ELWOOD NOTES.

Mrs. Elizabeth L. Johnson, of Brooklyn, is visiting friends in Elwood. It seems quite natural to have her with us again.

Mr. W. L. Stone has left the W. J. & S. R. R. depot in this place, and has a position as night operator at Haddon Ave. station, Camden.

Miss Freda Estabrook, of Hammonton, spent a few days with her aunt, Mrs. A. E. Holden, this week.

Mr. W. A. Bischoff is still in a precarious condition, although there is some improvement since he was first taken sick.

Monday evening, of this week, a "handkerchief surprise" party was given to Miss Reba E. Stone, in honor of her birthday. The party included Misses Laura Bozarth, Alice Platt, Eva Vanderlip, Bella Jacobs, Jessie Beekman, Dena Unger and Edna Holden; Messrs. Harry Sherman, Chas. Ebell, Willard and George Bozarth, and Howard Vanderlip. The evening was spent in playing games of all descriptions. Cake, fruit and lemonade were served as refreshments.

Wednesday morning the members of the congregation of Elwood Brainerd Presbyterian Church, and all citizens interested in preparing the lot on which it is to stand, assembled at the corner of Union Ave. and County Road, to participate in the exercises at the breaking of ground. As Elder Watson made the first break in the soil, the congregation sang the Doxology, after which Rev. Mr. Tyler, of Ocean City, led in prayer. Rev. G. W. Jester, of the M. E. Church, then made a short address, after which one verse of "Nearer my God to Thee" was sung. Rev. Mr. Tyler made a few remarks, and we were told that the next in order of exercises was the muscular act. The men and boys went to work with a will, to dig the collar (each of the ladies had a hand in it, also), and well earned the good dinner which the ladies prepared for them and arranged so temptingly under the trees. 'Twas not long, however, before everyone was running, plate in hand, to find shelter from the heavy shower that came upon them. But they were not to be cheated out of their dinner; the tables were re-set in the empty Lieber house, and the men enjoyed their dinners as only men can who work hard for it.

Church Notices.

W. C. T. U.

The ladies have taken this space by the year, and are responsible for all that it may contain.

That was a sight to make angels weep, when three sisters, the eldest but twenty years of age, stood before a judge, in Philadelphia, and were thankful to give such testimony as would shut their drunken mother within the House of Correction for one year.

The burden and shame imposed upon their young lives was more than they could bear. They had struggled bravely, "tried hard to get our mother to stop drinking, but she wouldn't." The interposition of the law was a relief,
—a chance for their lives to develop as God gave them right.

And these things are done at the opening of the twentieth century, in a so-called Christian country.

How Highbinder Won His Race

I seemed to me I had reached the end of my resources. Luck was against me. My political opponent had snatched the honors for which I had been striving for months from my hands at the very moment I deemed a desperate position—contingent thereon—within my grasp. Worst of all, this man had been hanging around Alice's home, and her father, who thoroughly understood my suit, had begun to look coldly, and recently upon several occasions had asked Scoville to share his box at the opera.

Scoville had several fine horses on the track—one in particular which had won the laurels from all competitors, and only two days ago I had seen Alice skimming through the park behind this very trotter and by the side of Bert Scoville.

It was a delicious thought to do, but after rising late and a hasty breakfast, I hurried around to the stable, and my horse harnessed up and was at Alice's door before 10 o'clock. Her father should surely be offended by such an early call upon his daughter.

She swept into the room—a beautiful digress of a woman, in soft caresses of face and milk and with the flush of the night's sleep still beneath her eyes.

"Gracious me, Ted, so early in the morning! You look worried. How gray those curls are getting each side of your forehead! Come, tell me what it is!" And she pulled the forehead curls gently.

"It's no use, Alice, I'm down in luck. And I suppose your father has about become tired of looking for me to do something. You are right to give me the shoo and go over to Scoville."

"Now, what nonsense he's talking! I suppose you mean that old, tired, faded man who has been hanging around Alice's home, and her father, who thoroughly understood my suit, had begun to look coldly, and recently upon several occasions had asked Scoville to share his box at the opera."

