The Gift of Dreams.

TO THE GIRLS:—It was not until Dante had had a vision of heaven and felt the power of love to uplift and save, that he said, "Write me as the Scribe of love." Nor was St. Paul ready to die for the truth until he had a lofty conception of the truth. Truly great men do not spend their lives pursuing bubbles.

Idle dreams, that vanish and leave no vestige of increased power or higher purpose, are valueless; but good long day-dreams, like those of Bunyan, which leave a clearer sight and lift the soul to a higher plane, are dreams for which to thank God.

To make life noble and beautiful, and happy, we need to gain a clear conception of what is good and true and beautiful. We must get a vision of a noble life and a clear understanding of what constitutes such life, as well as to know its vast importance. So, I say, take time to dream dreams and see visions of such life; that is, take time in quietness and alone for the deeper feelings of the soul to be awakened and aroused to their utmost intensity. Be in earnest. Gain a high conception, a lofty ideal of the life you want to live, and you will find that the grandest ideals of the human mind will require eternity for their consummation. The beginning is here, the ending lies beyond the limitations of time; nay, they are as unending as eternity.

This means growth, and growth means a continual expanding, unfolding and widening of our horizon of life. We must continually gain a larger perception of truth, a deeper experience of a Father's love, which has no limitations, a wider exercise of our talents, and an ever broadening sympathy with humanity. Our knowledge of our Creator's plan for us must be ever widening and growing. Your companions may not understand and appreciate you, but you will find that it is of much more importance that you should be worthy of their appreciation than that you should receive it.

Growth means a consciousness of our personal needs and a trusting of ourselves to a higher and wiser power for guidance and strength. It means to be possessed by a purpose higher and nobler than that we have already gained, and a belief in that higher and more powerful source of wisdom and understanding, with a consciousness of our personal deficiency; but we must not stop then and think we can do nothing because of our human frailty. Here is the secret of power: "I can do all things through Him," said a very great man, a long time ago, and the same opportunity is open to us. In our personal weakness and helplessness we are to trust ourselves to an unerring and Divine source of wisdom, strength and power. All this implies harmonious relations with our Creator, who is the Supreme Ruler of the world, and the highest wisdom points this way, as I have written you in a former letter. What I now desire is that you shall think on these things until they become firmly established in your thoughts, your heart, and life. It will help you to press down many a thorn in your path and to see only the roses which hide them. It will lift you above many a threatening disaster and bring you into a safe and sunny port. In this world we soon learn that we do not control events, and we should as quickly learn that we are all subjects of a Divine Ruler.

Ruskin says: "It is no man's business whether he has genius or not." Genius or no genius, wealth or no wealth, live we must, and we shall find that the quiet steady unfolding of our lives under Divine guidance will result in our being just what our Creator intended us to be, and it will be our best self.

To do great things we must have great ideals. To do kindly and sympathetic deeds, kindness and sympathy must live in our thoughts and hearts. To carry sunshine and comfort to others, these qualities must have a place in our own lives, and these are all possible qualities. The quality of your dreams will be manifest. The sordid, selfish heart speaks through a sordid, selfish face, while noble thoughts and ideals will add a charm to the countenance. Then you must grow in breadth, in richness, in ripeness, with the passing years, if you would not regret growing old.

The gentle years of grace are passing by; Each one sent by a Father's loving thought; Like a Father's hand from the bending sky Reaching down with blessings richly fraught. Years are not for useless seeming; Years are not for idle dreaming.

We may live a noble life though engaged in lowly labor. It has been beautifully said: "The couch may be comfortable but the dream may be divine." So the humblest life may be rich and abundant in noble words and deeds. Face the future with a clear vision of its possibilities. Do not yield to despair when the stress of life comes, but gather up your energies and make even dark days full of happiness for self and others by your ever deepening and ripening experience. Just as the lovely springtime passes from the budding to the blossoming time, daily unfolding in their fragrant purity, and maturing with the advancing summer and autumn, so may your life grow. Live in dreams of far-off and coming glory, and the reflection shall sustain you and illuminate your way. It may seem to others that your life is not a brilliant success, because you do not possess genius or gain wealth; but while you patiently and happily toil on in your field of labor, however small and inconspicuous it may be, if you gain control of self—a difficult kingdom to conquer—you will have won a greater prize than genius or wealth. The highest success in life is the attainment of the end for which we were created, and nothing else. Not our plan, but our Creator's plan shall be accomplished.

