WHEN MY BOY COMES WHISTLING HOME.

When the night is dark, and the cold winds blow
And the stars are dim, and the moon is low
Then a light gleams out from a window
The shadows pass, and the glow gives way,
When my boy comes whistling home.

High the sound, and clear as a blackbird's note,
As sweet as the time from a skylark's throat,
Clearing its way through the silence still
As my boy comes whistling home.

Or "rag-time" or sonnet, ballad or psalm,
It matters not what the theme may be,
Reckling with merriment, or solemnity,
It carries its message straight to me,
When my boy comes whistling home.

'Tis a sign unfailing, with conscience free
And an unstinted soul be far along,
For guilt would smother the rapturous song,
Deception withers the happy gleam,
But my boy comes whistling home.

Oh, never was music that could compare
(No sound of chant in cathedral choir,
Nor thunder of organ, nor choir's roar)
With this, as my boy, with his heart of gold,
To his mother comes whistling home.

A MINE EPISODE

Al John Carstairs' money was made from mines, and was still coming out of mine in a golden stream. From "Old John's" point of view this was a very pleasant fact, indeed. Mrs. Carstairs was enabled to live in all the brilliancy of New York seasons and Newport influence.

But Frances, embellished with all that Parisian costumes and the skill of French maids could possibly add to the beauty of her graceful figure, and the witchery of her wavy brown hair and deep brown eyes, had grave doubts as to the desirability of this wealth. For there was Dick to be considered.

Dick was not rich; not exactly poor, but certainly not rich. And when one is wealthy and beautiful and 21, and when one's mother thinks it is time to consider one's marriage, and so many young men with all the necessary bank notes and bonds have expressed their admiration and been refused; and all the while the girl is becoming more beautiful, while Dick is the only one that will suit but is not rich; naturally the problem assumes serious proportions.

Dick was not rich; not exactly poor, but certainly not rich. And when one is wealthy and beautiful and 21, and when one's mother thinks it is time to consider one's marriage, and so many young men with all the necessary bank notes and bonds have expressed their admiration and been refused; and all the while the girl is becoming more beautiful, while Dick is the only one that will suit but is not rich; naturally the problem assumes serious proportions.

Of course, Dick was also a doubter. To keep himself at all cheerful he had day dreams of becoming suddenly wealthy and being married to Frances, and from "Old John's" point of view this was a very pleasant fact, indeed. Mrs. Carstairs was enabled to live in all the brilliancy of New York seasons and Newport influence.

Then came a time when Dick Carstairs' mother told him that she was thinking of marrying and having a home of her own.

The new developments in the mine having been carefully reported to Dick, that young man was more perplexed than ever, but could offer no advice except to wait for a while. The "waiting" lasted for nearly three months, until Mrs. Carstairs announced to Frances that her husband had been promoted to Mr. Wyndham, whose money was also obtained from mines.

After a short pause she continued:

hours of despondency. "That there ore won't assay worth a door-scrubber's cuss yer'll see."

The great event of the mining season was the collapse of the Wyndham Mining Company. The mine had not proved as rich as the assay had shown. In fact, it was a total loss.

There came a day when Bill no longer went to the mine, but tossed about in the delirium of fever. The young doctor told Dick that it was just drink. Constitution wrecked by liquor.

Dick went to the mine as carefully as he could. One hot night Dick was sitting by the bedside of old Bill, who was lying in a stupor. He was reading a letter from Frances, which had been sent from the mine.

Bill's mate in the mine all attended the simple funeral and erected a rough cross at the head of the grave.

The days passed into weeks and Dick, still in the mine, was carrying on the machinery on the Wyndham property still lay idle, a monument to hasty judgment. The whole story of the failure was now known. The original owners of the claim had followed the advice of the doctor and had left the mine in the hands of the doctor.

There ain't no gold rocks there, naw, not even good buildin' stone. A man's plumb level-eyed-folks to prospect the mine. Better strike a job workin' in the city than be a miner.

Dick spent all his idle time wandering about the property adjacent to the Carstairs mine, and discovered one day that it had been staked out as a claim, the friendly mine with the thirty, he wanted to know.

"Don't you worry, pardner, you ain't lost claim, I know all about that there claim, for I've broken more'n one hammer tucker's round their rocks, and by the branch of Hinnelch, there's no gold on the top of that claim. Naw, nor for a long trail down into the ground neither. But, pardner, yer a good friend of mine, I like yer ways, yo see, and I'll tell yer what'll be better, yerself, and me, 'Old John's' mine, bowing yer voice, pardner, 'is likely to have a vein run down underneath that there claim.'"

"Well, then," said Dick, "we are too late."

"Naw, naw, naw, 'Tain't likely anythin' will happen for three or four months yet, and they'll get enough of that claim 'fore then.'"

These were bitter days for poor Dick. Old Bill would reassure him in his

"Old John" was wise and as yet scarcely any one had been allowed to hear of the new vein. His agents approached Dick and offered him an extra thousand dollars for the machinery and tools. Dick dismissed them with the information that he would speak to Old John himself.

It was about a month after the new mining firm of Carstairs, Leigh & Co. had been incorporated that Frances, from her old position on Dick's shoulder, was talking over old times.

One still January night a number of people in a tiny Swiss hamlet of the Canton Valais quietly abandoned their homes, and shortly before midnight the avalanche broke loose with plunging roars. It started many others who were sleeping in the usual tracks, broke through and destroyed an old struggling larch forest and completely buried a big chalet in which twenty-six persons had taken refuge.

The great lesson that lies on the surface of this text is that the God of creation is also the God of grace and salvation. If you and I should think about it, we should be inclined to believe that the God who built this universe is a greater God than the One who made the world.

Walking Gentleman. "Oh, yes," said the first actor, "Hamm has been in the profession for some years."

"Indeed?" replied the second actor. "Comedian or tragedian?"

"The boarder does it like our country vegetables," said Mrs. Cornet.

"That's funny," responded the farmer. "They ought to prelate 'em. They was bought right in the same town they come from."—Washington Star.

CHINESE TEACHING.
A description of Chinese schoolroom methods, taken from "A Corner of Cathay," is of interest as showing the contrast between schools in the Orient and schools in this country. Many of the pupils will recall the time when they were in the district schools of the United States had some of the Chinese thoroughness and dependence upon the memory.

The beginner takes his book to the teacher and hears him read a column or more, after which the pupil returns to his desk and consults this lesson alone until he can recite it without looking at it. He then takes his book again to the teacher, turns his back to the master and recites what he has learned.

TO REPUBLICANS:

We are anxious to have every Republican in close touch, and working in harmony with the Republican National Congressional Committee in favor of the election of a Republican Congress.

The Congressional campaign must be based on the administrative and legislative record of the party, and that being so, Theodore Roosevelt's personality must be a central figure and his achievements a central thought in the campaign.

We desire to maintain the work of this campaign with popular subscriptions of One Dollar each from Republicans. To each subscriber we will send the Republican National Campaign Text Book and all documents issued by the Committee.

Help us achieve a great victory.