"What is it, Alice? For God's sake speak at once!" I cried, my nerve restored, as I drew her near to my chair and clasped my arms loosely about her waist.

"You see Highbinder," she said, pointing to where my horse stood hitched to the pavilion, at the foot of the sloping lawn. Yes, I did see him. He was a young, brawny, muscular, handsome horse, who was as ugly as Satan in looks and actions, but he displayed an unlimited endurance, which is an essential quality in a racing horse. But while on the race course his temper was most vicious. He would bite and kick at any one who approached him, excepting myself, and he often tried to run away even while practicing on the track. Yet I always managed to keep control of him, knowing that if I could ever get him under proper training, he had the endurance and strength to win a race from the best blooded stock in the country.

At that moment Scoville drove slowly past with a light buggy and pair. He looked my horse over in a way that made me long to knock him down then turned to his companion with some remark which caused both of them to laugh derisively.

"Never mind, Ted, my plan is for you to train Highbinder and beat Robert Scoville's trotter. You can get big odds. Put up thousands of dollars on your horse!"

"But Alice," I cried, "it is no use. And if I should lose, where will the thousands come from?"

She laid her hand on my arm and looking steadfastly in my eyes said, "I do love you, Ted, and I will do anything for you."

"And my knowledge of drugs shall serve us again," she said significantly as a request for an explanation resorted to my lips, she hurriedly interrupted me.

"You know the only obstacle to our marriage is my father's consent to our union. He has been the fact that you are not wealthy."

"Trust me, do as I tell you and we shall win."

"What could I do but take her in my arms and promise?"

I rushed Highbinder on the race course and off it, day after day, month after month, at first without much prospect of betterment of his trotting capacity or of confining him within the narrow limits of the track. But at last I was able to knock him down to his place. Alice watched the proceedings with as much interest as I did. After an summer or so, when the fall racing season opened, we decided to put him to a test.

I had, for the most part, kept Highbinder training secret from those with whom I should be likely to compete or make my bets, so that they did not know how well prepared I was to cope with them. They had seen but few of my efforts upon my untrained and vicious animal, and by these they judged me as an "easy mark." There was $10,000 up for the prize, and I forced the day on which he was to make or ruin me, and possessed alternately by fear and confidence.

It was scarcely more than light when I went around to the stables to look him over. As I approached him, I was surprised to see Alice, in a severe black riding habit that showed to advantage the curves of her beautiful form, glide softly through the door as if she was not to be seen, and mounting her own nervous pretty mare, rode rapidly away.

"What did the lady want?" I asked of the sleepy groom, who was lazily commencing his morning duties.

"Asked to have a look at your horse," he said to always show her every situation when she came. This time she went right into the ugly critter's stall!"

I turned pale. "My God, man, you shouldn't have let her do that!"

"Well, she came out sane enough, didn't she?"

I turned away, at first a little puzzled by her action. But then, Alice was as much of a horse fancier as I was myself, and most of course he should not have let her do that."

stayed. As I stood in perplexity I happened to look toward the end of the track. There in all her magnificence and by her side sat Scoville, leaning down at me in the most contemptuous manner. It was hard to tell what Alice was thinking as her eyes rested upon me, for they were almost, curbed by the peculiar droop of the lids, which she affected when she did not wish to be understood.

The bell rang.

"I don't see how you're going to do it—you can't get no one to drive that horse," said Scoville's lackey.

I turned suddenly sick and dizzy. Presently I was seized with an idea.

"I will find a jockey," I told back for a few minutes.

In a short time I reappeared with a jockey's cap pulled well over my eyes that no one should know me. My only fear was in the weight I should put upon my horse.

At the word, Highbinder took the lead, and Alice, who was sure indication of something really serious, with a quick movement she took his head between her hands. Before I could spring forward and warn her away, she was gone.

I felt it would be useless to try the last heat. With Highbinder in his present condition, all was lost—hope, love, honor. There was but one thing left for a man in my position.

As I stood with drooping head a woman's voice whispered in my ear, "Courage!"

I started as if I had been stung. Although Alice had turned to Scoville, and was chatting and laughing, I knew she had said the word.

