Our Next Governor Here To-Day.

Hon. Vivian M. Lewis, Republican candidate for Governor of New Jersey, will arrive on the Pennsy-train at 9.17 this morning, going directly to Bellevue Hall, where he will speak at 9.20,—remaining in town only a few minutes.

This evening there will be a great mass meeting in Atlantic City. A special train is scheduled to leave Hammonton, on the Reading, at 6 o'clock, Elwood at 6.08, Egg Harbor at 6.12, Pleasantville at 6.32, arriving at Atlantic 6.40.
Returning, leave Atlantic at 11.30, stopping at various stations.

The local telephone company, finding that their phones are being habitually used by neighbors for other than emergency calls, have decided to charge said phones five cents per call when used by any person other than the subscriber's family. It is not right for anyone to "steal a ride," either on a railroad or telephone wire.

Election Day next Tuesday,— from six in the morning to seven in the evening.

JURIST OAKS for Thanksgiving. There is always a good demand for our fruit cakes during the holidays, but many business men take their own and this year we are going to try to induce them to let us prove the cake is as good as the price. We can make just as good cake, at a price that will not exceed what you will pay for the materials. With every two pound cake at 25 c. point we will give you a set of ten hand-drawn Thanksgiving post cards.

Next in the Lecture Course.
The Rogers-Griley recital, next Wednesday evening, 9th, is one of the unique entertainments of the lyceum. Mr. Rogers is an exceptionally good harpist, he having played since boyhood, studied in Europe, and toured the land as a harpist in company with Melba, Nordica, and several other notable musicians.

Mr. Griley is a delightful entertainer, who brings the laugh out in an artistic way.
One of the best features of this combination is that they are original, and not imitators. They have composed words and music of a number of popular songs on the vaudeville stage to-day. "The Colored Locomotive" which was given last year by Minnie Marshall Smith, with the Lotus Glee Club, is one of Mr. Griley's productions.

The committee has made a proportionate price for season tickets for the remainder of the course.
There will be a total eclipse of the moon on Nov. 16th, which will be visible all over North and South America.

Topics at the Baptist Church to-morrow: morning, "The empty tomb."—Communion after sermon. Evening, "A cup-bearer's exploits."
The Water Commissioners cleaned out the cistern at the pumping station, finding no foreign matter—only a small deposit of clean sand.

Union Hall will be an attractive place next week, at the Civic Club "Sample Sale Fair," Nov. 10, 11, 12. Opens at two o'clock each afternoon.
Chas. Thurston has installed a hot water system for Mr. Templeton, at Blue Anchor, and is now putting in hot air heating for Mr. Scott, at Winslow.

All freemen, in both companies, are invited to meet the Civic Club ladies, in Union Hall, Nov. 8th, at 7 o'clock, to assist in decorating the hall for the Sample Sale.
"All Souls' Day" will be appropriately observed to-morrow by the Universalists, both in the church services at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., and in Sunday School at noon.

MUCK,—to 5 feet deep, at the Lake,—free for the taking. Consult J. N. ROGERS, Chm.
As is the custom of the "Republican"—at this time of year,—we offer to new subscribers the balance of this year free on receipt of one year's subscription. Do it now.

The revival meetings closed last Sunday evening. The capacious Presbyterian Church was filled, the talks uplifting, the music excellent. All feel that the meetings were a success.
H. C. Doughty, who went to Atlantic to recruit after typhoid fever and pleurisy, has suffered a relapse, and at last accounts was a very sick man,—though again rallying.

FOR SALE—20 shares Hammonton Trust Co. stock. B. T. Godfrey, Hammonton, N. J.
The Board of Education did not have a quorum on Tuesday evening, so called a meeting for last night. As we went to press, it looked as though the weather would compel another postponement.

To-morrow morning, Pastor Shaw of the M. R. Church, will speak on "How Christianity appeals." Jr. League at 3 o'clock, and Epworth at 6:45. At 7:30, sermon on "The world's greatest magnet." Good singing. All welcome.
We have been crowded in our work this week. Tens of thousands of stickers and circulars pertaining to the coming election, added to the usual orders for commercial and election printing, and work on the Republican, kept us hustling early and late.

