Ivory Soap is the standard by which all other soaps are judged.
Some soap manufacturers claim that their product is "as good" or
"as pure" or "as cheap" as Ivory.
Possibly it is. But neither you nor any other sensible woman will bother with the "as good" kind!
You want real Ivory Soap; not an imitation.

Ivory Soap.. 99% Per Cent. Pure

Why don't you use a Westinghouse
Electric Iron too?

It will relieve you of the hardest part of ironing,
because you don't have any fire to keep up,
you don't have to take any unnecessary steps,
you don't have to change irons constantly,
you don't have to iron where it is hot, uncomfortable, and unsanitary.
With a Westinghouse Electric Iron, you can seek a cool spot, and iron in comfort.
All the heat goes into the ironing surface, and it stays hot during the entire ironing.

Set a Good Example.

Oh! set a good example every day.
That's the way
To keep this world improving without rest.
For children—others too—
Will copy what you do.
Oh! then make sure they imitate your best.
Have you a hard temper? Keep it down!
Wear no frown.
That dreadful thing that makes your
beauty fade,
When cutting words would rile,
Oh! give the loving smile;
And then enjoy the sunshine you have made.
Seek not for faults in your neighbor's zone;
Watch your own.
You'll find enough to occupy your time.
If you are any worse,
Do what other people should,
Our wicked world would quickly be sublime.
So set a good example every day;
That's the way
To keep the world improving without rest.
Put envy, malice, spite,
Behind you, out of sight;
And stand before the world its honored guest.

Let Not Love Go, Too.

Now the purple night is past,
Now the moon more faintly glows,
Down her through-thicket-cast
Roses on thy breast, a rose,
Now the kisses are all done,
Now the words are all said,
Now the charmed hour is gone—
Let not love go, too.

When old winter, creeping high,
Sprinkles raven hair with white,
Dimes the brightly glancing eye,
Laughs away the dancing light,
Lilies may forget their dew,
Beauties perish, one by one—
Let not love go, too.

The Demagogues Daughter

James Cruff got back home to tea after a stormy meeting in the market-square, tired and bad-tempered. For the first time in the course of the seven weeks' strike of the men of Murray & Sons, he had been obliged to admit to himself that his influence over the men was waning.

The only thing which was satisfactory to Cruff was the fact that Murray & Sons would be back in the market-square by the end of the week. He was not of a mind to continue the strike.

On the other hand the very fact which would offend the back of the employers established the certainty that his ability to persuade the men from giving in till they had got better terms was unreliable. And this worried him deeply, for the reason that he had secretly pledged himself to Messrs. Heston, Williams, Limited, Murray's rivals, that the strike should not collapse until it would be too late for Murray to tender for the large Government contract which Heston, Williams, Limited, were moving here and there to obtain, and if he failed to redeem his pledge he would fall behind the substantial check for the promise of which he had sold his honor as leader of the strikers.

Betty Cruff, his daughter was quick to perceive that he was out of temper, and as he threw his hat upon the settle and took his seat at the tea-table, she fetched the last pot of jam out of the cupboard and set it before him.

"Betty," he exclaimed, "chumping the table, 'I do believe you're the only one that cares two pence how I look, or what I say, I do believe. They are an ungrateful lot; that's what they are.'"

"Yes, but, as Ben says, half a loaf is better than no bread," she returned, mildly.

"Course he does! Just what he would say! I wouldn't expect Ben Stanton to say anything else! It's just such mean spirit chaps who'll take half a loaf and prevent others getting a whole one thereby. He's been pulling against me a long time, mean while coming hanging around here after what I'll be home. He's no fellow for you from Betty. What he follows her back to work on the old terms tomorrow?"

"He's got a widowed mother, poor soul, to think about," said Betty, soft, looking deep into her cup. And he's looking deep into the last shilling of his savings."

"Savings?" snapped Cruff, putting down his cup suddenly. What about the savings of Jack Kitchey, Pendle and Winder? How much had they taken?"

"They drink and Ben doesn't, which makes all the difference," she said, sharply.

"How you talk, girl," said Cruff, protestingly.

A silence fell between them. They had been much to each other. "Take a whole man and motherless girl, and it was anything in the world Cruff loved better than money it was Betty, and she had loved him as much because of his many weaknesses as for his few good qualities."

Cruff picked up his spoon, hastily, and the towel folded in Betty's hand. "What's that?" asked Cruff, curiously.

"Ben, I expect," she said, pouring into the milk and sugar.

"I mean," she said, hesitatingly, "I wouldn't have come if he hadn't said to me."

Cruff snatched his spoon as she slipped out of the kitchen, pulling the towel after her.

BLUE LAWS' NO JOKE.

For years, the blue laws have been a subject of much discussion. The blue laws are no joke, though often so treated. They are the laws of the land, and they are the laws of the people. They are the laws of the land, and they are the laws of the people. They are the laws of the land, and they are the laws of the people.

The blue laws are the laws of the land, and they are the laws of the people. They are the laws of the land, and they are the laws of the people. They are the laws of the land, and they are the laws of the people.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. C. F. J. WRIGLEY.

