other points of interest.

The Peoples Bank corner looks fine, with its new pavements and curb. There are other fronts which need same treatment.

The Civic Club had a delightful time on Thursday,—a picnic at the Park. They pitched quoits and indulged in other sports.

Council had a special meeting last Friday evening,—the financial questions being the most important subjects for consideration.

Ben. Foglietto is circulating his petition for nomination for assessor—to succeed George Berry; but George is also in the field.

Frank Gallagher has been in the hospital for a week,—having the broken bones in his right arm scraped and wired together.

Edw. Klingenberg is possessor of an automobile, which he will use on his collecting tours. It is not very big, but will get there.

The Baptists and Presbyterians will continue union services all this month. Rev. H. P. Hoskins will preach to-morrow, morning and evening, in Presbyterian Church.

Methodist Episcopal Church,—morning praise at 9.30. Pastor W. L. Shaw will preach at 10.30 and 7.30. Sunday School at noon. Prayer service Thursday evening at 7.45.

Bergdoll's air ship passed over Hammonton about 6.45 yesterday morning, going at a rapid pace toward Atlantic City. Many people saw it, while others thought the racket was an automobile on a neighboring street. It traveled near earth, giving gazers a good view. Poultrymen say that chickens were the first to observe the aerial visitor, and sought shelter in cackling.

Friends of the Hoyle family regret that they are about to move to West Philadelphia. Mr. H. will continue his plumbing business here.

R. Albert Walther arrived home from Hahnemann Hospital, Thursday, being well on the way to recovery from his operation for appendicitis.

Miss Mary Haddock, a frequent visitor in Hammonton, died in Philadelphia on Wednesday. The funeral service will be held at 11 o'clock to-day.

St. Mark's Church, Rev. Wm. Howard Davis, Rector. Thirteenth Sunday after Trinity. Morning Prayer at 7.00; Holy Communion, 7.30 and 10.30; Sunday School at 11.45; Evening Prayer, 7.30.

The Civic Club will hold a "Thimble Bee" at Mrs. Samuel Anderson's next Tuesday, Aug. 19th, at 3.00 p. m. These meetings are growing more interesting, and much work is accomplished.

Elwood M. E. Sunday School rode up to Hammonton Park, Wednesday, to hold a picnic. Though it rained at intervals all day, they seemed to have a good time—about fifty of them, in the hall part of the time; and venturesome ones took to the water and boats.

Although the Baptist pulpit will not be vacant until Sept. 30th, applications are rapidly coming in to the Clerk from ministers who desire to become candidates. The Hammonton Church is well-known as a desirable one, being a united and consecrated people.

A severe wind and thunder storm visited us on Sunday, commencing about five o'clock and lasting well into the night. We hear of little damage in this section, but elsewhere, notably in Philadelphia, trees were blown down, houses unroofed, and four people killed.

The way we figure things out now,
And surely 'tis no lie,
Is that arithmetic gets mixed,
And "add" will multiply.

Walter P. Bakley, with his two sons, also Dan Zinn and Leon Baker, joined Charles Titus and friends last Sunday, at Atlantic City, and spent the day a-fishing. They had excellent luck, pulling in three hundred pounds of the funny tribe.

Mrs. Emma M., wife of Frederick F. J. Quedno, of Hammonton, died last week Friday, in the Episcopal Hospital, following an operation. A husband, little daughter, and many friends are among the bereaved ones. The deceased was a member of the Baptist Church.

Baptist People Picnic.

The proverbial rain didn't materialize on Tuesday, even though the Baptists did picnic at the Park. It was a delightful day, despite threatening clouds in the morning, and everything passed off very pleasantly.

Teams, automobiles, and bikes took the people down and home again.

All the children were treated to ice cream and rides in automobiles and launch.

