HAMMONTON, N. J., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1915

No. 42

R. L. Rubertone is driving a neat market car.

A fine large porch is being built for Hammonton Hotel.

Clarence Littlefield was laid up for a few days with lumbago.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Dodd called on relatives a day or two this week.

Mrs. Edw. W. McGovern has returned from a three weeks visit in Scranton, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, of Philadelphia, were greeted by local friends last Saturday.

J. W. Craig was painfully hurt on Monday, by being thrown from his wagon, in Atlantic City.

See "Brewster's Millions," Civic Club benefit, Eagle Theatre, next Thursday evening.

Christian Science service will be held in Civic Club Hall at three o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Senator Moses E. Clapp so firmly believes in woman suffrage that he is giving a series of free lectures in New Jersey. His lecture on Wednesday evening, in Bellevue Hall, was a masterly appeal for the cause. He declared that woman suffrage is coming, no matter what happens next week. He spoke of the various mistakes in our election laws that had been rectified; and when woman receives the right of suffrage, the last great wrong will be righted.

Howard Sooy and family have moved to Camden.

Volunteer Fire Company monthly meeting next Monday eve.

Variety of Christmas gifts at the Civic Club Fair, Nov. 18-20.

Mrs. Elsie Rider Smathers is driving a new 1916 Stearns-Knight car.

Thimble Bee at the Civic Club House next Thursday, at three o'clock.

Civic Club library open to-night, from seven to nine; also, Monday and Thursday afternoons, three to five. More new books have come.

The Lyceum Course.

Tickets are already on sale at Treasurer Steel's, and can be had of members of the Civic Club, for the Lyceum Course. An exceptionally good choice was made this year—which should guarantee a large sale of tickets.

Announcement as to the date of sale of reserved seats, etc., will be made next week.

Following are the dates:

Wednesday, Nov. 17, 1915, — Royal Male Quartette.

Wednesday, Dec. 1, 1915, — Montaville Flowers, life lectures.

Wednesday, Jan. 12, 1916, — The Arcadians, a female orchestra.

Tuesday, Feb. 8, 1916, — Dr. W. T. S. Culp, lecturer.

Wednesday, Mar. 1, 1916, — Cadman Concert Company.

All sorts of things for wee ones, little ones, and grown-ups, at the Civic Club Fair, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 18 to 20.

The Baptists will observe "Harvest Home," a week from tomorrow, at which they will receive gifts for the Baptist Orphanage at Angora, Pa.

Deer season opened on Wednesday, and continues on the three Wednesdays following. Among the twenty-five killed in Atlantic County were six by local gunners, Messrs. J. M. and Aaron Bassett, Wm. Ostermann, Jos. E. Abbott, Daniel Green, and D. Campanella.

The tenth annual meeting of the Hammonton Branch of American Needlework Guild will be held in Odd Fellows Hall at 2:30, Tuesday the 26th. Dr. Alice M. Seabrook, of the Woman's Hospital, Philadelphia, and Miss Georgia Bender, of the national office, will be the speakers. Everyone is cordially invited to be present.

A CARD.—The members of the Woman's Political Union earnestly request the voters of Hammonton to give the subject of Woman Suffrage their careful consideration, and give a favorable reply, by voting Yes on Tuesday. We claim that we are capable of casting an intelligent vote. You may need our help in the near future. Remember the last school election. Men, be just! Vote "Yes."

Will Andrews and wife made their father a short visit, Wednesday, on their way for a vacation trip.

Tuesday was Columbus Day, but Hammonton had no celebration, except closing of the schools and banks.

You are as old as you feel; so come out on Hallowe'en and help in the parade, which is bound to be a success.

Married, at Presbyterian manse, Sunday, Oct. 10th, Mr. Alvin A. Cobb and Miss Adelia Burd, both of Tuckerton.

Edw. Burt was laid up for a few days with an injury to his foot, received while playing foot-ball at Mount Holly.

Charles Cramer, wife and two children, from Cedar Run, came by automobile last Sunday. They formerly resided here.

There were two fire alarms this week. The first was on Monday, during the noon hour—the blaze was in a heap of bedding hay in the rear of the horse stalls in Colasido's livery stable. A pail of water doused it before the firemen arrived. On Tuesday eve, about seven-thirty, the down town company was again called out, to Da Costa, the scene being at Frank Greis. As in the first case, there was nothing to do but to return home.

