THE BICYCLE CRAZE.

Wheeledum, wheeledum, Spin away, fly away, gay as can be;
Roads of the country and streets of the town,
Over and under, and upward and down; Matrons and maidens, young men and old, Shy ones and sly ones, timid and bold; Coming and going, both nighttimes and days, All of them caught by the bicycle craze.

Doctor and lawyer, layman and priest, Richest and poorest, greatest and least;
Men with professions and others with none, Women with work that will never be done;
Children with sums to do, absent from school, Ought to get wisdom, but learning the fool; Here they go, there they go, nothing delays, Each one a slave to the bicycle craze.

Highway and byway, wherever you go, Here they spin, there they spin, toward and fro;
Bloomers and sweaters and queerest of gowns, Some look like witch, and others like clowns.

Young ones and old ones, single and wed, They'll keep it up, likely, until they are dead.
Inward and outward, a regular maze, Spin the mad folk with the bicycle craze.

Some go like camels, with humps to their backs,
Others look anxious, as fearful of tacks; Wiggly, jiggly, hither and thither, Some are like jumping-jacks working with strings.

Awkward and graceful ones, swift ones and slow;
This way and that way and all ways they go,
Some look like fairies and others like jays,
And all of them follow the bicycle craze.

What is it coming to? Nobody knows; Nobody dares for a minute suppose.
Some day, perhaps, folk will know how it feels

To be born without legs, having under them wheels,
Like a new kind of centaur perhaps they'll be made

If in this evolution we are not delayed, Then away they'll go spinning the rest of their days,
As the final result of the bicycle craze.

—Arthur Lewis Tubbs.

ABOUT COW PEAS.

Four or five years ago I was induced, by the writings of Prof. Massey, of the North Carolina Experiment Station, and by other Southern writers, to try Cow Peas as a renovator of the soil.
Having a piece of light sandy land on which blackberries had been grown for seven or eight years, and from which all vegetable matter had been extracted by the berries and constant cultivation and exposure to the sun, I thought it would be just the land to experiment upon.

I sent South and got three bushels of Black Cow Peas. When they came I pronounced them beans, and I do not see yet why they should ever have been called peas. I sowed them on three acres, without any fertilizer, supposing they could find a living and thrive in a bed of yellow sand. After foraging around in it all Summer for all the plant food they could find, they reported in the Fall by a growth six inches to a foot high,—nothing there. I plowed them under and sowed rye; plowed the rye under when headed and planted corn; sowed the corn at the last working to crimson clover. The severe drought made but nibbings of corn, and but a poor catch of clover. Plowed under what little grew, when headed, and broadcast five hundred pounds per acre of acid phosphate and muriate of potash in proportions of five or six of the former to one of the latter. This time I got a growth of peas that were admired by all who saw them,—standing two feet high, tops all twisted together by the running vines. Tried to plow them under late in the Fall, but they would pull up and choke the plow so that I abandoned the job until Spring, when I turned them under and set to blackberries again.

Since that time I have been raising them every year for feed and for plowing until this year. I now have twenty-five acres growing. The season was too wet and cold, early, so they were yellow and slow to start off; been too wet most of the time, so the early sowed have rusted some and are turning yellow again, in spots. I have a fine piece on strawberry land, turned under immediately after picking, showing they may be sowed as late as June 15th, or later, with success. Long tap-roots enable them to stand severe drought, and last season in the hottest weather they never drooped a leaf, while the corn leaves were withering.

I sent to North Carolina this year and obtained four bushels of the new pea called "Wonderful." I sowed them on four acres I had in Cow Peas last year, and from which I cut six large two-horse loads for feeding. After cutting the peas I sowed to rye, plowed the rye in when headed, then sowed the Wonderful; and such a covering of the land at this 25th of August I never saw.
A neighbor passed the field yesterday and exclaimed "Wonderful!" I said "Yes, that's their name." Another neighbor said I ought to have ten cents admission to such a show; but being in a liberal mood just now, the show is free. I find they send out three or four laterals from near the ground to the stalk. Stretching these up, they reached to my chin, and are on the rampage yet, making a most vigorous growth.

They solve the problem of a cheap way of filling the soil with vegetable matter; and the dense shade they give to the land all summer I think is a great advantage. I used the fertilizer dressing before named, and the land thus treated, the crop is better the second year, probably from the nitrifying microbes put into the land by the previous crop. In another article I will speak of the proper time for plowing under, of their value as fodder, and the method of curing, time to cut, etc.

NOTE, that the fertilizers used dispense with the element of nitrogen,— the pea gathers that from the air; and as nitrogen costs fifteen to sixteen cents a pound, and the phosphoric acid and potash four to five cents, the mixture for peas is not expensive.

