Housed the New Truck.

Monday, Labor-Day, was as fine as could be, though quite warm.

The housing of the new hook and ladder wagon, by Volunteer Fire Company, No. 1, was the event of the day. A score of members of La Fayette Company, of Egg Harbor City, accepted the invitation, bringing their hose wagon and team, and Junior Band. An ex-Chief of the Haddonfield Fire Department represented that borough. Then there were hundreds of visitors from everywhere, making our streets and stores resemble a popular holiday.

The Ladies' Auxiliary and Civic Club did their part well, providing lunch for the visitors, an abundance for all, for which they deserved and received hearty thanks.

It was 1:30 before the parade started. Fire Chief John Walther, on horseback, leading; visitors came next; Company No. 2, with chemical engine and hose reel; a score of boys carrying a great flag, outspread; Company No. 1 with their handsome big new ladder wagon; apparatus, automobiles, a decorated wagon containing a number of white-robed little girls, with the Civic Club banner. Flags and bunting were displayed along the route, on business houses and residences. The two bands made merry music. A number of citizens including members of Council, rode in nicely decorated cars.

After the parade, Mr. Jesse N. Rogers, chairman of Town Council's Property Committee, addressed the assembly substantially as follows:

"It gives me the utmost pleasure, as chairman of the Property Committee of the Town Council of Hammonton, to present to you, or turn over to your care, the well-equipped hook and ladder wagon before you. It is of the best pattern made, and will, I know, prove in your hands, who have so often demonstrated your efficiency and promptness in the moment of danger, a most valuable means of checking damage by fire and aid in the saving of life and property, and thus add to the laurels you have already won."

Rev. J. E. Shaw, by request, replied in behalf of the firemen. He thanked Council and taxpayers for the new apparatus, complimented the firemen, gave to the ladies due praise, thanked the visitors, and jollied the crowd.

The Egg Harbor firemen then housed the new wagon, while their band played a lively march.

The new machine just fits in its assigned place, and completes a very thorough equipment for fire fighting.

While assisting in steering the new ladder-truck into the building, on Labor-Day, Dr. Bitler had the little finger of his right hand caught against the door casing, crushing the member. Local physicians being out, he hastened to Atlantic City hospital, where they amputated it at the second joint. This was the only accident of the day. Dr. B. will take a forced vacation.

Benjamin ben Jehohad, he that led
 The armored host of Solomon, bent low—
 Before that ancient king, "My lord," he said,
 "For leagues on leagues beyond the Jordan's flow
 I sought the peerless chief that now I hear
 Of thee, beloved master, and I led within This cup of golden beryl sparkle fair
 Those drops that fell before the world knew sin—
 The Dew of Life, a draft whereof shall give Immortal youth—eternal, deathless spring—
 To him that drains their essence, Drink, and live Forever, O Jehohad!" And the king,
 The noble beaker-taking, paused a space—
 To dream, as old men will, then, musing, spoke:
 "To live forever! So, when all my race
 Hath passed away, alone to bear the yoke
 Of earthly care? When none is left alive
 Of those I love, of those whom even now
 My heart desires? What! Shall I survive
 All, all my friends, such perfect friends as thou,
 True, gallant soldier? Nay, The sacred laws
 Let others rule, my days are gone, I feel;
 Man's life belongs to God's almighty hands;
 —And thus—I do as God would have me do!"
 He turned the cup, the precious drops were flung Upon the sands, and where with life divine
 They touched the barren waste, in beauty sprung
 That faith that trust that never-fading plea,
 —YOUTH, COME FORTH!

[illegible] delivered them. You are free to return—here, or return home—as you choose—and as Russia chooses. And, for that matter, you are free to think of me as you wish. If you wish to cost you 10,000 pounds before leaving? What if something much deeper and still were required of you? A thing so small that it would need to filter through from a distance.

"If you agree, after what I have said, you may make a surprising evening. If not, you won't be well advised to leave your hopes behind you here.

"The sound of a sudden, his hand was crippled as in silent, indelible compact.

Here is my private card and box number. My daughter need know nothing of this; you saved her life. You do not"—again that strange smile—"we do not think it advisable to let anyone know of this, even at the time
such as this, Mr. Charteris. Remember, silence covers all risks!"

As Charteris went back along the corridor, he felt a cold shiver running a mist. For once his brain failed him utterly. A life deep conviction was that in some way he was playing a part. He felt that if he was suddenly discovered that his love for Stephanie might be used as a valuable lever. He could only wait for the moment when he could walk in and should meet his own once again.

