Love that Passeth Knowledge.

Higher than the highest heaven,
Deeper than the deepest hell,
Is God's love to guilty sinners
Who through disobedience fell.
Why love them so?
I do not know:
But this I know—
Redeeming love, and it alone,
Can break a heart as hard as stone,
Purer than the purest fountain,
Wider than the widest sea,
Sweeter than the sweetest music,
Is God's love in Christ to me,
Why love me so?
I do not know;
I only know
That nothing less than love divine
Could save this sinful soul of mine,
Stronger than all evil powers
Is this fortress of our faith.
"Our life is hid with Christ in God."
In him we'll triumph over death.
Why love us so?
I do not know.
I only know
That for his boundless love to me
I'll praise him through eternity.

BIBLICAL SURVIVINGS.

The following are the twelfth year of King Darius' reign:
1. Human Formed his plan early at night (Chapter 3: 7). The king was surrounded by soldiers and he was summoned to write the decree. He wrote it in three days and nights and ten days later (8: 9), to the counter decree. Esther's name is included in the latter date, or earlier.
2. The king's name and place were in the capital.
3. ALEXANDER PARASCHENI. None other than Alexander the Great, who was born in Macedonia, Greece, in 356 B.C., died in 323 B.C.

of the decree against the Jews mourning everywhere. Mordecai and Esther were clothed in wearing sackcloth and by at bitterness." Having thus drawn the queen's attention, he then interceded with the king for the people. After much hesitation, she and, at the peril of her life, into Mordecai's arms. He had her then accept, and accepted her for Haman and himself to be executed. He then begged that he be invited them again, for the king was doing them wrong. He then explained. He had the records read, and was thus convinced of the king's error. He then offered to be executed with the king, as he had been ordered with a desire to reward him for his services. He then offered a plan. Haman was hanged, a estate given to Esther, who then interceded with the king. The king then decreed that the Jews be allowed to live in his face. The lesson to be learned is of the means for rendering it.

SATURDAY, OCT. 14, 1899

No president and vice-president have ever been so intimate as McKinley and Hobart. Cleveland and Stevenson had nothing in common, and for several good reasons were not friends. Harrison and Morton were friendly but unconfidential. Cleveland and Hendricks hated each other, and everybody knows of the quarrel between Garfield and Arthur over the distribution of patronage in New York. Hayes and Wheeler were friendly, and the vice-president used to go to the White House every Sunday night with the other family friends and sing hymns. Grant and Colfax and Grant and Wilson got along fairly well together, but in both cases each had more intimate friends. Lincoln was always suspicious of Johnson, and Johnson always spoke of Lincoln with contempt. So we have to go back to Mr. McKinley's time to find a vice-president who possessed the thorough confidence of the president and was on what we called intimate terms with him.

Between Mr. Lincoln and Hamlin there were no secrets and no lack of confidence. But even they were not so brotherly as McKinley and Hobart. The vice-president goes over to the White House, walks into the President's room and says: "Hello! What are you doing now?" Just as if they were law partners, and the President will call in Colonel Montgomery and say: "Tell Mr. Hobart to be ready to go driving at half-past four." It is Damon and Pythias over again, and with a thorough and sincere affection on both sides.

People often say this man has drunk whiskey, that man has smoked, and the other man has chewed tobacco forty or fifty years, and he is well and hale and hearty. But they do not tell how many others have done the same thing and are dead and buried long ago; nor do they tell how many of the man's children have been laid in untimely graves, as a result of his evil and vicious habits. "Unto the third and fourth generation," is the descending curse extended, and not till four generations are passed are we able to estimate the full consequences of parental iniquity. "We learned the other day," says the Herald and Fremont, "of a man who boasted that he had taken a bottle of wine every day for fifty years, and had never been injured by it. But of his twelve children six died in infancy, one was idiotic, one became insane, and the other four grew up to be vicious invalids. Men find it impossible to get away from the old law laid down thousands of years ago, that God visits 'the iniquities of the fathers upon the children.' It is a terrible thing for the fathers to commit sins for which their children will have to pay the penalty, but men are doing so on every hand."

The wheat grow, the corn grow, the rye grow, the barley grow and the potatoes grow—making a harvest that disappoints Mr. Bryan and killed Bryanism in Nebraska. He's fighting for his own life in his own State.