The M. E. S. S. Picnic.

As the first grey streaks of the dawning of another day appeared in the eastern horizon, doubtless many eager eyes peered thro' the windows to see what the tokens were for a fine day.
For it was the 19th of August, '97, the day set for the Methodist Sunday School picnic,—to be held at Weymouth. The tokens were favorable, so between the hours of seven and eight quite a large number of people, large and small, had gathered in front of the Church, "waiting for the wagons" to convey them to the picnic grounds. By eight o'clock all was ready, and the procession started.
We were highly honored by the presence of the "Clever Leaf Cycle Club" who, with some unattached riders, rode ahead. The thin clouds floating lazily overhead, arresting the hot rays of Old Sol, made the morning an ideal one for a "run." Mr. W. R. Tilton and the writer had the extreme honor of chaperoning the Club, conferred upon them, giving them (the two gentlemen of course) the most exquisite pleasure.

After several rests, and without serious accident, we arrived at the grounds, hard by the little Church, at ten o'clock or thereabouts, and twenty minutes later the first wagon appeared.
In a short time a lawn tennis court had been laid out, swings put up, hammocks swung, a croquet ground made ready, and a hearth to put the coffee boiler on was erected. By this time all the wagons had arrived, and everybody set about to enjoy the day of pleasure and recreation. Some played croquet, others tennis, while many were content to lie quietly in their hammocks and find enjoyment in watching others. Each one carried his own lunch, and ate it alone or joined with friends. The school furnished coffee for all who wished it.

Space will not allow me to go into details, or to tell all about the man who, in the act of sitting down to dinner, unconsciously disturbed a yellow jacket's nest, but instead of stinging him, attacked his wife, stinging her hand so badly that she had to keep it bandaged all day. There was plenty of fun for everybody who wished it. After lunch the ice cream was opened and dispensed at five cents per plate, which just cleared expenses.

Towards night the clouds began to hang heavy over us, and it was deemed prudent to start for home, so that by 5:30 the last one had left the grounds.
We cannot speak for those who rode in wagons, but if all enjoyed the ride home in the cool of the evening as much as did the cyclists, they have no cause for complaint. Taking it altogether, the picnic was a great success, and I am sure the events of the day will live long in the memory of those who participated in them.

LOVE'S OFFERING.

If life were a reward,
Bestowed with me,
I would pick it, my darling,
And give it to you.

If love were a jewel,
That money could buy,
I would give you a casket
No queen could refuse.

But love is not purchased,
In whole or in part,
So, I've nothing to give thee But love, and my heart.

But rewards may wither
And jewels are vain,
But on to eternity
Love shall remain.

A SPECIAL ENVOY.

When "Pepworth" "Tring," the well-known South African millionaire, sent for me and, after inquiring if I was at liberty for a few weeks, said that he was about to commission me to take a small map to his Johannesburg representatives, I was rather surprised that he should go to the expense of a special messenger when the postal service was available.

"It seems a very simple undertaking," I said.

But he specially enlightened me. "Ah, there where you are wrong," he replied, giving me a shrewd glance. "In this case the post is not to be trusted, and an unscrupulous enemy will strain every nerve to defeat my intention."

"You anticipate there will be an attempt to rob me during the journey?" I am quite sure of it. The matter on the face of it is simple enough. The map (he held up a small piece of parchment a few square inches in size) appeared to represent the course of a river, for some red crosses were marked on one portion and some lines of writing ran along the bottom. "This is given to Mr. Howard of Fox Street, Johannesburg. There your mission ends. But whether you will be able to accomplish it is another matter. In Johannesburg, I am determined to obtain possession of this map by any means. He is rich, unscrupulous and commands the services of men even more unscrupulous than himself. This is the reason I do not trust the post. The corruption prevalent among all Boer officials extends to the postoffice; my letters have been opened. He has creatures there in his employ. You must trust no one and conceal the paper in such a manner that it cannot be found."

"But while on shipboard it would surely be better to intrust it to the captain or purser?"

"That would be risky, and only postpone their attack on you. If you received the map back safely you would without doubt be robbed of it between Cape Town and Johannesburg. No, when the boat reaches Cape Town they must be under the impression that you are not the bearer."

"When am I to leave London?"

"The Roman leaves the docks to-morrow and Plymouth on Saturday. Your berth is booked. (Gibson is also a passenger, and several of his following, but, perhaps, I had better explain why this map is so important.)"