It came at last. The theatre was darkened, gripped in a hush, when Kranovich stepped forward, startled and held the box door ajar. Could it be true? Stephanie sat there alone, her pure, unconscious profile just catching the glow from waiting light. Her hair had turned, with a faint little cry, and her hand was trembling in his. Of that night they Charteris sat back in the shadow in a thrill of a strange happiness, and that Kranovich's summons from the box on officials, and he felt that he was to drive him further into some net.

A dreamlike week passed. Day by day he was aware of the fact that Stephanie was trying to make sure that he had gone too far to retreat. Then a hint was dropped, and at last, like a burning bomb, the deadly truth
was laid bare—Desmond Charteris brain.

He was fast held in the tentacles ever feeling their slow way up into his mind. He felt that he was playing a part. He felt that if he was suddenly discovered that his love for Stephanie he must pay an appalling price. Did he attempt to avoid it by stealth—to dream of escape from Russia? He felt that he was playing a certain, secret death.

Kranovich, the man in an inner room at the Secret Police Bureau—
he was a man of a certain type, a crushing under heel and hoof raining of the submerged toilers—was playing two parts as no stage: ragged, and a man of a certain type, a chief of secret police, the father
of Stephanie was longed with one of
the most desperate, determined facing preparing their mines in complete secrecy.

"And you are the man possessing the money—that, they require. Immediately pay me the money that you are going to pay," he said.

Charteris sat like a man stunned by lightning. That impulse to deal a decisive blow, the culture of the man, the man of a certain type, a
chief of secret police, the father
of Stephanie was longed with one of
the most desperate, determined facing preparing their mines in complete secrecy.

"And you are the man possessing

THE SENSE

"Why did you leave your last place?" asked the boss. "I got six months off for good behavior," answered the job seeker.

Colling—"Why did you speak to that old twaddle, dear boy? Softy—Why shouldn't I, old chappie? He isn't in twaddle, and he doesn't work for a living."

"Oh, dear!" sighed the heiress. "I wish I knew whether the duke is going to propose to me." "Well, rejoined the penniless beauty, "why don't you cable his solicitors?"

"That was a bad break Dr. Green made," "What was it?" "He advised our traveling man to give up work for awhile and travel for his health."—Detroit, Free Press.

Mary—"I wonder why swells wear eye-glasses?—Jane—Why, to block up one eye, so that they shall see just as much as they can understand at a time."—Christian Endeavor World.

"Your tickets were complimentary, were they not?" "Well," replied the man who had seen a painfully amateur entertainer in a lounge, "they were until I saw the show."—Tit-Bits.

"How did you contrive to cultivate such a beautiful black eye?" asked Brown. "Oh!" replied Peggy, who had been practicing upon roller skates, "I rubbed it from a slip!"—United Press.

"Your hair-wafts cutting badly, sir?" said a barber to a customer. "No, it doesn't," replied the man in the chair; "It wants cutting nicely. You cut it badly—last time!"—Democratic Telegram.

Mrs. Stubbs—John, they say that one-half of the world don't know how the other half live. I wonder which half knows Mr. Stubbs—Why, the feminine half, Maria. If they don't know they'll soon find out.

"What's yours?" asked the waiter of a quick-lunch patron. "Doughnuts and coffee," was the reply. And the waiter went in to the kitchen to get by wireless: "One in the dark and two rubber tires."

"Ailcy, dear," remarked a young wife to her husband. "I wish you would taste this milk and see if it is perfectly sweet. If it's the least bit sour I mustn't give any of it to dear little Fido!"—Judy.

"I understand your husband is something of an after-dinner speaker." "Yes," answered Mrs. Torkline. "What Charles is liable to say after dinner is the reason we can't keep a cook."—Washington Star.

Paul—Jane is in the biggest groove I ever heard of. She Ruby! What now, dear? Pearl—Why, my chaperon lost her glasses last night when we were making love and he actually helped to find them for her.

"Isn't it a shame to choose those poor lions caged." "Lady," answered the hostess of the party, "they're much happier and safer there than they would be roaming the African jungles."—Washington Star.

Mrs. Peck (contemptuously)—What are you, anyhow, a man or a mouse? Mr. Peck (hittler)—A man, my dear. If the table is a mouse, I'd have run up on the table yelling for dear life, right now!—Lila.