Every Democratic ticket put into the field is an invitation to the people to try an experiment, to run the risk of business, political, commercial and trade affairs. It points to closed or crippled factories, partly distinct, sluggish and inactive markets, unemployed labor, reduced wages. Experience proves this statement of facts. If you doubt it, recall the Cleveland times.

Mr. Bryan is in trouble about his own State. Nebraska threatens to repudiate him, and if it should do so the chances are that the convention would drop him a year hence.

Perhaps you will be interested to know that the pepper you see on the table is the fruit or nut of a vine or climbing shrub, a native of India; that its name in Sanskrit is pipplu, and that the changing of the i to e was made by the Persians, who have no i in their alphabet. Black pepper is the unripe fruit ground; white pepper is the ripe fruit ground after the black outer shell has been taken off. At one time in the history of the world, when it was difficult to get this condiment, now so cheap that the poorest can have it to use on their table, pepper was sold at enormous prices, and only the very rich could afford to have it.

Cheap Excursions via Phila. & Reading R.R.

The National Export Exposition is more than a mere show, it is a grand school of instruction as to the manufacture, ability and ingenuity of the United States, and all presented to the eye in such a way that it affords amusement as well as instruction. For the pleasure seeker there is the Chinese Village, Oriental Theatre, trained animals, etc., in fact, all the best shows from the highways of recent exhibitions, and when to this is added Grand Concerts every afternoon and evening by some of the best bands and orchestras of the country, our readers can easily see it is well worth a visit.

Arrangements have been made by the Philadelphia & Reading Railway to sell special excursion tickets from this vicinity to Philadelphia, on Oct. 12 and 20, Nov. 3rd and 17th at the low rate of single fare for round trip (with a minimum of 75 cents) including admission coupon to the exposition. These tickets to be good going only on specified train morning of sale, and good returning on any regular train the same day. For full information as to rates, time of trains, etc., consult ticket agents, or address Edwin J. Weeks, Gen'l Passenger Agt., Philadelphia.

A Narrow Escape.
Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, Ct. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; coughed out in and finally terminated in consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Maker, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth I would meet my Maker once above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took it in all right bottles. It has cured me, and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman. Trial bottles free at Crowley's Drug Store. Regular size 50 cts and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

The big farm which we mentioned last week, as sold, is best known as the Eckhart farm, about Ninth St. and Second Road. The purchaser secured a bargain, provided he has the money to put it in proper shape, and the experience, to work it to the best advantage.

At the last meeting of the Board of Education it was voted that no children should be received into the first year classes (first grade) after Oct. 20th, until April 1st, when more could be admitted. We presume this rule will not apply to children of families who move into town during the closed season.

Nature's coloring of the leaves is grand beyond description. From deep green, through light yellow, various shades of brown, and to a brilliant scarlet, make many trees a picture and a delight to every artistic observer. But even an artist to transfer the scene to canvas, he would doubtless be accused of exaggeration—so vivid are the contrasts.

The W. J. & S. R. R. Co. have vastly improved the appearance of their property around the freight station. Since moving the buildings, they have graveled the approach to their platform, and included the station in the whole length, and included the street. On the old side, they have cleared away, the clutter on their side, giving a chance for proper drainage which was needed. It is an all-around good job.

The Election Board had their first meeting on Tuesday last, and elected W. R. Seely chairman, first precinct; Jos. H. Garton in second precinct; then proceeded to canvass the town as provided by law, to make up a correct register of voters. Their next meeting, for completing and correcting said lists, will be held next Tuesday, Oct. 17th, from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m., after which date the lists will be posted for public inspection.

At the School Board meeting, last Tuesday evening, Dr. Wass introduced the subject of purchasing a playground for the pupils at Central Schools. At present, the school house lot is pretty well covered with buildings, and the young folks are compelled to use adjoining property in their sport at recess and at other times. Should owners exercise their right, and forbid such use, there would be no place for play except two narrow streets. The doctor's proposition was favorably received, and a committee appointed to investigate the subject and report. The REPUBLICAN advocated buying the several acre lot to the north and east of the school house grounds, several years ago, and still believes it would be a wise act.

