The Sabbath Day.

More and more I see, within the last twenty years, a vast and subtle and constant encroachment, by the different shifts and different arrangements, on the rest of the working man; and I say that whatever tends to weaken the authority of the Lord's Day plays into the hands of this tendency. It is a question which concerns the toiling masses very mightily, and it is for their interest and in their name that I, for one, should do nothing to weaken or undermine the consciousness of a religious character which attaches to and gives the dominating note to all the day.—J. Marshall Lang, D. D.

The New Road to Atsion.

MR. EDITOR: As Chairman of the Committee on Highways, I would state that at our last Town Council meeting two of our citizens, who are members of the County Board of Freeholders, were present, and asked the Council if they would make a gravel road of a mile and a-half to two miles, commencing at the Main Road and of Pine or Middle Road, to connect with a road that the County proposes making, to put us in communication with Atsion, Chemung, Medford, and other towns.

Such a road would be a great benefit to Hammonton, and bring trade here. One not acquainted with the facts would be surprised to know the number of people that come here from other towns to do their trading; and if this proposed road is built, it will bring good trade to our merchants, and make our town and its resources much better known. As we now have three good hotels, that meet the requirements of different people, Hammonton can be made to be the centre of trade for this section of the country; and nothing will do it more than good roads.

Few towns of its size can boast of better stores, of all kinds, than Hammonton. Our merchants are a progressive set of men, well posted as to the tastes and wishes of our people, and the wants of the surrounding country; and with better roads leading to other places, they will do better business. Of course, if one branch of business flourishes, others will prosper with it. One of our townsmen was heard to say that he would oppose any such road being made, as it would not benefit him. Such a view taken of town improvements is certainly a very short-sighted policy. J. E. WATKIS.

Mr. Lorenzo A. Down, for ten years Clerk of Atlantic County, and since Cashier of the Second National Bank, Atlantic City, died on Monday last, aged sixty-one years. Mr. Down has been in failing health for a long time, and over a year ago resigned his position in the bank for that reason. Last Saturday he was stricken with paralysis and did not rally. He was a man of uncommon ability, very popular, and a Christian gentleman.

The ladies of the Baptist Church gave a successful supper and concert on Wednesday evening. The menu was very unique, and it required not a little thinking to fill out an order. At the concert, the audience was interested for over an hour by Mr. Montgomery on musical instruments, in singing, ventriloquism, and facial imitating; also a well-rendered recitation by Miss Hay. After the concert, those who remained were given another treat by Mr. M., who posed as a phrenologist.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave-digger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued to use until entirely cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malarin, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys, and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, and female complaints; gives perfect health. Only 50 cts., at Crowell's.

THE COVERED BRIDGE.

Tell the linked soul in the weary form,
That she is not the person you believe.
That she is not the person you believe.
By a covered bridge, with this.

Set, to reach that realm on the other shore,
Must pass through a transient glow,
And must walk unseen, unhelped and alone,
Through that covered bridge—the tomb.

But we all pass over on equal terms,
For the universal toll
Is the outer path, which the hand of God
Has hung around the soul.

Though the eye is dim, and the bridge is in dark,
And the river it spans is wide, Yet faith points through to a shining
shore,
That looms on the other side.

To enable our feet in the next day's march
To climb up the golden ridge, We must all be down, for a one night's rest,
In that covered bridge—
Washington Star.

HIS SACRIFICE.

It was a hot, sultry day towards the heat of July, in the front room of a fashionable boarding-house at a young girl of 18.

A few moments later the door swung open and her brother, a young artist, entered. He greeted her pleasantly as he prepared to refresh himself.

"Well, Tris, how have you been today?"

"O, as uncomfortable as ever," she replied, peevishly.

"Never mind, dear, perhaps you will have more money another summer."

"Always patience," she replied cross-ly. "It's well enough for people to talk when they have money, but then, when the time comes, I never have had anything since we came to New York."

"My dear Tris, I think you are a little unkind. You know I have tried to give you everything I could possibly afford."

"Oh, Tris, you mustn't talk so!"

"Forgive me, Chauncey. I will try to do without it."

"That's the girl," and he smoothed the pretty hair from the forehead and signed. He wished to see his sister as well dressed as other girls, but circumstances forbade; his pictures did not sell, and he felt the time was fast approaching when they would have to leave their pleasant rooms and go to some other part of the city.

One evening, about three months later, Chauncey Bedford came home, looking ill.

Tris was there, but she did not notice her brother's careworn face, because she was engaged in making a dress to be worn a week later at the grand ball given by Mrs. Charles Carlton, sister of Lord Percy Carlton.

As he entered the room, Tris looked up.

"Well," after a few moments' silence,
"I must go—how is Beatrice?"

"Pretty well," he said with a sigh.
And seeing he was in no mood for talk, she left him.

Chauncey Bedford had given up everything for his sister. She held the first place in his heart. His love for Beatrice was great, but he had put all thoughts of her he loved away. He was poor and likely to remain poor all his life.

Beatrice went to the reception. Lord Percy Carlton she first met there, who, claiming to be her uncle, had been after a few months of marked attention, married her.

They went immediately abroad.
Beatrice said before she went that upon their return Chauncey could go abroad to study art.

Two years had flown by and not a line had she written him. At length, poor and careworn, he took a room in the slums of the city. What a contrast to the life he had led for a paper barely kept him alive.

Beatrice had tried faithfully to find him, but had failed.

