Earth's Angels.

Why come not spirits from the realms of glory,
To visit earth, as in the days of old,—
The times of ancient writ and sacred story?

Is heaven more distant, or has earth grown colder?

Oh have I gazed, when sunset clouds receding Waved like rich banners or a host gone by,

To catch the gleam of some white plume speeding

Along the confines of the glowing sky;

And oft, when midnight stars in distant chilliness

Were calmly burning, listening late and long,

My nature's pulse beat on its solemn stillness,

Beneath no echo of the seraph's song!

To Bethlehem's air was their last anthem given

When other stars before the One grew dim?

Was their last presence known in Peter's prison?

Or where exulting martyrs raised their hymn?

And are they all within the veil departed?

There gleams no wealth along the empyrean now,

And many a tear from human eyes has started

Since angel's touch has calmed a mortal brow!

No! Earth has angels, tho' their forms are moulded

Out of such clay as fashions all below;

Tho' but, we're wanting, tho' their forms are moulded

We know them by the love-light on their brow!

I have seen angels by the sick one's pillow;

There was the soft tone and the soundless tread;

When smitten hearts were drooping like the willow

They stood "between the living and the dead."

And if my sight, by earthly dimness hindered,

Behold no hovering cherubim in air,

I doubt not,—for spirits know their kindred,—

They smiled upon the wingless watchers there!

There have been angels to the gloomy prison—

In crowded halls—by the lone widow's hearth;

And when they passed, the fallen have uprisen—

The giddy paused—the mourner's hope had birth.

I have seen one whose eloquence commanding

Banned the rich echoes of the human breast;

The banishments of wealth and ease withstanding,

The hope might reach the suffering and oppressed;

And by his side there moved a form of beauty,

Strewing sweet flowers along the path of life,

And looking up with meek and low-blond duty,—

I called her angel, but he called her wife!

O many a spirit walks the world unheeded —That when to veil of sadness is laid down

Shall sorrow shift with plumes unimpeded,

Wearing its glory like a starry crown!

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 9, 1878.

The eyes of nearly all at this political centre who are to any extent interested in politics, are turned Mainward with an intensity of gaze unusual on the occurrence of her annual September election, seeming to show how, by general consent, the verdict will be accepted as a sort of gauge of the ravages made by the greenback-folly in the ranks of the old parties—

Vermont, though holding her election a little earlier, is so overwhelmingly Republican that the result is generally conceded before any canvass has been made. Hence the election in the old Pine Tree State is regarded as really the first gun, the preliminary skirmish, of the great contest to be fought in the great central States later; and there is added, this year, this new feature of absorbing interest. It is idle to speculate as to the result. A few hours will enable all to so nearly approximate it from the data to be sent from points in telegraphic communication with the National Capital, that we may all be quite certain whether or no the sturdily intelligent voters of that State have been overwhelmed and led captive by the hypocritical clap trap that has characterized the present campaign on the part of the greenback orators, imported to instruct the citizen in his political duties in such way as to secure an endorsement of their mischievous doctrines, and contribute to the glorification of men so notoriously without political or moral standing, as to have led to their repudiation by all the old parties with which they have been successively identified during the past two decades. The genius of a Butler has considerably modified the apparent objects of the gang of disinterested fellows who have undertaken to roll back the tide of progress in Massachusetts, under Lutheran inspiration, and to make the plighted faith of this nation a hissing and by-word among other nations of the earth. It is noticeable that Butler has made a wide departure from the rant blasphemy and ruffian menaces by which his "sub" Kearney at first sought to bull-doze the voters of the Bay State, and discipline them into the Butler ranks. He soon saw that Kearney had not the penetration to see, though it was constantly under his nose from the time he left his sand-lot audience, namely, that such a style was repugnant and likely to drive away ten votes for every covert made from the unpromising material of the average Eastern audience. Hence the change of tactics which makes Benjamin appear in a roll quite as harmless as that of the sucking dove. But traced to its logical sequences, the advice he is nightly giving Massachusetts workmen is none the less vicious for its sugar coating. The vein of communism running through all his speeches and the poisonous seed he is dropping along the Massachusetts wayides will undoubtedly encourage the former and yield a harvest that will add to existing demoralization; but few are disposed to concede the State to Democracy under the thin disguise of the greenback dodge.

Sec'y Mearns has re-affirmed and enlarged the scope of his late decision relative to the unde-posed balance of public lands granted railroads, after a lapse of three years. The plea of the railroad attorneys was that, mortgaging the lands, was disposing of them within the meaning of the law, and that they are therefore not open to pre-emption at $1.25 per acre as stipulated by Government, when the lands were conveyed to aid in the construction of said roads.