May there come to each of you, dear girls, such a vision of life beautiful as shall fill your heads and souls with an unchanging and lofty purpose to work it out into a reality in your lives.

Town Council Meeting.

A special meeting was held Saturday evening last, to act on land-overs bills and the drainage question. Moore, Bernanson, Spear, Parkhurst, and De-
Puy were present.

Bills for highway work, amounting to about $300, were passed.

The bed of Cedar Creek, between Fourth Street and Main Road, being dry, it was voted to proceed at once to ditch it to grade, the matter placed in the hands of the committee, to employ a competent man—globally Mr. Bernanson, Jr.—to superintend the work. As will be remembered, $150 were appropriated for that section.

Committee was granted permission to instruct the Overseer to put in a sluice opposite Joe Bernanson's, at Thirteenth and Grand Street.

Adjourned.

Robert Frasch, of Egg Harbor, brother of our townsman, and known to many here, and Miss Allie M. Sooy, of Walling River, were married Thursday, Sept. 16th, at the bride's home. Miss Doris Moore, a cousin, attended the bride. They stopped at Hampton that afternoon, on the way to Washington and New York.

Friends of druggist W. J. Leib are glad to know that he has returned home in excellent health.

THE SABLE HOLIDAY.

The sable and seal hunts each begin a new year in the calendar of the Gilyaks, who live on Sakhalin Island, on the Straits of Tartary. These two years, which begin in October and April, are called the winter year and the summer year, and are opened by holiday festivals. The sable holiday goes by the name of "the prayer to the lord of the forest." Mr. Hawes, in his book entitled "In the Utmost East," describes it.

It is a wintry scene. The snares are set on logs and branches which, upon the narrow streams and creeks. The first snows have fallen. The trees stand silent in the somber depths, hanging their hoary, lichen-covered branches.

Amidst the hush a shadow steals quietly across the scene. It is a sable. He goes by accustomed paths. He does not care to swim the cold water, but seeks a fallen tree or log, whereon he passes. All unsuspectingly he creeps along a trunk, only to find his way blocked by a tiny barrier of sticks, arranged in the shape of a fan, new-erected, a way, one way, left, and that through a loop in the center. Rikling on his hind legs and pushing through his struggles, and in so doing releases a peg latched with a ratchet, and a bent twig at one of the cord's ends flies back and tightens the snare.

Many trappers are out, but each brings his first catch to one place, where due honor is then paid to the great giver of the forest, the lord of the forest.

It would seem of greediness, of meat without grace, to start on the important hunt of the sables, creatures whose skins are so valuable that anything may be purchased with them. But the Gilyaks are not so greedy. They are not so greedy as to eat a feast in the forest, and pieces of roasted fish, tobacco and other things are buried in the ground as an offering to the god.

OLD FAVORITES

Parasol to Lechaber, and farewell to my Jean.
Where heartsome with thee I've massey been;
For Lechaber no more, Lechaber no more—
We'll may return to Lechaber no more.
These tears that I shed, they are a' for my dear,
And no for the dangers attending on war;
Though borne on rough seas to a far bloody shore,
Maybe to return to Lechaber no more.

Though hurricanes rise, and rise every wind,
They'll not make a tempest like that in my mind;
Though loudest of thunder on louder seas,
That's nothing like leaving my love on the shore.

To leave thee behind me my heart is sair pained;
By eyes that's inglorious no fame can be gained.
But beauty and love's the reward of the brave,
And I must deserve it before I can crave.

Then glaze, my Jeanie, manna ples my excuse;
Since honor commands me how can I refuse?
Without it I ne'er can have merit for ease,
And without thy favor I'd better not be.

I gasp then, my Jean, to win honor and fame,
And if I should lack to come gloriously home,
I'll bring a heart to thee with love running o'er,
And then I'll have thee and Lechaber no more.

COZY CORNER SEAT.