What think you? Would it not be interesting, as well as profitable, to have an evening of reminiscence with our older citizens who knew Hammoncton as it was about forty years ago? Mr. E. could tell of the ancient Post Office arrangements; Mr. T. of the first blacksmith shop; Judge B., of the general outlook of the place, making special mention of Bellevue Avenue and Main Road, first R. R. station, etc. Captain S. could tell us of old Hammoncton; Mr. M., of early farming days; and others could contribute their share of information. Music might be interspersed, and any hall engaged would be filled. Think it over, and if it strikes you favorably, let the Editor or the writer know, and we will proceed.

W. N. OSBORN.

The social gathering of the Epworth League, last Monday evening, in the M. E. Church, was largely attended. After business meeting, the Literary Committee presented a very interesting program. A fine duet on the piano, by Mrs. Charles Jacobs and Miss Davis, brought forth a round of applause. Mrs. Wm. Cunningham gave a good reading that occasioned many smiles, as well as applause. Master Rose Myers favored us with a cornet solo, with an accompaniment by Miss Lillian Jacobs, which took well. Alfred Tafford gave one of his comical pieces on German Hypnotism, to the amusement of all; encore brought him again to the front. Master Harold Ogden sang a solo, while Miss Ethel Jacobs played; Miss Ethel also gave a good reading entitled, "Something Spilt." A trio, Albert Jackson with guitar, Miss Lillian Jacobs, mandolin, and Miss Ethel Jacobs, piano, proved very interesting, and the applause was so continuous that they had to give the audience more.

Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

THE STORY OF LIFE.

Only the same old story, told in a different strain. Sometimes a smile of gladness, and then a stab of pain. Sometimes a flash of sunlight, again the driving rain.

Sometimes it seems to borrow from the crimson rose its life. Sometimes black as a shadow, then changed to a brilliant light. Sometimes false as Satan, sometimes as heaven true.

Only the same old story, but, how the changes ring! Prophet and priest and peasant, soldier and scholar and king; Sometimes the warmest handclasp leaves in the palm a sting.

Sometimes in hush of even, sometimes in the midday strife, Sometimes with delicate calmness, sometimes with passion fire; We dream it, write it, live it, this—old, old story of life.—Boston Transcript.

In Love with a Painter.

JACQUES BRUIERE is an artist whose mythical pictures have a most delightful modern air. His Grecian goddesses look like Parisiennes; their wind-blown hair, their high-crowned sandals, and a peculiar swirl given to their drapery have a certain air of the Parisian ladies. So they crowd Jacques' studio, and implore him to let them sit for Diana and Andromeda. But he is a most unromantic fellow, and is carried by no considerations other than those of gain. Although he is but 30, he has gained fame and some fortune; and he is so industrious that he files from useless words and time-consuming that is to say, women and love.

A year ago, just after the art exhibit closed, Jacques determined to go on a sketching tour. So he packed his trunk, assisted by his friend, Eugene de Lasse, and was bidding adieu to his studio, when the servant entered with a note. It was a nice little note, daintily perfumed, and the address was written in the most delicate hand imaginable. He read it, frowned, and crumpling it up, threw it on the floor.

"Confound the woman!" he cried.

"What's the matter?" asked his friend.

"Why, I'm such an unlucky fellow," replied Jacques. "There's always some woman or other bothering me, writing about how she admires my paintings, and how she'd like to sit for me, and all that sort of thing. Just as if I can should say he would like to sit for my paintings because he admired the cut of my beard. Look!" said he, picking up the letter. "Mme. Leonie, Leconte, such a sweet and simple."

"But," said Eugene, who was reading the note, "it's very well written. I assure you, full of most delicate wit. What are you going to do with it?"

"Oh, you literary man!" groaned Jacques. "What am I going to do with it? Why, burn it, of course. What do you suppose I am going to do with it?"

"Will you let me see it?" said Eugene, "you're going away—"

"Yes."

"Then give it to me."

"Why, what'll you do with it?" said Jacques, handing it over.

"Well, I'll play painter," replied Eugene. "I'm not much of one, but I can draw a little—enough, at all events, to deceive a woman in love. And I'll find out who 'Mme. Leonie' is—that's all part of her name, I'm sure."

So it was settled. Jacques Bruiere, painter, set off for Switzerland, and Eugene de Lasse, man of letters, remained to permeate the studio with Mme. Leonie. Other visitors were told the truth—that the master was gone.

At last came Eugene's romantic fancy had pictured her as young and beautiful. But she was more than that—she was divine. She was a brunette, and had the most delightful nose, the most sparkling eyes, the most glorious hair, and the most adorable little hands and feet that Eugene had ever seen. He flattered himself that he was correctly made up for his role. His velvet boots and jaunty cap were a little too clean, perhaps, but that was a good fault.