Constitutional Amendments—What They Are.

Three amendments to the Constitution of the State of New Jersey are to be voted upon next Tuesday, October 19th. The Secretary of State has prepared a summary of these, which we publish to give every voter an opportunity of knowing what he is asked to vote for.

FIRST—WOMAN SUFFRAGE.
The effect of this proposed amendment, if adopted, will be to extend the right of suffrage to every female citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of this state one year and of the county in which she claims her vote, five months, next before the election; except that a female citizen by marriage shall not be entitled to vote unless she shall have been a resident of the United States five years next before the election. Under the existing law, citizenship of the wife follows the citizenship of the husband, so that if a female citizen of a foreign country marries a citizen of the United States, she immediately becomes, by virtue of the marriage, a citizen of the United States, but under this proposed amendment such citizen does not become an elector or acquire the right of suffrage until she has resided in the United States five years.

SECOND—AMENDMENTS.
The constitution now provides that any specific amendment or amendments to the constitution may be proposed in Senate or General Assembly, and if the same be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two houses, shall be referred to the legislature next then to be chosen; and if in the legislature next chosen such proposed amendment or amendments, or any of them, shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each house, then such proposed amendment or amendments, or such of them as may have been agreed to, shall be submitted to the people, in such manner and at such time, at least four months after the adjournment of the legislature, as the legislature shall prescribe, at a special election to be held for that purpose only; but no amendment or amendments shall be submitted to the people by the legislature oftener than once in five years.

As the constitution now stands, it seems to be a generally-accepted opinion that if an amendment or amendments be submitted to the people, and accepted or rejected, then for five years thereafter no amendment of any kind or nature, whether similar to those last submitted, or entirely dissimilar and relating to entirely distinct and separate matters, can be submitted; that the constitution cannot be thereafter amended in any manner for five years.

This proposed amendment is intended to make plain this provision. It only changes the clause prohibiting submission for five years, by striking out the words "or amendments," and inserting after the word "and," and before the word "amendment," the word "similar," so that it will read, "but no similar amendment shall be submitted to the people by the legislature oftener than once in five years."

The effect of this amendment, if adopted, will be to permit the submission of amendments distinct from and dissimilar to those submitted within five years preceding, but still to prevent the submission of similar or like amendments, relating to the same subject, within the five years, and to make plain the meaning of this clause of the constitution.

THIRD—TAKING PROPERTY.

Article four now prohibits the taking of private property for public use without just compensation, and the legislature can only authorize the taking of such property as is actually needed for the public use.

The effect of this proposed amendment, if adopted, will be to give the legislature somewhat larger powers, and to enable it to give to the state, counties, and other municipalities, and boards and commissions thereof, power to take, for laying out, widening, extending or vacating parks, public places, highways or streets, more land or property than is actually needed for such purposes, but only so much more as will form suitable sites, abutting on such public place, park, highway, or street, and after the amount of land or property actually needed is appropriated, the remainder may be sold or leased.

It often happens, in opening or widening streets or highways, or laying out parks or squares in municipalities, that only parts of particular holdings are needed, and that the remainders are left to the owners so cut up as to have little value for building purposes, on account of lack of depth or irregular shape, and in such case the public is forced to pay for the land actually taken, but also damages for injury done these remainders.

This amendment will enable the legislature, in proper cases, to grant to the state and to county and municipal authorities, power to take, paying full compensation therefor, not only the land needed for the actual improvement, but in addition these remainders, and so much as will make suitable building lots abutting on the improvement.

As it is possible that the Bellevue contractors may begin operations before Halloween, the line of parade will probably take place from Third Street up to Packard, instead of to School Lane. At any rate, due notice will be given in these columns.

It looked as though the dahlias, tomato, cranberry and lima bean harvests were over, after Sunday night's white frost; but several days of warm weather, and some rain, changed appearances considerably. Red raspberries are being harvested.

There will be but a light frost next Tuesday, probably, unless the ladies compel their husbands, brothers, and gentlemen friends to go to the polls. The hours are from six o'clock in the morning to seven o'clock in the evening.

Next week we will publish an article on an organization called Woman's Section of the Navy League, for which Mrs. Thomas Crenner is receiving applications for membership.