Made of an Old Crib, but It Served the Purpose Well.

My baby had outgrown his crib, and a seat from bed had been substituted. There came the question, What shall be done with the crib? Fate, with a No. Indeed! It had become endeared to me, and as there was no attic in which to store it, it was necessary to utilize it in some manner in our living room.

The crib was of the ordinary variety, with high ends and low sides, the foot side being bladed on. It had long been enameled white, but to make it look less like a crib, a can of forest-green enamel paint was bought, and a thin coat—so thin that the white almost showed through—was applied.

The blinged side was removed and firmly fastened to the back, making that the height of the ends. The legs were then sawed off, to make it a convenient distance from the floor to use as a seat.

A quantity of hair—an old hair mattress, in fact—made a box cushion for the inside, looking exceedingly well covered with a green burlap having a large, sprawling pink rose upon it. With a long darning needle and some pink floss the cushion was tucked in squares, the ends being tied tightly before cutting.

Next was made a very thick pad the width of the sides and ends of the crib, and just long enough to upholster them neatly. This was also covered with the green burlap, laced firmly to the top and bottom, and finished

ISRAEL REPROVED (Temperance Lesson).

Amos 5:4-15. (Study vs. 1-7. Read Hosea 14). Memory verses: 14, 15.

Golden Text: Seek the Lord, and ye shall live.—Amos 5:4.

Golden Text (Am. Rev.)—Seek Jehovah, and ye shall live.

For Indigestion.—A simple remedy for indigestion is to sip a cupful of water as hot as it can be borne about half an hour before every meal. The water must be thoroughly hot, or its good effect will be lost.

Useful for Inflamed Eyes.—To cure inflamed eyelids bathe the eyes repeatedly in a solution composed of two teaspoonfuls of barley added to a cup of tea. If it is possible, keep the eyes open once or twice while bathing them.

To Remove Dandruff.—Put one ounce of flowers of sulphur into one quart of water, agitate often for several hours, then pour off the clear liquid, and saturate the head with it every morning. This does not produce the extreme dryness sometimes occasioned by the continued use of borax.

A Good Lung Exercise.—Hold the head up, the shoulders back, and chest out; inflate the lungs slowly but hold until you have counted ten without breathing. Repeat this exercise until you can count twenty when the lungs are full.

Vegetable Diet.—A scientist has recently been investigating the effect of food, particularly vegetables, on the human character. He affirms that a diet of carrots ameliorates hardness of character and reduces nervous irritability; peas create joyousness; while cabbage has a depressing influence. Cabbage is good for pulmonary complaints; while lettuce acts as a sedative upon the human frame, owing to the opium contained in its milky juice.

Fresh Air for the Anemic.—Paleness of complexion is often one of the signs of anemia—a complaint from which young girls very often suffer nowadays. For these an indoor life is exceedingly undesirable, and they should be out in the fresh air as much as possible. A course of cod liver oil and iron is beneficial, and the diet should consist of milk, farinaceous food, and a little fruit.

A Shampoo for Dry Scalp.—A splendid tonic shampoo for a dry scalp can be made as follows: Take two ounces white Castile soap, half ounce potash carbonate, eight ounces alcohol, two ounces tincture of quilla, twenty drops oil of lavender, eight ounces water. Dissolve in the water the potassium carbonate and soap, then add the other ingredients. Rub well into the roots of the hair, and then rinse well in several waters. Dry, if possible, in the sun, never in front of a fire, as this will make the hair brittle.

THE JOURNEY'S END.

MR. SKINNER—paused on the step and looked at the boy who was advancing.

"Well, what do you want?" she demanded.

"Can I do some chore for you to pay my supper and a place to sleep to-night?"

"Oh! You're a tramp, are you? Pretty young to start out that way."

"I asked for a chance to work for you all you let me have."

"I don't know as I'm going to let you have anything," she took another step and scowled with pain. "If you can find the old hen-turkey, ever there in the meadow, and drive her and her little turks into the barn, may be I'll give you a bite. She ought to have eleven little ones; if you don't get every one I won't give you a mouthful. Hyper along now; there's a big supper waiting for you."

