Agricultural.

Salt Mud as a Fertilizer.

The attention of farmers along the sea shore and inland has been attracted recently to the value of salt mud as a fertilizer. The American Agriculturalist, on this subject, says: Large quantities of mud accumulate in the bays and coves along the sea shore, made up of the wash of rivers, of decayed manure, vegetation, and in many cases of animal remains, shell fish, and very minute organisms. It is found in many places of great depth, and so soft that an animal would sink out of sight in it. It is very fine and of great value as a fertilizer. Near the shore this mud is laid bare at very low tides, and it might be easily collected by the use of wheelbarrows and planks. The deeper water, all grass within its roots into, and the mud is pulled up in large quantities with the grass stalks. Much of the virtue attributed to the grass, which is generally used by shore farmers, is doubtless due to this mud. More of the mud and less of the grass would be better policy. We have seen, says the Agriculturalist, the mud applied as a dressing for corn, and potatoes with the best results. It is an excellent top dressing for grass, often doubling the crops the first season. An analysis of this article made by Prof. Johnson shows that the organic matter contains 40 per cent. of nitrogen, or nearly double the amount found in good peat. The mud should be weathered a few months before it is applied. Summer is the best time to see to it.

DRINK GREEN CORN.

A lady, whom we regard as one of our best neighbors and a model house-keeper, remarked to us the other day, that she had never seen her process of preserving green corn for winter, given among the cooking receipts which she had read in the Farmer or in other papers, and that she thought it was not so generally known as it ought to be. She remarked that her family were quite fond of it, and would be very unwilling to do without it, when fresh vegetable food is as scarce as it generally is during our long winter season. Late in the season, when sweet corn becomes plenty, she boils a kettle of it, cooking it just as for table use. The kernels are then cut from the cob, placed on tins and dried by the stove. It might be dried in the sun, but as her cooking stove furnishes good conveniences, she has never tried that plan. When sufficiently dry it is tied up in cloth bags, to keep out insects, &c., and kept in a dry place.

TO PREPARE IT FOR BREAKFAST.

If she has plenty of milk and thinks there is no danger of its souring, the corn is soaked overnight in cold milk. But if there is danger of the milk souring it may be heated before being poured on the corn. If milk is scarce, the corn may be soaked in milk and water, or even in cold water. Milk, however, adds much to its palatability. In the morning it is put upon the stove and warmed and then buttered and salted to taste. In her family, she says it is as much the standard dish for Sunday breakfast, as pork and beans ever were for dinner. It is also often called for, and always welcomed as a luxury at other meals. — N. E. Farmer.

TRAITING BEES WITH COLD WATER.

Bees in swarming have been known to alight upon persons and animals stinging them severely and in some instances causing death. The American Bee Journal, in referring to an instance of the kind, where a swarm of bees recently settled on the head of a horse standing in front of a church and the owner, who went to its assistance, was stung senseless, says that all the difficulty could have been obviated by the use of cold water.

IN SUCH CASES THE JOURNAL ADVISES

a prompt application of a few gallons of cold water sprinkled from a common watering pot directly on the clustering bees. It remarks that "a little knowledge, presence of mind and calmness would have been serviceable here; for nothing is more apt to rouse the ill temper of bees than to come in contact with a sweaty horse; and a horse is a most helpless animal when attacked by bees."

DURING THE EXTREME HOT WEATHER OF JULY,

we had several swarms come off that were extremely irascible, and we treated them to a sprinkling of cold water, after which they became quiet, were easily handled and were hived without trouble. — Utica Herald.

CANADIAN CROPS.

The wheat crop in Canada generally promises to be over an average, and most of it is ready for reaping. Hay is turning out better than was expected, and is of excellent quality, and well saved. Barley will not be up to the average, and oats and peas are nowhere, both being burnt up by the heat. In the township of Hatley, Barnston and Stanstead, wheat, early sown, promises well, as do also barley and oats. Hops and corn are looking well, but owing to the long continued drought, potatoes and buckwheat must prove almost a total failure. In L'Orignal district, in addition to the drought there have been great losses occasioned by the immense fires which have been raging in the woods for several weeks. The fires have in some places swept before them large fields of grain.

