RIBAUD, THE MISER.

For five years up to the 29th day of December, 1874, James Ribaud lived in a little roadside cottage within a stone's throw of a post house on the highway leading from the village of Raincy to Paris. He was a little hunchback old man and a miser. Report had it his hoardings were nearly a million francs. He had lived alone, but once his house was entered by robbers and himself so terribly beaten that his life for a time was despaired of. The robbers got nothing for their pains. He then resolved to live no longer alone.

He engaged a young and sharp-eyed girl from Rainey as a house servant. Unknown to him the girl, Fanchette, had a lover-Adolphe, a student-whom once a week she was in the habit of slyly meeting at the post-house. Once a month she had a holiday and passed it

In many section where little or no honey is being gathered robbing may be expected and should be guarded against. If you have weak or queen-less colonies break them up and remove the hives to a safe place. Do not expose honey where the bees can get at it or it will demoralize your whole apiary. It is wonderful how soon bees discover that honey can be had and how persistent they are. I have sometimes thought that bees would work ten times harder (like humon beings) to steal than to get it by honest toil. The only safety is to expose no houey and keep all hives so strong that is almost sure death for a robber to enter.

UNTHINKING farmers will sometime place a colt or young horse by the side of a horse of more mature years, and expect it to do an equal amount of work without injury. Such a thing is not only cruel but unwise. Many promising horses have been ruined by such treatment. No young horse should be expected to stand the work that horses which have been accustomed to hard usage are able to undergo.