The sports consisted of bicycle races, three-legged, sack, dashes, tub races, and ball game,—all of which attracted large numbers. The results of the races were as follows:

Bicycle race—two mile....
Boys—Elmer Lenz; time, 4.1;
price, cup and saucer
Men—Adin Wescott; time, 3.50;
price, cup and saucer
Three-legged race....
G. E. Lenz—Adin Wescott; time, 12 sec.
Sack race....
Elmer Lenz; time, 1 sec.
Sack race—small boys....
Samuel Gumbie.
Tub race—three children....
Elmer Lenz, 1.3; Elmer Matron, 1.4;
Elmer Lenz, 1.5; Price, horn.
Girls' 60 yd. dash....
Miss Lillian Lehman; time, 10 sec.
Price, ribbon fan.
Horn ball game....
Class No. 6 (Class) vs. Class No. 8 (Wescott).
Score, 10-3. Time, one hour more or less.
Umpire, Tom Gray.

Features of the ball game were three batters, strike-outs, wild throws, muffs, and appeals, also some fouls.

There were tables and benches for all, and the new grove, with additional awnings, made it very enjoyable,—and minus the fatigue of a long ride.

Figure 1 is a line graph showing the percentage of total sample for each age group (0-14, 15-24, 25-34, 35-44, 45-54, 55-64, 65-74, 75+) across different years (1970, 1980, 1990, 2000, 2010, 2020). The y-axis represents the percentage of total sample, ranging from 0 to 100. The x-axis represents the years. The 0-14 age group shows a steady decline from approximately 25% in 1970 to 10% in 2020. The 15-24 age group shows a slight increase from approximately 15% in 1970 to 20% in 2020. The 25-34 age group shows a slight increase from approximately 10% in 1970 to 15% in 2020. The 35-44 age group shows a slight increase from approximately 10% in 1970 to 15% in 2020. The 45-54 age group shows a slight increase from approximately 10% in 1970 to 15% in 2020. The 55-64 age group shows a slight increase from approximately 10% in 1970 to 15% in 2020. The 65-74 age group shows a slight increase from approximately 10% in 1970 to 15% in 2020. The 75+ age group shows a slight increase from approximately 10% in 1970 to 15% in 2020.

FREEDOM IN THE TRUTH

not how fettered and chained most men are. Success, written in capital letters, is the fetter before which men and girls must learn to worship. They in business, in society, and in the home are enslaved from the cradle to the grave by the fetters of money, of luxury, of power, and of pleasure. To live for the present hour, to gratify every sense, to subvert their principles as much out of the world for the world as they can, to use their power and wealth to the glory of man, and that is the devil's plan, that is the bondage of the flesh, and "education" in this material nature is enough to make a man a fool. God is not taught in the school of the world.

But, leaving out of consideration altogether the fact that this narrative comes down to us backed by Divine authority, we have no possibility of denying to the Israelites the power of denying to the Egyptians the way they were described; because it would not have been possible to fool the whole world with a made-up story of this sort, even if the Israelites tell long afterwards. The narratives were always very careful about preserving the traditions of their fathers, and these traditional records, handed down from generation to generation, would not have condemned any faked story as a miracle such as this one. "For Paul was not yet come to the corner," says Paul at the trial before the Sanhedrin, "where I stood up for the death and resurrection of Jesus." The whole people of Israel were present during the plagues of Egypt and the crossing of the sea and through all the wonders of the wilderness.

Who are our neglected neighbors? The people of our country are not altogether neglected. Efforts of various kinds are being put forth by different societies to reach and help them. They present a very different picture from what can be said in behalf of the Christians of other lands; but some few of them are deeply interested in efforts to carry the Gospel to the submerged masses in these islands, and do a very much larger number of Christian missions than passive interest in such work and are willing to contribute money to it.

The difficulty of producing visible results, except in a few individual cases, has led to indifference on the minds of church people generally and prevents them from taking a deep interest in such efforts. It may be ascribed, however, with safety, that real Gospel work among the heathen who are "deaf and dumb," is going forward.

...living in the pine barrens of New Jersey in ignorance of war-crime, and laid the blame for this condition on the Christians of these great cities who have simply left them people alone. Clearly there is a basis for this accusation. Yet, when analyzed a charge against Christians as a body becomes a charge against each individual among them, and the individual Christian looks at the question he does not see what he can do.

