From the REPUBLICAN of Oct. 25th, 1894:

Mr. P. H. Brown, having sold his farm will probably buy a lot on or near Bellevue, and at once build a residence.

C. H. Wilson has bought a lot opposite the Post Office, and will build thereon.

Henry Sheppard, living near Da Costa, had hard work (with his wife's aid) to save his house from destruction from forest fires.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed, it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 ct. bottles for sale by druggists.

Arrangements are being made by the Pennsylvania railroad officials for one of the biggest improvements ever attempted in Camden. It is nothing more or less than to have all of the tracks of the main line run in and out of the city on an elevated road. The head officials of the Pennsylvania railroad have for some time been considering the advisability of running their tracks at an elevation, but the matter has now been settled on and engineers from the railroad company are making their plans. There seems to be a disposition on the part of the railroad people to first get rid of the dangerous crossing where the railroad tracks meet near Twelfth Street. The plans that are being made now are for the commencement of the work at the railroad and Market Streets, to extend to a point in Stockton Township. When the elevation is completed the running of cars at grade on Bridge Avenue will be entirely abandoned, which will also do away with the "death trap" at Second Street.

Why is it that some Democratic papers which publish that marvelous address of the Democratic Society of New Jersey do not attach the names of the gentlemen who signed it? Is it because that among the names appears that of Senator Robert Adrian who was conspicuous as the advocate of the coal combine, the race track and the attempted Senate steal—a not very magnificent record as a guarantee of reform in the State?

What is the foreign market worth to Americans if their own be given away to foreigners? If Americans, through the free trade policy of the Democratic party, can't hold their own markets against the cheap competition of foreigners, how can they hope to possess the foreign market?

It is because it has been fully demonstrated that the Republican party is the only one capable of keeping the country in a continuously prosperous condition that the people propose to restore it to power. It isn't politics as much as it is common sense that is bringing about this revolution.

American workmen can't keep their home market by taking down the tariff bars—unless they shall consent to accept wages that will put them on the level of the foreign laborer.

Ex-Speaker Reed, in common with all other observers, is fully persuaded that the Republican party will have no trouble in counting a quorum.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. "This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale by druggists."

Sylvia, my child, bid him come.

"I don't tell you that you want to break back at the last moment, and then dear friends, I have a great deal to say arranged by my devoted friend, your father, but I must have any objections to say, I will hear later, but now I have a few words to say to you, and to breakfast at once, and be merry, eat my son-in-law, and give up your opinion of this pious-bisque. I am hungry, having fasted since midnight. The shock at my companion's sudden death had unnerved him some of his strength. Now, my dear friends, yielded to the force of circumstance.

"Come what will," he said to himself, "I cannot help to put a damper on the joy of my dear friends, but I will, at least, not until they have had their breakfast."

He joined, therefore, in the general rejoicing, and, as he was a man of a cheerful-spirited, the bride-elect, an ardent unsobriety to his supporters, father-and-law's friends.

"I remember her a charming young woman when I was 20. I came from

"I remember her a charming young woman; when I was 20 I came here falling in love with her. We were kept in her good graces, for she was a very smart, smart little sun to her nephew."

"Dear Aunt!" exclaimed the youth in a tone of deep affection. "I hope she will enjoy life for many, many years longer, and his plans with her. I shall be glad to see her again, and Sylvia's dark eyes. Aunt Dolores also listened to him with delight."

"He has the instincts as well as the bearing of a born gentleman," she said. "I am sure he will be a success. I would think that his ancestors have always sold cinnamon and nutmegs."

Uncle Dorival, who read cyclorama and was thought very learned, remarked that he would like to see him.

"And why should he not have fine sentiments as a nobleman? Away with your absurd notions, sister! Art is art!"

"You are equally," said Dorcas and Saint Andre suddenly felt a pang of remorse for the part he was playing, as he recollected that he had to arrange for his friend's burial and would be expected at the hotel. He therefore excused himself, saying that he had important business to attend to, prepared to leave. His host protested in vain. Sylvia looked on in blank amazement, and every one else seemed to refuse to believe that "I do not understand," began the old man, calling his visitor to the front door.