"Gibson, like myself, is an old Kimberley man. We both did very well there, and lately, like me, he has been dealing in Transvaal mining property. We have often gone partners in various undertakings. In the autumn of 1904, being then in Johannesburg—about six months ago—and feeling the want of a holiday, I determined to go on a shooting expedition through the Transvaal toward the sea. Accompanied by two Zulus, I carried out my intention, and after some weeks of traveling we found ourselves in the low country bordering the Swaziland. There, quite by chance, I made a remarkable discovery. In the dried-up channel of what had been a river I came upon traces of diamonds. The find, to my eyes, was most promising, but before I could pursue my investigations further one of my Zulus, dispatched to get food from a neighboring kraal, came hot-foot with the news that the Swazis were on the march. I fled by night, and my only escape was to flee to the sea. I had intended to take him into partnership in this affair, but the knowledge which I gained immediately afterward that he had withheld me in the matter of some gold mines changed my purpose and I broke with him for good."

"Now the way of my mind is pre-occupied. Diamonds have not yet been found in paying quantity in the Transvaal. This discovery, however, had intended to take him into partnership in this affair, but the knowledge which I gained immediately afterward that he had withheld me in the matter of some gold mines changed my purpose and I broke with him for good."

"After various adventures I reached Durban and took ship for England. Meeting Gibson in London I acquainted him in general in the course of my journeying I had found diamonds, but I had intended to take him into partnership in this affair, but the knowledge which I gained immediately afterward that he had withheld me in the matter of some gold mines changed my purpose and I broke with him for good."

Why Boys are Blue-Eyed.
Little boys play with their dolls As if they were what they are,
The fashions in dolls' eyes.
When Queen Victoria ascended the throne Sixty years ago she was fair and had Two other eyes in her crown, for the ship was full, every berth being taken, but they had not yet come on board, so I arranged my belongings at leisure, and then went on deck as we left the dock miles of wharves and shipping we slowly and majestically steamed out to sea. The ship was nearly empty and I passed a quiet twenty-four hours anticipating the coming dock which was to take place, and wondering if my simple scheme would be successful.

The mailbags and passengers came on board at Plymouth and a scene of excitement and confusion followed, but a rough sea and head wind calmed the exuberance of many of the company, and the dinner tables in the saloon that evening showed an abundance of empty seats. Both my cabin mates successfully concealed their disappointment.
Fortunately I was a good sailor, and having enjoyed my dinner, later in the evening found myself in the smoking-room smoking one of "Jim" Gibson's cigars and engaged in chat with that worthy, who was in a friendly and evinced some curiosity about myself.

I told my tale, which he accepted with perhaps suspicious readiness.
"Employed by Tring, are you? Pepper fellow; I know him well. We used to be friends; now he hates me like polson."

He introduced me to his friends, Spellman, Dunbarton and Vandermort, who severally expressed themselves delighted to make my acquaintance.

The first two or three days my attention was attracted, first to pump me and dropped me, and then to the advantages which would follow if I joined them—bliss I ignored.

As, however, they felt pretty certain that I was the bearer of the coveted map, my portmanteaus were searched more than once, and my spare clothes when I was absent from my cabin. In this Spellman who was told off for his portion of the quest, finding I had no very cordial toward him he struck up a friendship for use of my cabin mate, which gave him an excuse for entering at all hours. I did not think it advisable to enlighten the latter, as my attitude was so blindly ignorant my adver-sary's behavior.

Spellman's researches proving of no avail, the great endeavor to discover it I had, the paper took place about a week after Macfarlane was passed. I was playing in a whist tournament and noticed that Dunbarton and Vandermort were playing up with the two men who shared my cabin. I guessed that they had been taken out of the port-manteaus themselves and backed up in search of a secret hiding place. If anything had been pulled off—"Lock!" the gray cables were emitted from the map that nothing was between it and the binding. Now was the time, for while I surveyed the water I became convinced of an overpowering feeling of dreadfulness and knowledge came to me that I had been drugged. Two late I remembered having just accepted a drink from Gibson, but I had not been sense enough left to tumble into my bunk before falling into a heavy sleep.

"They no doubt searched me in the den that night, for I slept on the deck, but though I woke next morning with headache I had little to complain of, and I had been rewarded their toll, of course, I made a fuss as to the conduct of some mysterious person, who had not even visited the house of my landlady, and certain inquiries were instituted, which came to nothing. I innocently complained to Gibson as to the bad quality of his whisky, and there apparently the matter ended, for I was no more.