Dr. Countermine, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, will preach Sunday morning on "Let the Redeemed of the Lord say so." In the evening he will begin a series of talks on the "Ten Great Religions,"—his first talk being on "Buddhism," which Augustus Comte calls "The Primordial Faith."

Republicans Meet Gardner.

Bellevue Hall was about half filled, Wednesday evening, at the second-Republican meeting of the campaign. The weather was very disagreeable.

James L. Feeley, of Washington, D.C., President of the Trades Union Publishing Co., and Chairman of the Legislative Committee, Central Labor Union, was the first speaker.

As a laboring man, a former Democrat, not affiliated with any political party, he made a good appeal for votes for Republican candidates, as being the true friends of men who labor.

Hon. John J. Gardner made the speech of the evening, devoting much time to matters of legislation in which he was an actor, contradicting some things with which he was charged, explaining his position on others.

In matters concerning the labor question and the subject of postal laws he is one of the best posted men in the United States; and one can readily see why certain interests have sentenced him to political death. We always took pleasure in hearing Mr. G., and this latest speech contained much that was educational. When criticizing public men, we should remember that they are in better position than ourselves to take a correct and more comprehensive view of the question at issue.

A frank talk like Mr. Gardner's should go far toward determining the vote of thinking men.

Resolutions of Respect.
Inasmuch as our Heavenly Father has seen fit, in his infinite wisdom, to call home our beloved brother, Chas. B. Matlack, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Washington Camp, No. 73, P. O. S. of A., do hereby extend to his bereaved wife and family our sincere sympathy in this their hour of sorrow, and commend them to the care and keeping of the dear Father who has promised "I will not leave thee nor forsake thee." And also be it

Resolved, That the death of our dear brother the camp has lost one of its beloved brothers, who was ever ready to defend its principles and advance its interests. As a mark of our sorrow we drape our charter for thirty days; and that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our camp, and a copy be sent to the wife of the deceased, and be published in the town papers. Com.

An excellent "Mothers' Meeting" was held Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. J. D. Countermine. There was a good attendance and much interest was manifested. After much discussion of plans of work, it was decided to meet the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month, at 2:30 p.m. The next meeting will be on Wednesday next, with Mrs. Countermine. All the mothers in Hammonton are invited.

RUBBER Prices have taken a rise; but owing to the fact that we purchased our stock when the price was very low, we are able to quote you a very reasonable price. Monfort's.

There was fun a-plenty on Halloween,—comic and horrible costumes made the street picturesque, and fun was rampant. The former-time spirit of mischief seemed to be absent, hence all could enjoy the sport.

FOILED

Captain Fleming walked along the deck of the Bella, his chief engineer; it is not customary for captains to associate with chief engineers, but in this case there was a bond between them. Captain Fleming and Andrew Fraser, both Scotch, shared the same nationality and their common taste for whisky united them.

The captain paused outside an office and spat contemptuously on the pavement.
"Yes, man, a man brings a man to. Here am I, a man whose captain first-class passenger ship, running a dirty coal tramp for a swindling Dutchman. It's a temperance lecture for you in itself, Andrew Fraser. Wait for me, I shall not be long."

He pushed open the door of the office.
"Mr. Schwartz in?" he asked a clerk.
The clerk nodded and motioned toward an inner office.
Captain Fleming pocketed his pride so far as to take his hat off as he knocked at the inner office door.
Come in, said a harsh voice.
Mr. Schwartz was a stout, elderly gentleman with a large, sleek smile that went ill with his harsh voice.

"Good morning, Captain," he said, and his smile seemed to expand.
"Stornum," grunted Captain Fleming.
"Cargo loaded?"
Fleming nodded.
"Well, you must clear by the very first tide. As you know, it's for Brunsbittel, on the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal. You must have it there in a week. You'll get further orders at Brunsbittel."

"Can't be done in the Bella. When she's down her best you can only knock nine knots out of her." Mr. Schwartz grinned. "But, my friend, you must make it."
"It isn't possible, I've drive her at full speed and risk a machinery breakdown."
Mr. Schwartz looked keenly at the captain.