"If it wasn't for this rheumatism, I wouldn't want a supper on that boy, just for getting those turkeys in," she muttered; "but I'll make him work it out."

So soon as the turkeys were under cover she set the boy at work in the woodshed splitting wood until supper was ready.

After he had finished their supper Mr. Skinner asked the boy:

"What's your name?"

"Frank," he answered.

"What's your father's name?"

"He's dead," he answered.

"Where did you come from?"

"From Clackville, New York."

"How did you get here?"

"Walked the most of the way; once in a while I got a ride."

"It's a long way from New York to New Hampshire. Whatever possessed you to start on such a tramp-run away?" asked Mr. Skinner.

"No, sir; I haven't anybody to run away from. I've come to take my grandmother out of the poorhouse. Her face faded, and he added quickly: "It isn't her fault that she's there. She had a good farm and home, and all the children she had was my father and his sister—I suppose she's my Aunt Susan, but I'll never call her Aunt."

Mr. Skinner moved his chair to the window and looked out into the black, rainy night.

"The farm was going to be father's," Frank explained, "but he said he'd give up his share to his sister if she'd take care of him. He'd owned it as long as she lived, and she promised to. Then last year she put grandmother into the poorhouse. I'm going to see her and tell her what I think of such mean business. It's not fair to mean business."

A PRETTY GOOD WORLD.

It's a pretty good sort of a world, fellows. A pretty good world, I say. In spite of what people are growling about.

And kicking against every day. There's plenty of sunshine. And plenty of blue. Away in the skies. Beaming down upon you. It's a pretty good sort of a world, old man. A pretty good world, I say.

It's a pretty good kind of a world, fellows. A pretty good world, I say. In spite of the cynics and knockers and such. Who're throwing the rocks in your way. She says right along. With a grin and a song. In spite of the right. And in spite of the wrong. It's a pretty good sort of a world, old man. A pretty good world, I say.

MUST VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT

Sentiment of Workmen at the Big Iron Mills at Bay View, Wisconsin.

DEMOCRACY FOR FREE TRADE

Informal Conference of Employees at Which the Republican and Democratic Tariff Planks Were Discussed.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 1.—Workmen at the big iron mills and in other manufacturing concerns in this vicinity have begun to concern themselves over the question of how their interests are protected in the coming political campaign. This is entirely dependent of the efforts of the politicians, and has nothing to do with the relations between the workmen and the State. The American workman, who is an educated finished product, and has no more to learn, and he can no longer be attracted to the oratorical political party, or to the political party by mere claptrap or by the insincere appeal of unscrupulous demagogues who have learned to study out economic questions in the past campaign, on the theory that his own party should be elected, not to suit his sentiments, but to suit his interests.

Among the men from the iron mills, this spirit of investigation has taken a deep hold and already they have instituted general independent inquiries. There have been quite a number of formal conferences, and a number of the leaders have been studying the platform adopted at Chicago to study the platform of the Republican party, and to see how far it has gone in the past. These men have ignored the personality of Roosevelt and of the other candidates, and have concentrated on the general foreign policy of the government, the Philippine question, the tariff, and everything else which does not bear directly upon the interests of the workman. They do not believe the platform treatment of the labor question is such a mere declaration of either party as to weigh much, but they have instituted a comparison of the foundation principles of the two parties, and the Republicans and the Democrats, so as to see how far they have gone in the past.

As far as the tariff plank is concerned, the workmen are not so much interested in the tariff plank as they are in the general foreign policy of the government. They are not so much interested in the tariff plank as they are in the general foreign policy of the government. They are not so much interested in the tariff plank as they are in the general foreign policy of the government.

The Republican Declaration of Principles. The Republican party has declared its policy on the tariff plank. It is a policy of protection, and it is a policy of protection. It is a policy of protection, and it is a policy of protection. It is a policy of protection, and it is a policy of protection.

The Democratic Platform. The Democratic party has declared its policy on the tariff plank. It is a policy of free trade, and it is a policy of free trade. It is a policy of free trade, and it is a policy of free trade. It is a policy of free trade, and it is a policy of free trade.