Measuring Boxes and Barrels.

A barrel contains 10.76 cubic inches. A box 24 inches long by 12 inches wide and 20 inches deep—that is on the inside—will hold just a barrel. A Half-Barrel—A box 24 inches long by 16 inches wide and 14 inches deep. This will contain 5,376 cubic inches, or just half a barrel. A Bushel—This has 2,150.42 cubic inches. A bushel box will be 10.10 inches square and 8 inches deep. A Half-Bushel—A box 12 inches long by 11.21 inches wide, and 8 inches deep, and will hold half a bushel. A Peck—A box 8 inches by 8.4 inches square and 8 inches deep, is a peck. A Half-Peck is 8 by 8 inches square, and 4.2 inches deep, or 206.6 cubic inches. A Half-Gallon—This contains 128.4 cubic inches. A box 7 by 4 inches, and 8.10 inches deep, has just that quantity. A Quart—4 by 4 inches square, and 2.10 inches deep.

LEXON WATER-ICE.

—Rub on sugar the clear rinds of lemons, squeeze the juice of twelve lemons, strain them; boil the sugar into a strong thick syrup, add to the juice half a pint of water, or good barley water, sweeten it with your syrup, add the white of an egg and jelly.

If your flat-irons are rough, rub them with fine salt, and it will make them smooth.

If you are buying carpets for durability,

Would Mr. Blair be a Safe President.

In the canvass preceding the last Presidential election the public character and opinions of the Democratic candidate for the Vice-Presidency were very thoroughly discussed. Mr. Pendleton's votes, opinions and political associations became, in the public mind, of great importance; and that for the reason that most men, even among the Democrats, knew General McClellan, the candidate on the same ticket for the Presidency, to be a weak man, of no well defined or strongly held opinions, who would inevitably be the tool of stronger men if he were elected, and over whom a man like Pendleton would exercise a controlling influence.

No doubt this belief had much to do with the overwhelming defeat which befell the ticket. People who believed McClellan to be harmless and right-minded, feared Pendleton. Voters, who had no fault to find with McClellan's letter of acceptance, yet saw that the more positive opinions of Pendleton would rule the councils of so weak a man as his principal.

In not precisely the same danger before the country now, in case of the election of Seymour? Mr. Seymour is, as everybody knows, a plausible and well meaning, but very weak man. Left alone, he might do little harm. Indeed, it may be said that he would try, if he were independent; to please everybody.

But with Blair behind him, with Blair ready to take his place if he should fall ill, or die, as other Presidents have died, he would be different; and the shrewd southern politicians, having constructed a platform directly antagonistic to Mr. Seymour's expressed opinions, did not hesitate to accept him—falling to carry Pendleton—when they were able to put Blair on the ticket with him.

General Blair's notorious letter, which gained him the nomination, speaks for itself. It means revolution; nothing less. It declares that legally and constitutionally nothing can be done and boldly avows the determination to act in violation of the laws and Constitution.

Moreover, those who know General Blair best declare, unhesitatingly that he is the man to carry out his programme. He is a very different man from Mr. Seymour. He does not vacillate; there is about him no hesitation; he has no scruples; he is ambitious, determined, self-willed, precisely the kind of man from which revolutionaries are made.

If the Democratic ticket is elected, Blair will be the President. Mr. Seymour suffers from ill-health; he is, as everybody knows, and as can be shown, if it is necessary, on the best evidence, subject to a disabling hereditary infirmity; he is not a man of positive character. Even if he lived and retained his health, he would inevitably be subjected and controlled by the men who nominated him—Vallandigham and Pendleton—men who would stand behind him—Blair.