One day as he was passing through the slums on his way of charity, he happened to glance up at a window and saw Chauncey Bedford.

She started back as if struck by a thunderbolt.

"It is in this place of all others, the proud Chauncey, come to this," she said.

She knocked at the door. An old woman opened it. Beatrice asked for Mr. Bedford. After much bantering with the woman she gained admission.

Chauncey still sat at the open window. He did not move as she approached him. She touched his hand, but spring back, as she felt the cold touch of his hand as it came in contact with hers.

Beatrice's picture was in the other hand. He left this world with the one thought that had always been in his life, that was his sister, for whom he had sacrificed all.—Boston Post.

"DOG WATCH" IN EARNEST.
A clever collie was acting as night-
house keeper's assistant.

Probably the only real "dog watch"
in the world so far as the collie is concerned is kept on Wood Island light-house, off Bliddford Pool, Me. Sailor is the name of the faithful four-footed watcher who keeps vigil there for passing craft. His master is Thomas H.
Orcutt, keeper of the light.

Having passed most of his nine years of life on rocky Wood Island, where the waves beat ceaselessly on the granite shore, and the passing of vessels up and down the coast is the chief thing to break the monotony of life, Sailor naturally takes a great interest in natural matters.

Early in life, when but a 2-month-old puppy, he was brought to the island
from Woodbury Brothers' milk
farm in Westbrook, Me. He was not a sailor then, for his family were farmers, but he was a collie, and he was born to be a dog.

But Sailor was not long in learning the ways of the sea. He took a deep interest in whatever his master did, and followed him about the light station wherever he went. He picked up many things that his master dropped, and he was a great help to him in many ways.

One day Sailor thought he would have a try at ringing the bell. He seized the rope in his mouth and pulled
it. The bell rang clear and loud.
Sailor was delighted. He wagged his bushy tail vigorously and pulled again.

Sailor after a time noticed that the ringing of the bell marked the passing of ships.

Having passed most of his nine years
of life on rocky Wood Island, where
the waves beat ceaselessly on the granite
shore, and the passing of vessels up
and down the coast is the chief thing
to break the monotony of life, Sailor
naturally takes a great interest in natural matters.

Early in life, when but a 2-month-old
puppy, he was brought to the island
from Woodbury Brothers' milk
farm in Westbrook, Me. He was not a sailor then, for his family were farmers, but he was a collie, and he was born to be a dog.

But Sailor was not long in learning the ways of the sea. He took a deep interest in whatever his master
did, and followed him about the light station wherever he went. He picked up many things that his master
dropped, and he was a great help to him in many ways.

One day Sailor thought he would have a try at ringing the bell. He
seized the rope in his mouth and pulled
it. The bell rang clear and loud.
Sailor was delighted. He wagged his bushy tail vigorously and pulled again.

Sailor after a time noticed that the
ringing of the bell marked the passing of ships.

"DOG WATCH" IN EARNEST.
A clever collie was acting as night-
house keeper's assistant.

Probably the only real "dog watch"
in the world so far as the collie is concerned is kept on Wood Island light-house, off Bliddford Pool, Me. Sailor
is the name of the faithful four-footed watcher who keeps vigil there for passing craft. His master is Thomas H.
Orcutt, keeper of the light.

The Freeholders' Visit.

On Wednesday, members of the Board of Freeholders, as per agreement, came to Hammoncton to inspect the route for the proposed new gravel road to Abston.

Those present were: Herman G. Mulock, from Atlantic City; James S. Robinson, Abstocon; Alonzo M. Smith, Brigantine; Fred Schuchardt, Egg Harbor City; Samuel A.
Smith, English Creek; Frank Esterline, Galloway; M. L. Jackson and L. Hurd
Parkman, Hammoncton; Osa T. Abbott, Maya Landolt, John T. Irving, Elwood
Anderson, Gloucester, Weymouth Tp.
State Road Commissioner, H. L. Budd.
County Engineer, John T. Albertson.
Road Supervisor, Wm. H. Burgess.

Committee—M. K. Royer, J. E. Watkins, E. W. Reichelder, Hammoncton.
The party proceeded to Abston, in teams, going out by the way of Middle Road. The old town and surroundings were inspected, to determine upon a terminus for the new road. The return trip was made by the way of Pine Road, and it was agreed that this is the better route. It will necessitate opening an entirely new road for about six miles, but will avoid all the swamps, and locate the road upon the higher ground of the entire distance.

On their return, the whole company dined at Hotel Royal. Refreshed and refreshed, an informal meeting was held, and the trip and its object discussed.
Judging from the expressions of opinion heard there, the road will be built if proper material can be procured within reasonable hauling distance.

All present were convinced that the new road would prove advantageous to a considerable section of country.

As many are asking why the taxes for this year are higher than for 1899, we give below a comparative statement of appropriations:

1899	1900
State School Tax.....	$222 15
County Tax.....	$114 25
Town Purposes.....	$100 00
Memorial Day.....	$5 00
Street Lights.....	$700 00
Veto Department.....	$25 00
Town Map.....	$25 00
Highways.....	$250 00
District School Tax.....	$750 00
Poor Tax.....	$25 00
Town Marshal.....	$25 00
Total Appropriations.....	$1825 40

But last year $1000 were appropriated from the License fund, which reduced the amount to be raised. Then, the appropriation for the Poor was taken from the Poll taxes. These deductions make the figures read thus:

Assessed in 1899.....	$10200 03
Assessed in 1899.....	$10010 43
Increase this year.....	$1890 10