"It is the duty of every married woman to be married at the age of 22," said the lecturer. "Well," said a woman of 30, with some asperity, "you needn't give the talk to the men."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Teacher—Joanny, what is the meaning of the word "procrastinate"? Pup—To put off. Teacher—Right. Use it in an original sentence. Pup!—The blackboard procrastinated the chalk from the blackboard. "What a stupid fellow!" "What a stupid fellow!" "Oh, what's there here at the club stay a little longer." "Impossible, my dear fellow. That I will leave my coat and umbrella there, and perhaps my wife will send me back to fetch them."—Meggendorfer.

"Pretty Girl!—And you really consider it bad luck to go under a ladder?" (Horrid Bachelor—Sure. I knew a fellow who blamed a girl under a ladder last summer. Pretty Girl!—And did he leave her?" "No, he didn't. Horrid Bachelor—Why not?" "Before marriage is a pretty good luck." They married now.

"What do you want?" asked the lady of the house of the tramp. "Ruthless!" "I haven't anything in the house except home bread and flannel." "And do you want none of that?" "No," he said. "Horrid Bachelor—What do you want?" "I'd like to be a pty for waste such a nice appetite on such poor victuals."

"Those Turks are barbarous people," remarked the housewife, as she got under a rubbish pile. "Yes, mum," responded pretty Pilgus, with a low bow, "I've got some authority for them I have a formed a hyacinth." "A hyacinth, my poor mum?" "Yes, mum; I have promised myself never to use a Turkish towel or take a Turkish bath."—Chicago.

In Practical Education.

"During the last century the American medical education of young students was generally what pleased up by serving as an apprentice to some noted practitioner, who combined the duties of a student with those of a physician."

"To ground the powders, mixed pills, rode with the doctor on his rounds, held the basin when the patient was bled, helped to adjust the plasters, sew the wounds and run down the stairs to fetch the next visitant to the other." It was a wretched career such a young man enjoying the rare good fortune of discharging half a pint arm.

"So great indeed was the difficulty of obtaining anatomical subjects for the medical schools that a college made a single body of anatomy for a whole year."

"Under such circumstances the doctor's knowledge was practical and derived from personal experience rather than from books; the advantage of the present century is that European physicians boasted of a library of five volumes."

He attentively ended, the student returned to his native-tongue to assume the practice of medicine. He had seen the creation of the mind for and the judge, the doctor was most important personage in his community. His genial face, his engaging manners, the sincerity with which he insisted after the expensiveness of the word and the interest which he poured the favorite of the poorest-laborer-made him-the-farmly-of his miles-around-knew the names and personal history of the occupants of every house passed through. The farmer laid polished hats to him like the drops of rain, daylight and darkness, were almost to him. He would ride ten miles the darkest night over the woods and roads in a biting storm to attend to a sick child or an old woman attending a child in a fit.

The drugs were stolen away-on shelves of the village stores, on heaps of shoes, Roban hats, packages of seeds and hitches of paper, and round his own drugs, make his own fixtures and put up his own prescriptions. His saddlebag was the ore-drug store within forty miles, and spring the blood must be purified, the patient must be kept warm, and fainting profusely bled. Large doses of senna and manna and rhubarb and molasses were taken daily. It is said to say that more medicine was wasted every year by the well-meaning than taken by the sick, and the fact is true.

Water was denied the patients if mented with fever. In its stead was given a small quantity of clam juice. Mercury was taken until the lips turned blue and the gums fell away from the teeth.

SCHOOL-TEACHER LAWS WAS

Miss Catherine Cays, Women
Bremner and Cays, Widen.

Kate F. Bremner, "Infants' atress," Alton road school, Edinburgh Scotland, was one of the teachers Great Britain sent to the United States in 1847, to instruct in the art of teaching her profession. She was in Oquinn, among other cities, and has sent to Superintendent Davis son's office a little pamphlet containing her impression of "The states."

Omnia Dies says:

"I found many more capable women than I anticipated and came to the conclusion that phrelog life, where men and women were comrades and colleagues had engendered a certain type of character, a kind of broad-mindedness, a love of freedom, and a readiness to fill any position of power with a pacety for rule which is not so generally characteristic of the women home, because here, until comparatively lately, she never had an opportunity of doing either better or worse, to take her chance alongside of her more fortunate brother. What girl who lives in a generation or two at present rate of enfranchisement might be to see?"

"The first mistake of the West was made a distinct blot with Miss Brewster, for she gave eloquent voice to several places, at one point writing:—

"The effect of the climate is felt in the trepidulous optimism of Americans, and in the energy of their work the enthusiasm and strenuousness with which we also feed ourselves of ambition in the glory of a day of rejoicing and clear air."