WAS there one man in Greendale more hated than another his name was John Haverford. He was the scion of the noble estate of the Lancers. Locally he was known under the more general one of Mlser Haverford. That he had earned a right to be so called he could deny. Harvasta might be a poor crop might be ruined, thsase might ravage the village, yet neither parson nor individual had ever been able to make him flinch with a cent to lessen the grind of poverty.

John Haverford had risen from the people. To be precise, his father had risen from smelter to the proprietorship of the Grexborough plant. But in his youth John Haverford knew what it was to hang round with a tightened watchbelt. The sensation remained with him after his father had made his pile and had decided that he should be a gentleman.

"You helped me to do it," said Haverford, and I really do not think you should be so angry. I have never done any harm."

The logic of the girl's remark was reasonable. The trailing and trembling accents, coupled with suggestive quiver of the lips, made her watchbelt. He abandoned the position he was in.

"Of course I did," he smiled, forgotten, and I—say, pass my cry."

"You're frightened," observed the girl, tremulously. "You're really angry."

"I am never angry with you," said Haverford, a touch of his infecting his accents. "I'm pretty once."

There was no mistaking the thing. He admired her. Young, and yet old enough to know what she was doing.

ter. By profession a teacher in the village school, she was possessed of limpid blue eyes and sensitive mouth, which, strangely enough, when they were turned into the direction of the hostile heart the moment he had observed her golden head appearing above the level of a sea of ox-eye daisies in one of the meadows.

"Hallo!" she had declared by way of greeting, and Haverford, to his surprise, had found himself answering the hail. Dazzled by the sunbeams of the smile which shone from her lips, he forgot the fact that they had been responsible for bringing him to her side in anger. She was treasuring up the memory of the moment when you'd get the blind side of a fellow you're concerned. I've always said you one of these days and I'm going to prison—I intend to keep it for a long time. I'm not sure, but the cleverest man in the world makes a slip one time in his life. That's what I'm waiting for. I'll be there when it happens. Joana won't save you from the stones."

A week elapsed before the daisies received her next summons. He had been in the meadow of his flower-land on that occasion, did his garden as usual, and was picking daisies. Even the prize he found himself obeying the girl's suggestion in picking the flowers.

"What's your name, child?" he demanded, at the end of their unconventional interview.

"I am not a child," she replied, gravely. "I was twenty last birthday. And my name is Joan."

"Joan what?"

"Brenner."

"Oh?"

"Miss Brenner" replied the girl, starting in sudden sideways question at her companion's slowly dawning and unkind face.

his enemy.

"Three cheers for ole Mister Havard!" he yelled, forgetting alike or the smart of his bleeding hand and the fact that he was a drunkard. "Huzzi! Good luck to 'em, say I, and may I never speak disrespectful of 'em again!"

The cheer following his exclamation, and the blaring bugles, attracted Havard's ears whilst fighting his way through the blowing clouds of smoke. Past the porch he staggered, coughing up his soul under the aerial assault. Into the classroom he rushed, taking out his pipe and the flames leaping down at them from a blazing ceiling, thruatus from a monetary collapse. Singed, stifled, with his eyes closed, Havard thought, "I'm not but from now on, I shall search till he found the senseless body of the girl he claimed his life to save."

Turning on his heel, Havard vowed to mound the head of the Illinois

Bremner brought his clenched fist down on his open palm, leaping across the room, now did he speak again. "I'll kill 'em," he said, and he rushed into the purple mists of smoke, losing himself in the darkentness of the messes of the teaty woads beyond the door.

As Fate so willed, Havard was saved by the fact that he was in the front of his house at the present moment. Bremner entered the way of the porch bent. Like the last time, he fed wended their way to the door. Havard was, however, different, but, outrage of his gamekeeper. Advancing as stealthily as his horse, the hunter stalked, then leapt to brake and bracken. With the horse instinct of the hunter born, Jorg would intuitively guess where he would discover his quarry, not that he was a hunter. Caught red-handed, Brennmann pressed, emptied both barrels gun at the shadowy figures revealed to his sight by the light of a crossbow. Brennmann hid his head, raced many directions brushwood in the direction open country.