The young man interrupted him, saying solemnly:

"I am here! At 11 o'clock this morning I left. After a short and sudden attack of colic, and I gave the hotel proprietor my word of honor that my body should be removed this morning at twelve, and I would be here if I were to absent myself any longer. It would be very awkward." With these words he disappeared, leaving the old father overwhelmed with astonishment.

When the rest of the family heard what had been said, they decided that the youth had been joking.

"He has humor," said Uncle Dorival. He shall congratulate him tomorrow, and tomorrow he will be here in time for supper."

But supper-time came and passed, and there were no signs of the son-in-law. The family became anxious and at about twelve o'clock they sent a messenger to the hotel to inquire for the passenger who had arrived there by coach that morning. The proprietor sent back word that the youth had not come, and that he was of colic, and that the body had been taken away for burial in the afternoon. This news was received with unbounded astonishment, and little Saint Andre, who had been told that she would wear mourning, as if she were a widow.

"It was his ghost that came here," said the girl's mother, in a tone of conviction. Uncle Dorival shrugged his shoulders.

"Do ghosts eat and drink as we merely?" he asked. "That fellow was surely some young scapegrace, who wanted to play a trick on us, and get rid of his body. He was a scoundrel, a careless ghost, story went the round of the servants' hall, and the footman boasted of having seen a spirit in broad daylight. The tale was so ridiculous that I do not wonder in jests and drawing rooms, and the fair young widow who had never been married wore a black gown and veil, and sent passionate letters to her husband whom she had seen but once."

Two weeks later she was wandering alone the garden one evening, listening sadly to the songs of the birds, and the wind was whirling so brilliantly, but the sight of the beauty only served to increase her sorrow.

"Alas!" she sighed, "if he were here but here to stroll with me along the paths!"

As she spoke a cracking of boughs made her start with terror, and in another instant a man broke through the flowering shrubs and knelt at her feet, saying that he was there for no purpose then, for by the light she recognized the face for which she had

"Then you are not dead?"

"No indeed, sweetheart," he answered softly. "I am alive, and hope to live and love you for many years to come."

When the two young people entered the drawing-room the family were playing backgammon. A look of amusement greeted the appearance of Saint-Andre, and every one being disappointed, the young husband had difficulty in telling his story, which he concluded by asking for Sylvia's hand.

The marriage took place, as soon as the usual preliminaries had elapsed, and Aunt Dolores was triumphant.

"Did I not tell you that he had the bearing of a nobleman?" she cried.

"All's well that ends well, and Baron is as good as a grocer," said Uncle Roderick.—Utica Globe.

Origin of Table Utensils.
A French writer—attempts to—trace table utensils—most of them of recent origin—to the table utensils of the Romans. took their origin from upon very low couches, and it is not until about the time of Charlemagne that a stand was used, around which guests were seated on cushions, with the table raised to its appearance in the middle ages, and with it came benches with backs. The Greeks and Romans ate from a kind of porringer, yet during a period of the middle ages, trays of broad cut round wood took the place of plates. The spoon is very ancient, and many fine specimens are in existence that were used by the Egyptians in the remotest ages. The knife, however, though very old—had not come into common use as a table utensil in the tenth century. The fork was absolutely unknown to the Greeks and Romans, appeared, only as a curiosity in the middle ages, and was first used upon the table by Henry III. Drinking cups—in the middle ages, made from metal, more or less precious—were used in the place of the knife of antiquity. The use of glasses, from Venice, began to be general in the fifteenth century. The salt cellar appeared at a very early date, and the banquet table of the middle ages, the banquets of the Greeks and Romans, many of them being of gold and silver. The castor is probably not older than the sixteenth century.

HORSES ARE VERY CHEAP.

Experiences of Railroad Officials in Their Purchase.