Whatever may be thought of Mr. Mearns, as a party man, or as Sec'y of the Interior, Department, the plain and straight forward manner in which he meets the sophistries of the agents of these over-shadowing monopolies with regard to very conclusive, and can hardly fail of public commendation.

Every little while Sec'y Sherman attempts a new device to rid the Treasury of the rapidly accumulating silver dollars in it. The time he spends in this trying to find a way to get them out of general circulation is pretty good evidence of his perplexity from a source that had not been anticipated, and unless successful it may in time prove a source of real evil in severe ways.

We are still forced to listen to the terrible details of the yellow fever ravages in the South with no sign of abatement. Measures for relief are still being actively pushed, every one seeming to feel personally interested.

MAXWELL.

(For The South Jersey Republican.)

The Fop.

That insignificant fellow who effects great importance, who is ambitious of gaining admiration, who plays the gentleman by showy dress and perquisites of manner. He is very exquisite with a delicate case, a ring on his small right finger, a red neck-tie, eye-glasses, and a glorious mustache deliciously waxed, and twisted and extended, he is ready for show and parade.
He wears a beaver but on the head, but there is not much in the head, and nothing in his pocket-—but the lings. A farmer wishing to enter some animals at an agricultural fair wrote to the Secretary as follows:—"Also enter me for the best jockey, I am sure of taking the premium." Such is the fop. Dear Brumell was asked, "What makes a gentleman?" He replied, "Starch, starch, my Lord!" That is all there is of some men. The fop is only starch. He is minus that sterling good sense, that strength of character, and those habits of industry which make the true man and the gentleman. He is an idler, a dependent, a parasite and a dangerous creditor. Put him on the trial of self support, and under the stern pressure of grand and manly work and he will wilt. That will take the starch out of him. In character he is a moulted stork, a rag-weed, an under-cupling.

In appearance he is a peacock, a butter fly. In reality he is a sham. The fop is especially a lady's man, in his own pretensions. He admires them, courts their attention and admiration. He dresses and trims himself. He bows and scrapes and tips his hat for the ladies. He gazes at them, through his eye-glasses, with fearful impudence, and waits for recognition as a hungry dog for a bone. All his gallantry is expended on the ladies. He reminds us of one who refrained from kicking a dog, that wanted to bite his heels, because it was a female. "It wasn't for your sex," said he, "I would kick your head off." There is no benevolent thought of the aged, the poor and the crippled. There is a lack of courteous behavior to his own sex.
No sensible woman, however, admires the fop half so much as he admires himself. She regards him with horror and disdain, as a squab, a cabbage-head or a monkey on dress parade.
She cannot see the good of such a person. If he would only get as sick of himself, as sensible folks are of him, and kick up his heels and leave this world, she might act as the good old deacon who arose in prayer meeting and expressed himself as follows: My friends, with great sorrow and regret I have just learned of the decease of our beloved brother B—. Let us sing "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

What a blessing it would be if we could rid society of these useless, silly, farcical gentlemen.
Young man! Don't be a fop, unless you would be an offence to the sight and a stench to the nostrils of worthy, level-headed people. H.

TEMPERANCE.

The following letter we found in the last number of the Asbury Park Journal, and we copy it with the hope of its putting some of our people who think it no evil or a necessary evil, to thinking about the terrible curse that is doing so much harm everywhere but in Maine:

The fact that your paper is read by Christian people from all parts of New Jersey must be my apology, if one is needed, for addressing you on this subject.

I am a native of the State of Maine and knew the State well in rum times, say fifty years ago; and I know how it is at the present time.

Fifty years ago all country as well as city taverns had bars where liquor was sold to all comers, and every country store keeper sold liquor by the glass or gallon.
In those days I never heard of a person who was a total abstainer; all drank, from the baby who took gin toddy for the colic, to the grand-father who took gin sling as a tonic.

The stimulant of the workingman was New England rum. A farmer could not do his haying or harvesting without a few gallons of rum; carpenters could not build a ship without their daily ration of rum, and rum was as necessary to the launching of the ship as tallow was for the ways.
And when the ship was sent to sea the captain and all hands must have their daily grog. Even little boys, when they played a game of base ball, imitated their parents by requiring the side that was beaten to pay for rum to treat all hands.
In every well-to-do family there was always a good supply of different kinds of spirited liquors. Wine was used only on special occasions, excepting by the rich.
If clergymen called, liquor was always served and accepted. I have often heard clergymen tell about the state of religion in the parishes while the loaf sugar was dissolving in a tumbler of brandy and water. My father's house was what they called a "minister's tavern," a private house where the latch string was always out to the passing clergymen, and where he was sure to get the best liquor the Boston market could supply.