Get ready for Halloween.

FRYING

From the Encyclopedia of Practical Cooking

"There are several kinds of fat suitable for this purpose, such as butter, lard, a mixture of lard and suet in equal proportions, dripping and oil.

"Olive oil is the purest and best fat and in some cases outlasted oil is used, but the latter has a very peculiar odor and is therefore not recommended.

Un-Claimed Letters.

The following letters remained unclaimed for in the Hammonton Post Office on Wednesday, Oct. 13, 1915:

Mrs. P. F. Huey Mr. Jack Rogers
William Ferguson Miss Amelia S.
Mrs. Franklin E. Williams

Persons calling for any of the above will please state that it has been advertised.

LOUIS J. LANGHAM, P. M.

Mr. Henry E. Sittel, long ago a resident in this vicinity, was in town this week.

The Organ Committee of the Presbyterian Ch. wishes to thank all concerned for the interest, generosity, and kindly good will shown to them in their ten days campaign. The results are far above even our expectations. If the amount was not raised up to the time of the musical, last evening, it was only because the willing workers volunteering had not been able to see that those whose generosity will finally make the long-suffered improvement possible to lovers of music in this town. We thank each one of the many who have given, and ask the patient consideration of those not yet seen until they also are given an opportunity to help.

Notice of Registry and Election!

Regular meeting on Wednesday evening. All the members present except Mayor Burt, who was ill.

The first item was opening of bids for Bellevue Avenue paving. Accordingly, Clerk Seelye called the seals and read the proposals, as follows:

Richard Land, 67 1/2 cents per lineal foot for gutters, and $1.75 per square yard for street paving.

Edw. L. Bader, 57 c. per lineal foot for gutters, and $1.47 for paving.

Mann, Warren & Cummings, $1.50 per yard for gutters, and $1.57 1/2 for paving.

Cantrill Co., $1.80 per yard for gutters, and $1.80 for paving.

Junita Co., $1.70 per yard for gutters, and $1.70 for paving.

Council decided to refer all estimates to Finance Committee, who were to report Friday (last) eve's.

Bader was evidently the successful bidder.

Highway Committee submitted estimate from Engineer Kemington on Packard St. storm drain, about $2700. Mr. Piez recommended its installation, but action was deferred.

Light Committee reported cost of nine fixtures of twenty colored electric lights each, Halloween, as sixty-five dollars. By vote, the committee was instructed to contract for same.

Property Committee reported on various subjects. The cost of the proposed lung motor would be $150. Committee will see how much can be raised by popular subscription. John Woolbert desired to rent Eleventh Street gravel pit for three years, at $10 a year; voted to lease the same. Twenty benches and several tables have been stolen from the Park; and other damage done. Hall will be closed, and bolted with iron bars.

Sewerage Committee reported that repairs had been satisfactorily made.

Chief of Police report showed five arrests, some disorderly conduct, one riding without a light, five lodgers.

Receipts of Collector, for taxes, were $181.74.

Clerk reported receiving $47.80.

LITTLE SON

YEAR after Judith Fairchild's return to her father's home, she received a letter in its brevity it was a masterpiece. Terribly she informed her he was contemplating the sale of the bungalow—low-furnished. That, distasteful as a meeting between them would be, he was compelled to ask her to go over the contents with him. Undoubtedly there were things she would wish to retain, and when it came to a sale, it would be quite impossible for him to discriminate.

She bit her lips as she thought of a certain room fitted up as a nursery, of a cradle standing there and a little red chair. Her hands went to her eyes swiftly as through shutting out a vision that tortured, but after a moment's mental struggle her head lifted, she became the indifferent woman of the past few months and sat down before her writing desk. Twenty minutes later a note was on its way to Richard Fairchild, making an appointment for the following afternoon at 3 o'clock.

When she stood in the bungalow garden, she did not get it in the least. The condition she had expected. Evidently with a sale in view, Dick had things tidied up. The lawn had been well trimmed; with a strange feeling she found the ramble rose they had planted in the spring of "Little Son's" arrival carefully trained against a post of the veranda.

When she had mounted the stairs she glanced neither to the right nor to the left. She did not dare! She walked hurriedly down the hall passing before a door at its end. There she paused, memories averted and bitter crowding her. Not until her glance fell upon the sketch of a wrist, worn her time was flying, did she stumble into the pink and white room and she had fitted for the "Little Son."