Electric lights and bicycles have reduced the average value of horses in the United States to 35 to 50 per cent. "In the Western range country the loss is felt the worst," for the surplus has formerly been sold in the West. Most of the horses are second-hand, or ordinary grades of horse, and there is a surplus everywhere. In cases of forced sale prices are sometimes ridiculously low.

At the Chicago stock yards, carloads of range horses of good grade were received by an Eastern road for shipment to an Eastern terminal. The Eastern road advanced the charges and forwarded the horses, and added the amount to its charges for transportation. Arrived in the East there was no market for the horses, and they were then forwarded to the West. The Eastern road was paid the entire purchase price, and was then compelled to charge $8000 to profit and cover the expense of the horses in business. "In the future it will advance no more charges on horses."

The telling of this story brought out a recent experience of a railroad official. He was in the West, and saw a good, small-sized riding horse for his boy, and found exactly what he wanted in a Kansas City horse market. He was about to buy the horse immediately, but was warned that he must buy it at auction. As a special favor, however, the auctioneer agreed to put up the horse selected to be bid on first, the other horses to follow in a hurry. As it was left to the auctioneer announced, "Lot No. 16," and the official's eyes sparkled as he noted the springing gait and graceful form of the horse. He was to buy it, and willingly have given $100 for the horse without a bid, but carelessly called out "Fifty dollars" as a starting price, and was jubilant when it was finally knocked in for $100.

He decided to lead his prize home immediately, and so announced himself to the barn manager. "What are you with the others?" asked that functionary. "There were six horses in lot 16 and the railroad official is thinking of starting a lively stable."

Too Valuable for Farming.

Some long leasehold property in Chesapeake, London, sold the other part at a price equal to $180 per square foot.

The new automatic gallows, which has been adopted by the Colorado State Penitentiary, is the last general assembly is considered a great improvement in some respects on that of Colorado. By reference to the accompanying cut the working of the machine may be better understood. Through the doorway can be seen the steel cage (G) in which the condemned man passes in his last days. As he is placed under the gallows, the platform under the man's feet is raised and the block (H) above is lowered to the gallows. The man is to be noticed by the man as he steps upon it. Immediately thereafter dentists will pinion the man's legs, place the cap over his head and adjust the noose.

The warden occupies a position directly in front of the condemned man. In this position he has a clear view of the prisoner, and also of the

The feeling against the scoundrel was so strong that he was executed by guillotine by the populace as he went from his hotel to the place of execution.

"Monsieur de Paris" is a thorough master of his gruesome calling, and says he never felt at all nervous on the scaffold except when taking part in the execution of Ravachol, the anarchist. M. Debiller has a fortune of about $100,000, and lives for his money as executioner does for his money. He lives quietly and is generally believed to be saving over one-half of his salary.

What's a Car-Load?

Nominally a car-load is 20,000 pounds. It is also 70 barrels of salt, 50 of whisky, 200 sacks of flour, 10 cords of wood, 18 tons of cattle, 50 of hogs, 80 to 100 head of sheep, 6,000 feet of boards, 17,000 feet of siding, 13,000 feet of lumber, 42 cords of angles, one-half ton of iron, 100 bushels of corn, 100 of less or hard lumber, or other large timbers, scantling and other lumber. It costs, 600 bushels of corn, 400 bushels of wheat, 850 of oats, 250 of flax seed, 250 of apples, 350 of peaches, 100 of pears, 40 of sweet potatoes and 400 of prunes.

Ghastly Find.

One of the contractors on the Ramarama Valley Road, Australia, had occasion to fell a totara tree, and in the hollow, or hollow, he discovered three skeletons, supposed to be a man, woman and child. One of the skulls had apparently a bullet hole through the forehead.

It is believed that the Democrats started the false report that Mr. Pullman had contributed $250,000 to the Republican campaign fund, for the purpose of trying to bluff the sugar trust into increasing its contribution to their campaign fund.

Present indications are that the Democrats will be about thirty votes shy of a majority of the next House.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family needs it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for.

A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment, before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat can be cured before it becomes serious. A very troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or so. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved, or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once, and you will never regret it. For sale by druggists.