"My friend, it is absolutely necessary that the cargo should be there.
There is, for quick delivery, a premium given."
"You just wish me to promise im-possibilities."

"See, I have been kind to you. I advanced you money when your wife went to the hospital. I have what do you call it—a bill of sale on your household 'gutter'—that is, your furniture. Get that cargo there in time and I'll let you have it. Let it be late, and I have to use your money, and I shall money collect."

"You mean to say you'll sell me up?"
"Let us not talk about that. Captain, I am just giving you an inducement to get that cargo to Brunsbittel in a week."
"I'll need to drive her then as she's never been driven yet, and if there's a fog on the Elbe as there usually is, I may be fog-bound ten miles from port. But I'll do it if you give me a written undertaking to cancel that bill of sale if I reach Brunsbittel within a week from tonight's tide."

"Surely my word, my friend."
"Let's have it in writing. You didn't lend me that money on my word, though any shipowner in Germany tells you that my word is his bond. I don't talk that way about you, Mr.
Schwartz."
"As you will, Captain; but it pains me that you do not in me put trust." Mr. Schwartz scribbled at his desk for a few minutes.

"Late that night the Bella was thrumbling down the Bristol Channel. Everything in her seemed to be straining; her engines thumped as if their work was too much for them. Captain Fleming paced up and down the deck a happy man. He was at ease in his own element. He had heard the chief engineer's verdict. The Bella could do ten knots in a choppy sea."

He glanced down the engine hatch and saw Fraser, amid fumes of oil and sparks of steam. He smiled as he heard the chief engineer's vivid language to the stokers.
"He's just magnificent in Andrew," thought the captain. "If she can keep this gait up we'll reach Brunsbittel in time yet."

Soon the chief engineer came up from below his face a reek of perspiration and grime. He gasped for breath as he stepped on deck.
The captain stepped eagerly toward him.

"I didn't think the old Bella had it in her, Mr. Fraser."
"She'll just stand a week of it with care," said the engineer; "but a month of it'd knock the stuff out of her. She makes better way loaded deep, but it's an awful strain."
"Aye, she's deep in the water. Fitteen thousand tons of steam coal, a tidy cargo for the old tank."

"And there's a premium, you were saying, if it's delivered in a week."
"I've thought Schwartz would risk a machinery breakdown and salvage besides double coal consumption if there wasn't money at the end of it all."

"Fifteen thousand tons of best-selected Welsh steam coal," said the engineer reflectively.
"It's for the German Government.
And at Brunsbittel there'll be orders waiting for us. Mark my words, Mr.
Fraser, it'll be Kiel that this cargo's meant for."

"There'll have been a lot of cargo of steam coal left Cardiff this last three months for German ports."
"Aye, they can't do without it. Not but that good Scotch coal isn't better, besides costing less money."

"Aye, nearly every ship that could be chartered has left this port for Emden, Wilhelmshaven, or Kiel.
There isn't one boat in Cardiff now that Bella's last, and her cargo must be at Brunsbittel in a week.
What'd ye make of that, Captain?"
The captain shook his head.

"I'll take us all our time to get it there, Mr. Fraser, without troubling about what the cargo's for."
The engineer looked the captain in the face.
"We're the last—they're pushing us to get there. To my mind that means that when the Bella arrives, they're ready."

"Ready for what?"
"Ready for us—ready for invasion.
That's what they're paying that rascal Schwartz a premium for delivery for.
He's had the chief hand in shipping steam coal to German ports. I'm not a betting man, Captain, but I'll lay you a month's pay Schwartz is in the know."

"I'd sooner run the 'blessed' ship ashore, snuffed the captain.
"That's a very little, good, Captain. You'd lose your certificate, Schwartz'd sell you up, and after the hundreds of thousands of tons of coal they've had the Bella's cargo will be making money for him."
"If I were as sure of it as you are,
Mr. Fraser, not a ton of that coal'd ever get to a German port, but I couldn't give information to Government."