It is well to look back in the face. Those who think the best interests of the people would be subserved by an administration composed of and ruled by Vallandigham, Pendleton and Blair, will naturally and rightfully vote the Democratic ticket. It will secure their objects. But let no one else support that ticket under the impression that Mr. Seymour will control the administration. He is a mere figurehead—just as McClellan was in 1861; a respectable cloak, ready to be thrown off the moment the election is gained.

Whoever does not want Vallandigham,

Pendleton and Blair to rule this country for the next four years, whoever believes, as the great mass of the people of both parties do believe, that these men would work almost irreparable mischief to the

The Copperhead.

The best and bitterest political poem of the day, is the following, by John Hoply. It first appeared in "The Budget Journal."

Of all the factions men we've seen,
No one was ever known so mean
As he who calls himself a Copperhead;
A crafty, cunning Copperhead;
A Rebel cheering Copperhead;
A crawling, slandering
Scowling, pandering
Vicious, spiteful Copperhead.

From him the denunciations of life
And all its courtesies have fled;
He lives in fruitful, factious strife
A testy, touchy Copperhead;
A negro-fearing Copperhead;
A Rebel cheering Copperhead;
An unlearned, unlicked,
Oily-sounding, oil-whipped,
Dough-faced, cringing Copperhead.

When "Save the Union" was the cry,
And thousands for the Union bled,
The Nation's right he did deny
To save this Union Copperhead;
A Son of Liberty Copperhead;
A Golden Rule Copperhead;
A scheming, lying,
Scrambling, flying,
Mean, Canadian Copperhead.

When Southern mercenaries dropped
Three helpless prisoners bound to shod,
And Liberty Prison undermined;
Who then approved? The Copperhead;
The soldier shooting Copperhead;
The patriot hooting Copperhead;
The traitor, hush-ing,
Aid refusing,
Crime-excusing Copperhead.

Who laughed at Fallow's bloody fray,
And Andersonville's murdered dead?
Who staved his hour till long delay?
The traitorous, scoundrel Copperhead;
The crime creating Copperhead;
The crime-excusing Copperhead;
The strife exciting,
Wrath inviting,
Death delighting Copperhead.

When widows mourn their lonely lot,
And orphan children weep their dead,
Who said their just deserts they got?
The Northern Rebel Copperhead;
The widow-labelling Copperhead;
The grief-deviling Copperhead;
The false, conspiring,
City-grating Copperhead.

Nor woman's grief, nor orphan's tears,
Nor even a nation's honored dead,
Are sacred from the lies and sneers,
Of every brutal Copperhead;
Each Church expiring Copperhead;
Each preaching-cursing Copperhead;
Each Union-baiting,
War-exciting,
Ropu-dusting Copperhead.

The Debt and Its Authors.

The Democratic papers and orators are very fond of emphasizing the fact that the United States have a great debt, and that the people are heavily taxed. They declare that when the Democratic party controlled the Government the public expenses were infinitely smaller and the taxes were practically all imperceptible.

Very well; granting that the debt is large and that the taxes are heavy, why do they not continue and tell us why they are so? For the same reason that the criminal preferred not to plead guilty. The debt is large and the taxes are heavy because the Democratic party when it was constitutionally removed from power, rose in rebellion at the South, remained as a party hostile at the North and compelled the Government to fight desperately for its existence. An enormous war makes an enormous debt. Those who caused the war created the debt. Who began war? Was it Jefferson Davis, Wade Hampton, Robert Toombs, Raphael Semmes, and the other Southern Democratic leaders who fired upon Fort Sumter, or was it Major Anderson who defended it? If the people had submitted to the cannon of those Democratic patriots and conservative friends of the constitution there would have been no debt and no taxation to day.

The debt is the price of the salvation of the country from the rebellion of Democrats. If the Democrats had acquiesced in the constitutional results of an election in which they took part there would have been no war, no debt, no increased taxation. The debt is a Democratic debt, and the taxes are sharp bits of a failed conspiracy of Democrats against the Government.