Mme. Leonie wanted her portrait painted, and it was very difficult for her to decide how it should be done. She hovered long and hesitated, but she was Ophelia; the next she had decided that to be represented as Salome was necessary to her peace of mind. But when Eugene had made his preparations, his fields were how devoted! Delilah was the character that suited her. And then she would wander around the studio, and drape herself with the barbarettic stuffs used by long-gone models, and handle the curious weapons, and examine the porcelains. And then she would say that she was weary, and would come the next day. And so it went, for Eugene de Lasse deeper in love than ever.

As for him, he was in a dream. He had retired from the world. At his own quarters his door was daily opened by publishers, by musicians, by printers' boys, by creditors, and by friends. But no one knew where he had gone. He had told his servants he was going away, but had not told them where it was wrong, he had not told them that he took a certain ferocious joy in it when he thought how he himself had once pursued these same editors and managers.

Eugene had at last discovered that his wife was a woman, wealthy, and of good family. Her full name was Leonie de Nore. He had never told her, but that she was blind to it was impossible. Let her see that she was in his painting, for she was certainly, "if you'll be a very good boy."

"Yes."

"And never deceive me again—"

A COLUMN OF PARTICULAR INTEREST TO THEM.

Something that Will Interest the Juvenile Members of Every Household—Quaint Actions and Bright Sayings of Many Cute and Cautious Children.

Well, yes, your goodness does, I'm sure. Make mother love you all the more; but that is not the reason true.

Back Way to Mentality by Division. Everybody knows that learning the the multiplication table is as easy as "pie," and that the five are not much harder. But slight as is the mental effort required in multiplying any number by five, it may be lessened still more by discarding the multiplier entirely and substituting a divisor instead. This may sound paradoxical, but by the method usually adopted that dividing by two will bring the same result as multiplying by five, providing you add a cipher to the quotient if the dividend be an even number, or add a cipher to the quotient if the dividend be an odd number. For example, if you multiply 2,734 by 5 the product is 13,670. What is still easier, divide 2,734 by 2, which is done almost instantaneously. Then tack on your 0 and you have 13,670.

Early Habits. A look into the bedroom of a boy or girl will give one an idea of what kind of a person he or she will probably become. A boy who keeps his clothing hung up neatly, or a girl whose room is always tidy, will be apt to make a successful man or woman. A boy who throws down his cap or book anywhere will never keep his accounts in shape, will do things in a slovenly, careless way, and not be long wanted in any position. A girl who collars her neck with her fingers, or who throws her dress or bonnet down on a chair, will make a poor wife in the cases out of ten. It is such little things that reveal the character, and the such little things that reveal the character, and the such little things that reveal the

The Sweetest Boy. Little Frank got at the end of a new maple syrup which his mamma had just received from her old home in Vermont. He also found a paint brush and began to decorate the parlor furniture with the sticky liquid. From chairs and sofa legs he went to pictures. After he had turned several horses into odd-colored animals he happened to get the syrup on his fingers. Naturally he tasted it, and finding it sweet, he cried: "O-o-o! Dat's nice!" He found a spoon and fed himself, but more syrup dropped on his clean, white dress, which his mamma had put on him for "company."

But he was sent from the parlor when the bell rang his mamma went to the door. In came Aunt Sue and Uncle Ned. When they saw little Frank they said: "Oh! What a sweet little boy!"

"Yes," said Uncle Ned, "he is the sweetest boy in all the world."

Mamma laughed because she could not help it. So Frank knew that he was safe. But he was sent from the parlor as a "bad boy," and had a good time eating the syrup on the back doorsteps with his kitten, who contentedly licked the spoon and purled, thinking all the time Frank really was the very

"sweetest boy on earth."

Following an idea first developed in Germany, pictures have recently been printed in this country which, when viewed through spectacles, appear in stereoscopic relief. The object pictured is first photographed from two points like an ordinary stereoscopic view. Then the two pictures are printed in two complementary colors, nearly but not quite overlapping. The glasses of the viewing spectacles are also of complementary colors corresponding to those used in the printing. Here, then, the picture is seen through these glasses, it stands forth with a startling appearance of solidity.