Hard on his heels sped Jorg and his two companions.

step and your life isn't worth the snap of your fingers."

"Yes, you swing," replied Haverford, dryly, signing to the gamekeepers to make no move. "I refuse to give you your liberty so long as I have life in me, and—"

"You may as well see how the slight figure of the girl he loved entered the room, bearing a lamp in her hand. The moment was one which spelled the dramatic for each man. As the girl, Joan, came to the table, stepped up to Haverford, and placing her arms round his neck, looked steadily at her father.

"And," she whispered, softly, "put down that gun."

"If I do go to jail," snapped the man, thickly. "Why do you come between me and a revenge I have sworn for years?"

"I think it is—because I love your enemy, dad."

The words thrilled the silence.

"Yes, darling," she answered, "I am going to be a practical nurse. I mean to study the ways and means. I have even taken them over with mamma. What do you want to discuss first?"

"Well there's the subject of a salary every week for spending money."

"I've thought of that."

"Oh—or you have?"

"Yes. Now, you mustn't think me mercenary, but I've talked it over with mamma, and she says the certain allowance is right and proper. Your salary is three hundred year, isn't it?"

"Yes; and I want it to go as far possible for you."

"I know it," she said.

suntit meadow. She had wound herself round her world-worn heart in the arms of the old-fashioned teacher. He had loved her against his own will, this simple village teacher.

"No! By heaven I'm not!" he snapped. "Joyce and Tracey, clear out of my house at once, my wife and I have earned our money here. There's another fever each to be added to the sum when you call at the Manor to-morrow morning. Fifty dollars to each of you so long as you keep your mouths shut about what has transpired in this college to-night. Clear!"

Gathering Joan to his breast, Harold waited till the men had withdrawn then, holding out his hand to her, he said:

"I am glad, however, I saw him pay a visit and in doing so he turned his back to everybody in the room before slipping out his pocketbook."

"Instantly I laid my hand on his shoulder."

"Come with me, I said. You are no bachelor. You are a widower and a married man."—Exchange.

ATLANTIC COUNTY ORPHANS' COURT.
In the Matter of the Estate) On Petition, &c.
of William H. Burgess,) Order to Show Deceased.) Cause.

Hammonton Trust Company, Administrator of the estate of William H. Burgess, deceased, having exhibited under oath, a true account of the personal estate and debts of said deceased, whereby it appears that the personal estate of the said William H. Burgess is insufficient to pay his debts, and requesting the aid of this court in the premises:

It is thereupon on this 10th day of July nineteen hundred and thirteen, ordered that all persons interested in the lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate of the said William H. Burgess, deceased, appear before this court, at the Court House, May's Landing,
New Jersey, on the 20th day of September nineteen hundred and thirteen, at 10.30 a.m.
to show cause why so much of the lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate of the said William H. Burgess, deceased, should not be sold, as will be sufficient to pay his debts.

And it is further ordered that a copy of this order be set up at three of the most public places in the county immediately for six weeks successively and be published at least once in each week for the same time in the South Jersey Republican, a newspaper printed and published at Hammonton, N. J.

Folsom, N. J., Delinquent List.

Public notice is hereby given by Thomas
Chalmers, Collector of the Borough of Folsom, County of Atlantic, N. J., that he will sell all the lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate heretofore mentioned for the amount of taxes for which any person or persons will agree to take the same and pay the tax then thereon, including interest and cost of sale.

The said sale will take place in front of the Post Office at Folsom, on Tuesday, August 19th, 1913, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

BUCKNELL
College for Women
JOHN HOWARD HARRIS, A. B., President

Offers the same advantages to young women as the Bucknell College offers to men. All the college professors are men who are specialists in their fields. Income from productive investment pays professors' salaries. Separate campus, buildings, and home life for women students;
lectures and recitations in common with the men. Tuition per year, $125. The college students have also the advantage of the School of Music and Art School. For catalogue address