Spurred into anger and action I set my teeth and gathered up the reins. The first jump was a failure. Mrs. Adams, who was sitting in the box, was laughing and laughing, I knew she had said the word.

next heat. My poor horse had evidently expended all of his reserve force, and we were ignominiously defeated. As I stood with despair and terror in my heart, Alice hurried past me with a gasp. She was the first to see which I had striven. She dismounted because I had displayed the courage aroused by this greatest extremity of my life in assuming the habit of a jockey. She paused beside my horse, looking at him sympathetically. He was covered with foam and perspiration, and his limbs were trembling. There was a peculiar look about his nostrils that is a sure indication of something really serious. With a quick movement she took his head between her hands. ## DOROTHY QUINCY.

Hancock's fiancée presented a Premier of the room twice. The first time a few commonplace remarks, to which she replied somewhat listlessly. There was a far-away look in her eyes.

"Shall we sit out the rest?" he asked at length.

"Something in the tone roused her. She glanced at him and saw that his eyes were fastened on her face. She felt a slight shiver run through her. He did not notice that she went a shade pale.

"It's my favorite walk," she said in a low, quick tone. "Do you mind if we dance it through?" She added, forcing a smile.

"By all means," he said courteously. And away they went again.

"But our next dance?" he said gravely a moment later. "You will sit out with me? I have something to say to you—something of the greatest importance to me."

A feeling of helplessness crept over her.

"Very well, then," she said—green-blingly. "Our next dance?" he asked gravely. "You will sit out with me? I have something to say to you—something of the greatest importance to me."

"By all means," he said courteously. And away they went again.

For Congressman,

Hon. John J. Gardner.

OUR TEACHERS.

Here is a completed list of Hammoncton school teachers for the coming term, subject to possible changes in the assignments:

Superintendent, Newton Clark Holdridge, M. A.
First Assistant, Miss Clara P. Weston.
Second Asst., Miss Kate E. High.
Third Asst., Miss Lena M. Chapman.
Fourth Asst., Miss S. Barnhouse.
Sixth Grade, Miss Amanda Wilson.
Fifth Grade (Senior), Miss Frances V. French.

Fourth Grade, Miss A. DeB. Tweed.
Third Grade, Miss Katherine Carson.

First Grade, Miss Nettie Monfort.
Kindergarten, Miss Etta B. Stelman.
Music, Miss Myrtle M. Dickey.
Main Road, Miss Viola Adams.
Union Road, Miss Mabel Durphoy.
Lake, Miss George Thomas.
First Road, Miss Ella Collins.
Rosedale, Miss Bissell, Lakeland.
Magnolia, Miss Nellie Hurley.

Some of our local talent will be stationed as follows, the coming year:

Mr. H. Rogers, Principal of the State's Landing School.
Chas. P. Campanella, at Farmington.
Miss Belle Carls, at Farmington.
Miss Pearl Adams, at Tuckahoe.
Miss Myrtle Smith, at Folsom.
Miss Cora Crowell, at Newtonville.
Miss Josie Gaston, at Pleasant Mills.
Miss Lena Davidson, at Weekstown.

There is to be a unique entertainment in Union Hall to-night. Mr. C. Edgar Hooey, the crayon artist, will be the attraction, with piano, violin, quartette, solo, etc. Mr. H. has a national reputation, and his engagements every night during the next six months, but comes to Hammoncton because of personal friendship. The program indicates humor of the kind that pure minds will enjoy. Proceeds for the benefit of the Baptist Church.

Mr. Conline Chow died at his home, at Second and Peach Streets, on Wednesday, aged 73 years. He has been a lifelong resident in this vicinity, a honest hard working man, well-known and respected. Last winter he fell from an icy step, and never fully recovered from the injury. He has been quite ill for some time past. Funeral services at the home this morning, at ten o'clock, conducted by Pastor Jowett.

Last Friday evening, as Jordan Bryant (colored), employed by L. Hard Parkhurst, and Jesse Lamberson (also colored) F. S. Swift's hired man, were playing checkers, a dispute arose, resulting in Bryant drawing a revolver on Lamberson. On Saturday Bryant was taken before Justice Garton, who placed him under a hundred dollars to keep the peace.