Gibson continued good friends with me, and often came and chatted as I languidly studied "Lock on Gold" in my den. A practical miniature against be pointed out the best parts to study, and I imbibed much information valuable enough had I designed to turn mine. He was an amusing man, his revels enough—"Get money, honestly if you can; but get money!" A more efficient auctioneer for selling the numbers of the ship's run in the daily sweeps it would be impossible to find.
I enjoyed the privilege of acting auctioneer's clerk, with "Lock" for a desk on my knee.

It was 4 o'clock on a Tuesday afternoon when we reached Cape Town, and Gibson managed to get away by that evening's train, leaving two of his followers to bring his luggage on next day, when the rest of the passengers bound for the Rand traveled.

Mrs. Eliza Mott died Wednesday last, at her home on Twelfth Street. Her age is unknown, but there is reason to believe that she had passed the century mark several years ago. "Aunt Eliza" was a slave in early life, but has resided in Hammonton so long that we can find no "oldest inhabitant" who does not remember her as an old woman when he came here. She was a hard and faithful worker until within a very few years, when infirmities of age compelled rest. Funeral services yesterday afternoon, in the Baptist Church.

Always on Time.
As a record-breaker, the Philadelphia & Reading Railway's "sixty minute train" to Atlantic City has been a wonderful success. The demand made by Philadelphia business men for quick trains to their summer homes after business hours led the Reading to put on the train this season, and the action has been fully justified. The flyer has been very popular, and has daily carried more passengers than any other one train on the road. Frequently it has been found necessary to add another coach, but even this additional weight has not caused a lessening of speed. The train is scheduled to start at 3:40 p. m., and to reach the City by the Sea just one hour later. Its trips have been carefully watched, not only by Reading officials, but by its patrons as well. During July it was never one second late. Even on days when travel was unusually heavy, the long string of fine coaches started exactly on time, kept up the flying speed all the way across New Jersey, and rolled into the depot at Atlantic on the second. Among railroad men this is considered a remarkable record, and one seldom if ever equaled, and never excelled.—Buffalo Courier-Record, Aug. 4, 1897.

A Valuable Prescription.
Editor Morrison, of Worthington, Ind. "Sun," writes: "You have a valuable prescription in Electric Bitters, and I can cheerfully recommend it for constipation and sick headache, and as a general system tonic it has no equal." Mrs. Annie Steble, 2025 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, was all run down, could not eat nor digest food, had a backache which never left her and felt tired and weary, but six bottles of Electric Bitters restored her health and renewed her strength. Prices, 50 cts and $1. Get a bottle, at Croft's drug store.

Yellowstone Park.
The Yellowstone National Park is unquestionably the most interesting region on the globe, for within it is displayed the greatest collection of nature's manifold wonders. Indeed, this mountain-bound plateau, high up on the summit of the everlasting Rockies, is a veritable playground for the world's giant forces. To stand and gaze upon them all in their marvelous manifestations, — the great geyser upheavals, the fierce steam blasts, the terrible leap of the river, and the awful canon, — is a revelation, an experience to be had at no other point on earth. The personally conducted tour of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which leaves New York on Sept. 2nd, affords the most satisfactory means of visiting this wonderful and viewing its marvelous features. Tourists will travel by special train of Pullman smoking, dining sleeping, and observation cars in each direction. Eight days will be spent in the Park. Stops will also be made, returning, at St. Paul and Chicago. The round-trip rate, $235 from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, $280 from Pittsburg, covers every necessary expense. For detailed itineraries and full information, apply to ticket agents, Tourist Agent, 1190 Broadway, N.Y., or address Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, at Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

AN ORDINANCE regulating the Licensing of Inns and Taverns in the Town of Hammonton for the sale of liquor.
Introduced July 31, 1897.
Passed Aug. 14, 1897.
1. Be it ordained by the "Town of Hammonton" that hereafter it shall be lawful for the Board of Councilmen to license and regulate inns and taverns and sale of liquors in said Town of Hammonton, subject to the following conditions: That the applicant for said license shall be recommended by at least twelve freeholders owning property in said Town of Hammonton who shall certify that the person so recommended by him is of good repute for honesty and temperance that said inn or tavern is necessary and will conduce to the public good.
2. Be it ordained that no license shall be granted to any person under the provisions of this ordinance except upon the payment of three hundred dollars to the Town of Hammonton.
3. Be it ordained that all licenses granted under the provisions of this ordinance shall date from the second Wednesday in May, annually; provided, that license granted prior to May 1st, 1898, shall be granted upon payment of a ratable proportion of the fee prescribed in the second section of this ordinance.
4. Be it ordained that all ordinance, or parts of ordinance inconsistent with the provisions of this ordinance be and the same are hereby repealed and this ordinance shall take effect immediately.