Then, as in the hall below, she could not look about. A pain that ripped and writhed was choking in her throat. Over again she lived the joy of possession, the agony of bereavement, the torture of the after thought of desecration. It was more than she could bear. She turned at the point of turning, groping her way down the stairs, out of the house of haunting memories, when her path led her to a little room, "Little Son's" and his father's before him, and then on a little red chair.

She looked about the room, lingeringly, lovingly, then turned toward the hall. Out there she would wait a moment, then she would be in self in hand for the meeting with Dick. But before she reached the door she heard him come up the stairs, along the hall and into the room. In a moment he entered the room.

From her place of concealment she watched him with all her heart in her eyes (he had not seen him in a year), and she thought with a little of the old bitterness that the mother of a child who had not the power to rack him as he had racked her, for he barely glanced at her. He did not stoop to the child as she had stooped to him now and neither did she, she thought.

A sob caught in her throat and he looked around the room quickly. He stood a moment where the door had arrested him, then his hands went out in an impatient gesture. He said aloud: "I should be accustomed by this time in this room to my own feeling of Judith's nearness, yet I could have sworn I heard her voice then."

He crossed to a table and dropped wearily into a chair. He drew a photograph toward him, which Judith had not told her own. He stared at it, and then, with a gasp, he turned to the nursery. He stared at it, and then, with a gasp, he turned to the nursery.

It was not past midnight in her throat now, but a great, unbelievable nature of a mother's heart had placed her there. Dick must not go to his strange visitor to the nursery. Her eyes began to glow beautifully. If he took around and come to her, she would not go to him, she felt strangely shy. But of a sudden, as Dick had bent down on his arm, a "little son" came to her, a "little son" came to her, a "little son" came to her.

Later she asked: "How could you ever think of selling our bungalow, Dick?"

"I didn't," he laughed.

She looked at him in bewilderment. "That you wrote me a recommendation. You had refused repeatedly to see me, you know. I was almost hopeless when a remark of your mother's came to me. I thought, 'You never visited the bungalow, and she knew the reason why you were afraid of memories. I began to wonder if it could be that through memories of "Little Son," which are no—no haunting here, I might win you back. This room affected me strangely; I noticed me wonderfully, when I visited it about a month after our separation, and I thought it would be the same with you, so I wrote you about the sale, and—

"But," she interrupted, "you said the meeting would be distasteful! I didn't like that, Dick."

Again he laughed. "Of course, you wouldn't—that's why I wrote it. I hadn't forgotten a certain pride of yours. I felt the word would prove galling, and that nothing would keep you from coming to show me—you didn't care. Wasn't I right?"

"Yes," she answered, "that's what I felt—at first. But here—"

"I know, little woman, all about it."

CUTTS WAS SCREAMING.

Cutts, the screaming comedian, and Smutts, the roaring humorist, chanced to hit upon the same town for the show of the night. Consequently, when Smutts read the announcement from the top of the page, he turned to an unobtrusive man near by. "Have you seen this show?" asked Smutts.

"Hither," said the young man. "How's this fellow Cutts in it?"

"Simply A. L.," answered the individual. "He's screaming."

"Is he as good as Smutts?" ventured Smutts.

"Licks him into fits," said the young man.

Smutts looked at him very sternly, and then, in the hollow tone of a tragedian, he said, "I am Smutts!"

"I know you are," said the young man, cheerfully. "I am Cutts!"

ACCIDENTS DUE TO POOR LIGHTING.

That fully 25 per cent. of the accidents to workmen are caused by insufficient lighting, for men working at night, in the opinion of experts who have made a study of the subject, is estimated that $250,000,000 in the average annual cost of injuries to workmen in the United States alone, and that over 50 per cent. of these accidents are preventable. — Popular Mechanics.

A LITTLE HUMOROUS

SMILE IN COURT.

At a recent trial one of the witnesses was a green countryman, unused to the ways of the law, but quick as a flash to understand its principles. After a severe cross-examination the counsel for the prosecution paused, and then, putting on a look of severity, exclaimed:

"Mr. Kilkinn, has not an effort been made to induce you to tell a different story?"

"A different story from what I told, sir?"