Now what was the result of this incoordinate drinking? I will take my native village as an illustration. It is a little village on a navigable river, close to the ocean, and at the time I shall speak of, it had a population of about one thousand.
We had in the village ten or twelve habit-ual drunkards; men who seldom went home sober; they were not fighting men, and I do not recollect a single instance of violence. Very few boys reached the age of 21 without being drunk. The young men when they had a supper, usually got very merry with drinking liquor, and usually one or two would get drunk. On our sleigh riding parties, when accompanied by ladies, we had too much respect for them to get tipsy; but we always had plenty of mulled wine on those occasions, and all partook of it. With such habits as these one need not go far to find where the ranks of the intemperate were recruited.

This rum drinking brought much poverty. If you saw an unpainted house, with windows broken and old hats or rags stuffed in the sashes, you were sure it was the home of a drunkard; especially if a few tow-headed children were playing about the door in rags. If you went out among the farms and seeing one where the fences were falling down, the barndoors off the hinges, and the buildings in a tumble-down condition, you ask why such a contrast between that farm and one near by; the answer would be strong drink. That man began life with flattering prospects, but early convivial habits ran into intemperance, and ruin, as you see, is the result. The inmates of the almshouse range in number from 20 to 40.
In nine cases out of ten the pauper was made so by rum. Not that these paupers were drunkards (few were), but the persons who should have supported them were drunkards.

Now for the contrast. To-day, except by a written prescription by a physician, you can not buy a drop of liquor in the village, and what is true of that one is true of every village in the State. In some of the larger cities and manufacturing towns liquor is sold by a few of the lowest and most degraded of the foreign population. There is no law on the statute book that is more strictly enforced than this prohibitory law of the State.

As for pauperism in my native village, there are three occupants of the almshouse, two of them are very aged people, and the other an imbecile. Poverty is a thing of the past—you no longer see the signs that indicate the home of a drunkard. Go out among the farms and you will see all sides the evidence of thrift. And why is this? Because the difference between the drinking habits of the people now and what they were fifty years ago, saves them at a low estimate, twenty million dollars a year. If the people of New Jersey were as abstinent as the people of Maine are, they would save thirty millions of dollars annually, that are now waste than thrown away.

So thoroughly revolutionized are the habits of the people, and so radical is the change in public sentiment on this subject, that among the better class of people

This new SEA SIDE RESORT is situated on Squam Beach, Ocean county, New Jersey, being midway between Long Branch and Atlantic City, fifty-two miles East of Philadelphia, fifty-four miles from New York, and about ten miles South of Sea Girt and Spring Lake.

It contains 500 acres of land, having about two miles of sea front, and an unequalled beach of hard unyielding sand inclining gently towards the sea, from which there is no perceptible undertow.

It extends the same distance (two miles) along the shore of the famous BARNEGAT BAY, which lies about half a mile to the rear of it, thus affording excellent sea-bathing, as well as Salt Water bathing. Also superb Yachting, Fishing, Crabbing and Gunning, for which this bay has long been celebrated among sportsmen as the best on the coast. It is reached from PHILADELPHIA and NEW YORK by railroad to Ton's River, and thence by steamboat or yacht across Barnegat Bay, a distance of about six miles.

A charter for a railroad from Sea Girt direct to LAVALLETT CITY has been secured, with the speedy prospect of this having direct and continuous railroad communication with both Philadelphia and New York.

On account of our position between ocean and bay, we can have no land breezes, consequently

CUMBERLAND MUTUAL

Fire Insurance Company, BRIDGETON, N. J.

Conducted on strictly mutual principles, offering a perfectly safe insurance for just what it may cost to pay losses and expenses. The proportion of loss to the amount insured being very small, and expenses much less than usually had, nothing can be offered more favorable to the insured. The cost being about ten cents on the hundred dollars per year to the insured on ordinary risks, and from fifteen to twenty-five cents per year on hazardous properties, which is less than one-third of the lowest rates charged by stock companies, on such risks—the other two-thirds taken by stock companies being a profit accruing to stockholders, or consumed in expenses of the companies.

The guarantee fund of premium notes being now Three Millions of Dollars.

If an assessment had to be made of five per cent. only, twice within the ten years for which the policy is issued, it would yet be cheaper to the members than any other insurance offered. And that large amount of money is saved to the members and kept at home. No assessment having ever been made, being now more than thirty years, that saving would amount to more than

One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollar

The Losses by Lightning.

Where the property is not set on fire, being less than one cent per year to each member, are paid without extra charge, and extended so as to cover all policies that are issued and outstanding.