Theme: The True Life.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 2, C. F. J. Wrigley, rector of Grace Church, preached Sunday.

Epworth League

TOPIC FOR SEPTEMBER 4, 1910. CHAPTER RALLY DAY.

Mat. 21:18-19. Heb. 10:24, 25.

"Take heed, brethren, lest haply there shall be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in falling away from the living God, but exhort one another daily—aye, as ye see the day approaching—lest any of you, being moved by deceitfulness of sin," (Heb. 3:12-13).

From sharpness of sin, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend." (Prov. 27:17).

We are all dependent upon each other for help in the development of our mental and moral and spiritual faculties. No man can attain to the measure of the stature of true Christianity without the help of his fellow-men.

The Epworth League is a body of young people who are united together for the purpose of helping one another in the development of their mental and moral and spiritual faculties.

GROWING ALFALFA.

Wm. H. Bernshouse, of Hammononton, has about completed his contract with the "N. J. Alfalfa Land Company," for planting 140 acres in alfalfa, at Waterford, where they recently acquired the "Buist Seed Farm" of 319 acres, and next season expect to have the largest field of alfalfa in the East.

The light well-drained soil of this section is well adapted to the growth of this wonderful crop, which when properly planted will cut an average of three crops each season, yielding a total of four tons of hay per acre.

Alfalfa is not an experiment in South Jersey. Mr. E. T. Gill, of Haddonfield, President of above company, has been growing it for several years, and has sixty acres from which he has cut an average of four and a-half tons per acre, this season.

Prof. E. B. Voorhees, consulting director of this company, harvested forty-two tons of alfalfa hay from a fourteen acre field, at New Brunswick, from one cutting. George Wood, a director of the Penna. R. Co., has sixty acres, from which he will cut between three and four tons to the acre this season. Dr. Chas. M. Seltzer, Hatboro, Pa., has thirty acres, which will yield one hundred and fifty tons this season.

As a ton of alfalfa hay is equal in feeding qualities to a ton of wheat bran, it has a ready sale at $20 to $25 per ton.

In a recent article, Prof. Voorhees states that there are in this State several hundred thousand acres of non-productive land which if planted in alfalfa will yield an average annual income of fifty dollars per acre. The application of lime, fertilizer and inoculation will make this land peculiarly well adapted for the rapid growth of alfalfa, which can be made to yield for six to eight seasons without replanting or cultivation. It costs no more than ordinary hay to harvest; never makes a crop failure, even in extremely dry seasons, as the tap-root goes down from ten to fifteen feet, to moisture.

The "Saturday Evening Post" of Feb. 26 last refers to the alfalfa crop in Kansas as follows: "Three to six tons of hay is an average yield for an acre of alfalfa hay, that commands a higher price in the Kansas City market than clover or timothy, and worth $12 per ton at the farm, if properly cured to retain its fragrance and rich green color. One crop, usually second, is saved for seed, which is hulled same as clover. Seed yield is six to nine bushels per acre, and sells from $6 to $9 per bushel, swelling the gross income from one acre to $50 or $75, with exceptional instances where $100 is exceeded in a single season.

Ten dollars per acre was a high price for much of this land a dozen years ago; now the farmer fears to put a price on it, lest a buyer be lurking near. Ten times ten dollars is now no inducement for many alfalfa growers to part with their land; for where can they obtain a better investment?

Kansas has 750,000 acres planted in alfalfa, which produced last year over $34,000,000 worth of hay and seed.

These figures make it impossible to overlook the fact that alfalfa is one of the most productive and profitable crops we have. As a fertilizing crop, and as a means of putting a worn-out farm in paying condition, it has no equal.

Words of Appreciation.

MR. EDITOR: In your report of the fire at my place, mention was made of the breakage of furniture by incompetent firemen, or words to that effect. I wish you would correct that report, as nothing was broken, and no men could have worked more valiantly, nor accomplished more real good than did the firemen of Hammononton. I hope to some day show my appreciation in a more substantial manner. I cannot command language sufficiently strong to express my feelings. To those fearless men is due the fact that my home was saved. Had it not been for their united efforts I would have lost everything.

Hence it grieved me to read that I suffered any loss by the acts of incompetence or carelessness.

I extend heartfelt thanks to all who kindly turned in and worked like heroes. "A friend in need is a friend indeed" was never more plainly demonstrated than on that fatal day. I want the firemen of Hammononton to fully understand that I more than appreciated their valuable services, and will not forget them. They deserve more than thanks. Respectfully,

ANTHONY MUCKENSTURM.

(The article referred to was: "In justice to our firemen, it should be stated that whatever damage was done to furniture and fixtures, last Friday (Aug. 12), at the Rosedale fire, was caused by inexperienced volunteers, and not members of the fire companies." We had been informed that there was much damage, but we are pleased to publish to the contrary.)

THANKS.—We desire to publicly express to the firemen our appreciation of their efficient services at our fire on Tuesday afternoon.