"That is what I mean."

"Yes, sir; several persons have tried to get me to tell a different story from what I have told, but they couldn't."

"Now, sir, upon your oath, I wish to know who those persons are."

"Well, I guess you've tried 'bout as hard as any of them."

"And why?"

"Bec'ry, I'm thinkin' it showed which of us had the best of the fight, didn't it?"

"On a Chicago street the following conversation was overheard between two Irishmen:

"I understand, McGuire, that you are not a Catholic, but a Protestant?"

"I was, and as he was always counted as one of the smart men, I determined to do what in any other case would have been ridiculous on the face of it."

"I had previously decided that I would give as my final selection the first and second favorites and a good outsider for third place. But this telegram upset all my calculations, and I felt that I could not altogether ignore it. Dixey knew what he was doing, and as he was always counted as one of the smart men, I determined to do what in any other case would have been ridiculous on the face of it."

A RACING ROMANCE

"TELEGRAM FOR YOU, SIR."

It was the morning of the Derby Day, and I had just looked into the office before starting for Epsom. I was at the time of the start of the Sporting Courier, and besides giving what is known in the sporting world as "mid-day snails," I usually "aid" the home meetings.

I took the telegram and tore it open. The message surprised me, for it ran: "Don Pero is bound to win."

I read it again and again. Don Pero was a rank outsider, and had been looked upon by everybody as not having the slightest chance of a place. For confirmation one had only to look at the "latest London betting," to find that the horse stood at 50 to 1.

Yet Dixey, the trainer, had never before mislaid me, and I could not help feeling that there must be something in it. I had heard of dark horses before, but this surely was the darkest of dark ones. However, I determined to follow one whose tip had always been straight and to the point.

But this telegram upset all my calculations, and I felt that I could not altogether ignore it. Dixey knew what he was doing, and as he was always counted as one of the smart men, I determined to do what in any other case would have been ridiculous on the face of it."

A RACING ROMANCE

"TELEGRAM FOR YOU, SIR."

It was the morning of the Derby Day, and I had just looked into the office before starting for Epsom. I was at the time of the start of the Sporting Courier, and besides giving what is known in the sporting world as "mid-day snails," I usually "aid" the home meetings.

I took the telegram and tore it open. The message surprised me, for it ran: "Don Pero is bound to win."

I read it again and again. Don Pero was a rank outsider, and had been looked upon by everybody as not having the slightest chance of a place. For confirmation one had only to look at the "latest London betting," to find that the horse stood at 50 to 1.

Yet Dixey, the trainer, had never before mislaid me, and I could not help feeling that there must be something in it. I had heard of dark horses before, but this surely was the darkest of dark ones. However, I determined to follow one whose tip had always been straight and to the point.

I had previously decided that I would give as my final selection the first and second favorites and a good outsider for third place. But this telegram upset all my calculations, and I felt that I could not altogether ignore it. Dixey knew what he was doing, and as he was always counted as one of the smart men, I determined to do what in any other case would have been ridiculous on the face of it."

FORD, the UNIVERSAL CAR.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The following prices f. o. b. Detroit, effective Aug. 2, 1915:

Ford Runabout	$390
Ford Touring Car	$440
Ford Town Car	$640

No Speedometer included in this year's equipment, otherwise cars fully equipped

There can be no assurance given against an advance in these prices at any time. We guarantee, however, that there will be no reduction in these prices prior to August 1, 1916.

Profit-Sharing with Retail Buyers

On August 1, 1914, we made the announcement that if we could make and sell at retail 300,000 Ford cars between August 1, 1914 and August 1, 1915, we would share profits with the retail purchasers, to the extent of from $40 to $60 on each car. We have sold over 300,000 Ford cars in the time specified, and profit-sharing checks of $50 each will be distributed as rapidly as possible after August 15, 1915. Retail purchasers who have not yet mailed us their profit-sharing coupons, properly endorsed, should do so without delay.

Our plan to profit-share with retail purchasers of Ford cars during 1914-15 has been most successful. We thoroughly believe in it, but, realizing the uncertainty of conditions generally makes it advisable to defer any announcement of future profit-sharing until a later date.

We are, however, confident of our inability to reduce costs for several months, and therefore can offer no profit-sharing for cars delivered during August, September, and October, 1915.