And what is the remedy for this increased taxation which the Democratic platform proclaims? "Swindling." First the Democratic leaders take the money from our pockets, and then the humor from our names. As we have achieved a material victory in the war, they are trying to prepare for us a moral defeat by refusing to pay the expenses of the war. And this which is the purpose of those whose haughty hearts still swell in hatred of the Union, and who disdain the Government, when they do not control it, is to be submitted, in the words of Mr. Richard O. Gorman, to "the calm, quiet, thoughtful common sense of the people." — Harper's Weekly.

The Worcester Spy, writes the following epitaph for a headstone, which will be wanted before the next snow falls.

Without hope of resurrection,
All that remains of
AMERICAN DEMOCRACY
(faintly so called)
Her appalling crime, war to have sacrificed
A Million Lives
And Many Thousand Millions of Treasure
In a foolish struggle to perpetuate
The sacred right of
AMERICAN SLAVERY.
In the presence of this epitaph, it is
It would be mockery to utter
The name of any VIRTUE.

One of the best replies we have noticed in the canvass is that of the Hon. John A. Bingham of Ohio, who, while speaking at a Republican meeting in Bangor, Maine, was interrupted by a Copperhead, who cried out, "How about Mr. Sumner?" Mr. Bingham instantly responded:

"How about her?—Go and consult the records of the court that tried and convicted her. Go and ask Gen. Hancock, who issued the order for her execution in spite of a writ of habeas corpus which had been served upon him; and, if you are still unsatisfied, go and ask that spotate President, Andrew Johnson, why he refused a pardon after a petition had been sent him signed by every member but one of the court who tried her, and drawn up in the handwriting of the man you seek to insult."

A small placard, surrounded with a deep black border, and bearing the usual emblems of mourning, with the following inscription, is being circulated in New York.

"SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF THE COLORED ORPHAN ASYLUM OF NEW YORK, WHICH WAS BURNED TO ASHES JULY, 1863, BY A RUSSIANLY MOB, WHO WERE ACKNOWLEDGED AND ADDRESSED BY HONORABLE SEYMOUR, GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK; AS BEING HIS 'PARENTS.' GOD SAVE THE STATE OF NEW YORK!"

Miscellaneous.

A Cripple for Life.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

"Have you noticed that dear little fellow on crutches at the white house in Marion street?" said one of three ladies who were spending an afternoon together.

"Yes, and it was just in my thought to speak to him," was answered. "I noticed the child yesterday. What a sweet, patient face he has! He can't be more than ten years old."

"And a cripple for life!" said the third lady.

Her two friends turned their eyes upon her with looks of inquiry.

"You know him?" remarked one of them.

"Oh, yes. His name is Albert Owings; son of Mr. Edward Owings, one of the best men in our town."

"Has he been long a cripple?"

"About a year."

"How did it happen? Had he a fall?"

"I will tell you about it if you care to listen. The story is a sad one, and, but for his lesson and warning, I would not review it now."

The two ladies drew closer to the speaker, and she went on:

"Little Albert was a favorite with everybody who knew him. He had a sweet temper, and a winning way from the first. When but three years old, he was the pet of the neighborhood. That nothing seemed to spoil him. As he grew older, he did not become rude and boisterous like too many children; and yet he was full of life, and rump and play as well as any."

"Year after year was added to his life. The birthday came and went until he was nine years old. The children's days are always kept in Mr. Owings' house. I am intimate with the family, and was one of the few outside friends who were invited to drop in after tea. I promised myself a pleasant evening, for I knew the charming circle into which I was going."

It was early in autumn, and the days were growing shorter. Darkness had fallen when I stood at Mr. Owings' door. I found the family in much distress and alarm. Albert had gone with a neighbor's son to visit a friend of his mother's who lived half a mile from the city, and word had been received that he had fallen from a tree, and was too much hurt to walk home. Mr. Owings and mother had just left in a carriage, taking a doctor with them.