A writer in Forest and Stream describes a victory which he saw gained over a rattlesnake by the inhabitants of a prairie-dog village in the Indian Territory. The ugly invader crawled into one of the dog-holes, whereupon fifteen or twenty men gathered about the place, and began to push dirt into the hole. The snake stuck his head up to fight, but the moment the snake entered another hole they pushed dirt in again, and this time pushed in the dirt so rapidly that the rattlesnake was effectively entrapped. Then the dogs tampered the dirt down hard with their noses, and left the snake to suffocate.

As is well known to botanists, but not so well known to the general public, the white powdery coating on some leaves and fruits is wax in nature and is called "blow." It is a natural work on botany. Its function has received some attention. Mr. Darwin having made it the object of some studies in his later years, as a student of the Laboratory of the University of Cambridge, in a short paper by Miss Roberts, Reynolds, giving the results of a series of experiments which show that when the blow is removed from the epidermis the transpiration of water is greatly increased. Thus in case of agave uncut the loss was about two and one-half times as much from leaves of agave with the blow removed as from those with the blow on.

The man in charge of the asphalt pavement in paid 5 cents an hour, the solitary street sweeper, receiving 4 cents. Nobody litters up the street or sweeps on the pavement. There is a box kept for these. Wire baskets are fastened on lamp posts, against which the litter is thrown. In the public main through the city.

Spain's Greatest Need.

Mr. R. P. Olvin, of Barcelona, Spain, spends his winters at Aiken, S. C. Weak nerves had caused severe pains in the back of his head. On using Electric Bitters, America's greatest blood and nerve remedy, all pain soon left him. He says this grand medicine is what his country needs. All America knows that it cures liver and kidney trouble, purifies the blood, tones up the stomach, strengthens the nerves, puts vim, vigor and new life into every muscle, nerve and organ of the body. If weak, tired or ailing, you need it. Every bottle guaranteed, only 50 cents. Sold by Crowell, Druggist.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration, or heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headache and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sample bottles are at Crowell's Pharmacy.

A Free Trip to Paris!

Reliable persons of a mechanical or inventive mind desiring a trip to Paris, France, with good salary and expenses paid, should write The PATENT RECORD, Baltimore, Md.

A man will die for want of air in five minutes, for want of sleep in ten days, for want of water in a week, and for want of food at varying periods, dependent on circumstances. When one falls asleep, the surrender of sight, taste, smell, hearing and touch is necessary. The sense of touch is the lightest sleeper and most easily awakened, the hearing, then sight, while sluggish taste and smell waken last. The human body is an epitome in nature of all mechanics, all hydraulics, all architecture of every kind. There are more than three hundred and ten mechanical movements known to mechanics to-day, and all these are but modifications of those found in the human body.

The picture of health is often a genuine word of art.

Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.

Never spend your money before you have it.

Never buy what you don't want because it is cheap.

The world is purified, not so much by action as by nobleness of life. The simple presence of a good man is more significant than anything he can do.

There is no secret of success in business. All you have to do is to attend to your business and go ahead.

Some folks are so afraid of irreverence that they won't take their religion into everyday life.

Nothing raises the price of a blessing like its removal; whereas, it was its continuance which should have taught us its value.

Laughter may not improperly be called the chorus of conversation.

Does it Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to another climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the ONLY remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Booshee's German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ of disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Room mended many years by all druggists in the world. Sample bottles at Crowell's Pharmacy.

An Autumn Outing.

An eleven-day personally-conducted tour of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to the Battlefield of Gettysburg, Luray Caverns, Natural Bridge, Virginia Hot Springs, and the cities of Richmond and Washington will leave New York and Philadelphia in a special train of parlor cars on Thursday, October 19th. The party will be in charge of a tourist agent and an experienced chaperon. A whole day will be spent on the Battlefield of Gettysburg, a carriage drive with lectures by an able guide being included in the ticket. Ample time will be allowed at Luray and Natural Bridge to view the wonderful natural formations, and at the Hot Springs two days will be spent. The season at this great Autumn resort in the beautiful mountains of Virginia will be at its height. At Richmond and Washington opportunities will be presented to visit all points of interest under intelligent guidance. The round-trip rate, including all necessary expenses, is $65 from New York, $68 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For detailed itinerary apply to Ticket Agents; to Tourist Agent, 1186 Broadway, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 789 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or address Gen. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.