Democracy and the Money Question. The Democratic party has declared its policy on the money question. It is a policy of free trade, and it is a policy of free trade. It is a policy of free trade, and it is a policy of free trade. It is a policy of free trade, and it is a policy of free trade.

This conference was held at the Big Iron Mills at Bay View, Wisconsin, and it was attended by a large number of workmen. They discussed the tariff plank of the Republican and Democratic parties, and they decided to vote for Roosevelt.

NATIONAL EXPANSION

IT HAS BEEN APPROVED BY THE COUNTRY'S GREAT MEN.

Policy of Adding to the Nation's Territory Was Advocated by Both Democrats and Republicans.

Cleveland's Letter. Some impression was made by this record, but it was almost completely dissipated by two documents. One of these was the letter written by Grover Cleveland to the President of the United States, dated at St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 1, 1901. In this letter, Cleveland, who was then a private citizen, expressed his views on the question of national expansion. He stated that he believed in the expansion of the United States, and that he believed in the acquisition of new territory. He stated that he believed in the acquisition of new territory, and that he believed in the acquisition of new territory.

The Republicans in their convention adopted a platform which was a clear expression of their policy on the question of national expansion. They stated that they believed in the expansion of the United States, and that they believed in the acquisition of new territory. They stated that they believed in the acquisition of new territory, and that they believed in the acquisition of new territory.

On the other hand, the Democrats in their convention adopted a platform which was a clear expression of their policy on the question of national expansion. They stated that they believed in the expansion of the United States, and that they believed in the acquisition of new territory. They stated that they believed in the acquisition of new territory, and that they believed in the acquisition of new territory.

General Grant. "I do not share in the apprehension held by many as to the danger of government becoming weakened by the acquisition of new territory. I believe that the acquisition of new territory is a necessary part of the expansion of the United States, and that it is a necessary part of the expansion of the United States.

William McKinley. "The Philippines are a territory which is a necessary part of the expansion of the United States, and that it is a necessary part of the expansion of the United States. I believe that the acquisition of new territory is a necessary part of the expansion of the United States, and that it is a necessary part of the expansion of the United States.

Knights' Figures in American Politics. (Jacob Ellis on "Roosevelt, the Man," in Review of Reviews, August, 1901.) The knights of the United States are a powerful force in American politics. They are a powerful force in American politics, and they are a powerful force in American politics. They are a powerful force in American politics, and they are a powerful force in American politics.

WIND AND WEIGHT.

Democratic Chairman Taggart is said to weigh 150,000,000 tons of campaign fire.

Twenty million tons of words assembled in one place.

Fifteen million tons of wind will blow through the land. Thirty million pounds of "Hail" Your statements are defied.

FAVOR SOUND MONEY

Why Financiers Will Support President Roosevelt.

New-Yorkers Fear the Democratic Party and the Return of the Dollar.

It was then thought by some of Mr. Roosevelt's friends that he had gone too far toward a promise to the bankers of the Republic of protection, and that his protection would work working men to look to this point for benefits that could not always come.

THE ONE-TERM PLEDGE

Important Declaration by Candidate of Democracy.

Attempt by Alton B. Parker to Give Points to Washington and Lincoln.

In his speech of acceptance, Alton B. Parker, the Democratic candidate for the presidency, declared in advance a second nomination for that office, and explained himself by saying that he was fully persuaded that no incumbent of that office should ever be placed in a situation of possible temptation to consider what the effect of action taken by him in an administrative matter of great importance might have upon his political future.

THREE QUEER PLANKS

In Platform Which Parker Described as "Admirable."

Democratic Declaration on the "Open Door," "Return to Jefferson Simplicity," and the Limitation of Monopolies or Illegal Combinations.

Alton B. Parker told the committee that notified him of his nomination for the presidency that the Democratic platform was "admirable," and "points out with force and directness the course to be pursued in order to insure needed reforms in both the legislative and administrative branches of government."

THE PENDING STRIKES.

They Are of No Use as Democratic Arguments.

After groping about blindly for something to take the place of the dead 1900 to 1901 silver issue of 1890 and 1900, the Democrats have apparently seized upon the threat of labor as indicated in numerous strikes in various parts of the country.