Then the father and mother returned, bringing the poor boy with them. A bed, on which he was lying, had been placed in a carriage. He was helpless, and in great suffering. It took up a long time to not speaking a word until he said, 'I'm sure it was the wine mamma. I'd never thought of drinking the tea if it had been for the wine. Somehow, I was just myself after I drank it. But don't be angry with Mrs. Kline; she wanted to honor my birthday, and didn't think it would hurt me."

"We looked at each other's faces. Mrs. Owings tried to speak, but her voice choked in the effort. Her boy, crippled for life, lay before her, and the hand that had stricken him down was the hand of a who loved him. It has been lifted in kindness—alas! what mistaken kindness!"

The lady ceased. Over the faces of the two friends, there fell shadows of pain. Both of them sat, with eyes cast down, for a long while.

"That a cause so light should work so and a disaster!" said one of them, sighing deeply as she spoke.

"A cripple for life! And all from a single glass of current wine, offered in honor of his birthday?" said the other, sobbing the sigh of her friend. "Why," she added, the only woman, ready as she was, and then suddenly looking out. "I didn't say anything to a dear little nephew only a week ago! And now I remember that he came near being run over by a horse on his way home; and that, when I added him about it, he wouldn't tell just how it was, but he kind of forgot himself, and didn't think about taking care, as he always did when crossing a street. It never came to me until this moment that this wine had confused his little brain."

"If it has power to confuse the brains of strong men," answered the lady who told the story of Albert's fall from a chestnut tree, "how much more this weak and delicate brains of children?"

"What a warning!" exclaimed the other.

"I will never give even the lightest glass to a child again."

"Men as well as children have been made cripples for life through a glass of wine offered by a friendly hand," said the lady. "There is no safety when the truth is misapplied above its healthy action. No one can tell the moment when life is lost; we depend on the cool head and steady hand—when the slightest confusion of mind may bring terrible disaster. Let us, then, who have so much influence over the customs of society, set our faces against this thing of offering wine to our friends. We can work a great reform if we will. Taking this poor crippled child as a text, we may preach temperance sermons to men, women and children of such force that none can withstand us. What say you, friends?"

"And they all joined hands promising to not their faces against a custom so full of danger. And they kept their word. Many bottles of current wine, and blackberry wine, and cherry wine, were applied on the ground by these ladies, and also by others to whom they preached their temperance sermon. The text, whenever announced, was sure to gain attentive listeners, and rarely failed to work conviction."

OPPORTUNITY TO SECURE

TO ALL WANTING FARMS

In the great Hammonton Fruit Settlement, the best inducements are offered to all wanting farms in the most desirable location, being among the best in the garden State of New Jersey, only thirty miles from Philadelphia on the Camden and Atlantic Railroad. These lands are sold to the actual settlers at low prices and easy terms, in five, ten, twenty acres and upwards. The soil is perfect, the water pure, clear of all impurities, and when all the purchase money is paid.

THE SOIL

Is a fine sandy clay loam, suitable for all grains and crops, and is pronounced by the best authorities to be the most productive soil in the State. It is a marine deposit, with a sandy substance mixed all through it in a very compact form, and in the exact condition to support plants with proper farming. It is very productive and profitable, easily worked, and warm and early. The lay of the land is slightly undulating, and called level is in fact from stones or rocks. It is the best fruit soil in the Union.

THE MARKET

Is unsurpassed; direct communication twice a day to Philadelphia, New York, and Atlantic City. The Railroad Company leaves cars here to be filled with fruit every day in the season; they are filled in the afternoon, and the same night or next morning they are in the market, where the highest prices are obtained, without any other trouble to the producer than delivering the produce to the car. None of the land now offered is over one and a half miles from the Railroad.

THE CLIMATE

Is mild and delightful; the winters being short and open, and the summer being long and warm. The climate is the best in the State, and is the reason why so many people are coming to settle here. The climate is the best in the State, and is the reason why so many people are coming to settle here.

THE WATER

Is pure and soft, of the best quality. It is abundant in streams and is found bubbling from ten to thirty feet. Wells are cheaply made here, and the water is the best in the State. We have the best water in the State, and it is the reason why so many people are coming to settle here.