Joseph J. Naylor and Miss Leslie Waters, both of Hammoncton, were married on Saturday evening, Aug. 23d, 1902, at the Baptist parsonage, by Rev. H. F. Loomis. A wedding supper was served later, at the residence of the groom's father, Mr. Geo. H. Naylor.

Robert Steel, the jeweler, is taking his vacation on the mainland. Mrs. Steel is spending a few weeks in Cape May City. Mr. S. goes down on Saturday; Monday he spends at his office at the Court House, then two days at the shore, and the balance of the week at Hammoncton.

Two well known young men, a night or two since, were visiting two young ladies, and time must surely have passed very pleasantly, for it was in the small hours of the morning that they turned homeward. By mistake, the house had been securely locked up, and rather than disturb the sleeping inmates, they concluded to pass the few remaining hours of darkness in the summer kitchen.

After nearly nine years as book-keeper in the office of Harbison's mill, lumber and coal yard, A. V. W. Setley has resigned to take charge of the office at the Estey-Organs and Piano factory at Hudson, N. Y. Why we regret the loss of a model young citizen, we regret that a worthy man has received so satisfactory a promotion. He will leave Hammoncton about Sept. 10th.

The first precinct election board will include W. R. Seely and Wm. Cunningham; second precinct, B. B. Ruby and Chester M. Crowell. The Democratic members have not been named yet.

We have not as yet heard lower Bellevue Avenue called "the cyclers' delight," at least since the "patching" was begun. Some have accused us of terming the road "fine," but we merely said that it would be appreciated when well packed; and that will require a good soaking rain, leveling with the scraper, and a thorough rolling.

Base-Ball News.

Oh, but 'twas awful! that game last Saturday. The way the visiting team juggled, and muffed the poor ball, and slammed it anywhere,—it was a weariness and vexation to watch. How they escaped with only five errors to their credit on the score!

Well, our fellows did play pretty good ball; only Brown's playing was a little erratic at times, but he had an unusual number of chances. Setley accepted ten chances at second, in an errorless game. At the bat, Hamonton did wonders,—23 hits! They certainly played a slugging game. Conley made a wonderful record—7 hits and 5 runs, with four put-outs. His catch of Rheinhold's fly, in the eighth, was good. One of the prettiest plays of the season was Brown's stop of Garrett's drive, in the fifth, connecting with second and first for a double play.

We will spare our readers a detailed account of the game, and give only

The "Speak Easy" Case.
EDITOR REPUBLICAN:
The recent binding of a party to appear before the grand jury for selling liquor without a license deserves more attention than is given by those interested.

The supposition is that our Town Council should put an end to such violations of the law. It may be mentioned that the present Councilmen have done all within their power in that direction. The difficulty is to secure witnesses. In the case mentioned, Mr. Ditchelor was compelled to sacrifice his business interests in Philadelphia, and take upon himself considerable responsibility. Mr. Boyer also gave a portion of his time to secure the facts.

One point which I wish to impress upon citizens is, that a Councilman is not a policeman. True, he can make arrests when violations come "under his view," but it is not his duty to patrol the town. Any citizen can make complaints, and have warrants issued to arrest.

In this case, the witnesses were also bound over to appear. This is not very encouraging to those who may be compelled to leave their work and go to May's Landing, perhaps waiting a week before the case is called. I believe that the proper thing to do is for those who are interested in eliminating the illegal sales of liquor to raise a fund to compensate witnesses for their loss. Here is an excellent opportunity for true missionary work.

We have several temperance associations in our town, but they have done nothing. I use plain language, though it may not be agreeable to some. Let us give credit to Council for what it has done. It is evident that no others are interested sufficiently to do the "work" required, although every citizen is, in one respect, an officer to enforce the law.

No one will desire to be a witness under present conditions. Each person in the community desires the "other fellow" to make charges and incur the expense of time and labor. Let us remunerate these witnesses, and give a vote of thanks to those who, like Mr. Ditchelor, are not afraid to swear to the charges, secure the witnesses, and send the cases to court.

P. H. JACOBI.

The Facts in the Case.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN: Please allow me to reply to your article in last issue, referring to the speak-easy.

Sunday evening, Aug. 17th, Marshal Myers received a call from the son of Mr. Fred. Warner, that an officer was wanted at Dr. Cunningham's. Mr. Myers went there and found a man sitting on the porch, but could get no information. He then asked one of the doctor's family what was wanted; the answer came, after consulting the doctor, that "the doctor is able to take care of this case." Of course the Marshal went away.

On my arrival in town on Monday, about 6:30 p.m., the Marshal advised me as to the above occurrence. That evening I received a letter from a very prominent citizen, informing me, among other things, of a stabbing affray the day before; also of a speak-easy on Middle Road, "about one hundred miles from a bridge." I at once informed Justice Garton, requesting him to see the well known citizen on Tuesday, and I would meet him on the arrival of the three o'clock train. At our meeting the Justice stated that the good citizen refused to give names of the witnesses. We started at once to investigate, with Constable Rizzotte and Mr. Sooy, and after a long ride found the wounded man about 6:30, but not at his home. Rizzotte & Sooy were given a warrant to arrest the stabber. The Justice and myself remained with the wounded man, and tried to elicit evidence on a speak-easy charge. The officers returned with the statement that their man had gone out of this jurisdiction. We finally secured evidence that the injured man had bought beer for five cents, but he refused to make complaint. I then swore out a warrant, and went with Constable Rizzotte to assist in serving it. We found the man, and all went back to Justice Garton's. The prisoner plead "not guilty." We then went back to the wounded man, and having found another man who had bought beer, took both statements under oath. It being then about ten o'clock, the case was continued until Friday morning, by which time we had secured a third witness, and the accused was committed for trial to Court. The witnesses were also held in bonds to appear at trial.

From the facts related above, I certainly believe that Town Council and Justice Garton worked hard on this case, and Committee lost no time, notwithstanding the inconvenience,—the prominent citizen refusing to give the name of any witness, and locating the speak-easy "one hundred miles from a bridge."

The stabber would also have been arrested if the officer had been admitted at Dr. Cunningham's to make an investigation, as the accused would not have had time to get away. We are making every effort to secure the stabber, and hope to land him yet this week.

The "good citizen" mentioned in your article is possibly like the one I refer to, and may be the same man. If any citizen will give the committee any information, at any time, in any case, it will be thankfully received.

Dog Poisoning.
The meeting of which you gave notice last week was held on Tuesday evening, and largely attended by residents of town, reinforced by visitors who were aroused to active sympathy with the movement.

A permanent organization was effected, with the title of "The Hamonton Dog Protective Association," and after a general and enthusiastic discussion, it was resolved, in substance, that—

A committee of the whole be constituted, to take such steps as may be deemed necessary to put a stop to dog poisoning, and, if necessary, to proceed with measures which will lead to the conviction of the offender, in case of further killing of dogs. The assistance of Town Council and the cooperation of the S. P. C. A. are desired. Mr. E. H. Chandler to be associated as Counsel.

The following committee will be glad of the cooperation of all persons who may feel disposed to aid them in the matter:

H. W. Richards Alfred Reed
J. E. Reed J. E. Winkler
C. F. Nicholson C. F. Minkley
John T. Ash H. P. Loomis

"Where is the fire?" That's what the firemen were saying, about nine o'clock on Monday night, as they searched about town for the unhappy party who needed their services. The bell rang an unmistakable alarm, and the boys responded promptly, but they perspired in vain while dragging their heavy apparatus in various directions; but, halting near Hotel Royal, and having seen neither fire nor smoke, they leisurely returned to headquarters and called the roll. They say that the Marshal saw a rush of steam from Berns-house' mill, upon which the electric lights shone, thought it was certainly a fire, and gave the alarm, leaving to others the task of investigation. And he did the proper thing. But what puzzles us is, why did not the firemen learn from the Marshal at least the direction in which to run? Looks as though somebody was rattled.