"Haven't they got it already?
Haven't they all the diggers about the ports of coal hidden somewhere in some Government department. They'll be making an entry of the Bella's cargo some time next month. Tell Government 'ye can't make a bill
a week from tonight's tide."
"That the Admiralty?"
"They know as much as we can tell them, but they can't act without orders. It's a wonderful thing in the British Constitution—ye can't kill a man by your own road without passing an Act of Parliament."

than miss the few pounds wages Schwartz gives you, you'll go this dirty trip. Get back to your oil-rags, man, and don't dare to talk to me.
It makes me sad that ye bear a Scottish name."

The captain paused in amazement
at the engineer's shoulder and whispered a sentence or two in his ear.
The captain paused in amazement
at the engineer's shoulder and whispered a sentence or two in his ear.

"Man, I never asked pardon of officer of mine—yet not thinking it discipline—but forgive me, Andrew Fraser, for calling you a wretched Dutchman. Ye're a great man, and I don't grudge ye your property." A rope factory at Greenock! Ye ought to have a seat in Parliament and a deer forest if ye had your rights.
Come down below w' me. There's Bella's ye go back to those deacons of stokers ye're goin' to drink w' me.
Think of it! You, chief engineer, and me for two years, and I never guessed that ye were a great man, Captain."

"I'll just salute you, and ye'll be sailing your own yacht down the Clyde soon, and Andrew, and little will the want of a certificate trouble you."

"Well, I'll just have a drizzle w' you, Captain, to celebrate the occasion, and then I'll get back and see that those chaps are driving the old
tank for all she's worth."

For the rest of the voyage Captain Fleming became almost genial; now and then he persuaded Fraser to leave his beloved engines and his hated stokers to take a glass of whisky in the cabin; but scarcely had the men felt the relief of his absence than he was back again, spurring them on to greater efforts.

"She'll just out, but if she doesn't blow out a boiler-plate and if the connecting-rod doesn't snap—an I fear they're eyes on the channel to the sea in time. But what am I doing here instead of watching my engines?"
At last, on the morning of the seventh day, the Bella was off Cuxhaven at the Elbe's mouth, and toward Brunsbittel. They had ample time in hand, thanks to Fraser's exertions in the stokehold, and the chief engineer came on deck to smoke the pipe of peace.

Captain Fleming was pacing the deck watching the river traffic with an eye that missed nothing. Suddenly he signed to the engineer to come to him.
"See that torpedo-boat destroyer, he said, his finger pointing at the color. "He's ready," granted the engineer.

"And off the Schanzhorn Reef, where there're twelve fathoms soundings," continued the captain. "I counted four times he had the chief hand in shipping steam coal to German ports. I'm
in the know."

reached the canal level. The Captain, from his post of vantage on the bridge, glanced along the dead level of the Schlewig, his head assured to be bound within him. In the far distance he could see approaching vessels, evidently warships.

Then the inner lock gates opened and the Bella, escorted by the canal guard, passed the canal dues, and the Captain as the lock-gates closed behind him.

"Nonsense! I give orders here.
This cargo must be got to Kiel at once."
"Right," replied the Captain. "I'll hold ye responsible for the dues."

He rang the telegraph bell and then bellowed down the speaking-tube:
"Full speed ahead."
And then a wonderful thing happened. The Bella, instead of going "full speed ahead," went "full speed astern." "Crash she went through the inner lock-gate, gathering way as she passed. She sped along the lock, which had not begun to empty, and with one tremendous animal sweep away the outer lock gates and leapt twenty feet into the basin below, piling herself up a shattered wreck at the entrance from the Elbe.

A few minutes later, as the Captain Fleming was clinging with his unbroken arm to a twisted stanchion, the chief engineer emerged from a pile of debris and crept towards him.
"Where's the lieutenant?" whispered the engineer, as he mopped the blood from his head.

"He jumped for shore as we went for the outer gate," said the Captain, grimacing broadly.

"See, Captain, the lock's smashed to pieces and the canal's emptying fast. That's not all of it, though. Before it's ready again, and till they've repaired it the German fleet's divided in half. We've done a good stroke of work for Scotland, says an English lad, to-day."

"There's that's not all of it, though," said the Captain. "There were three warships in sight, and perhaps more further on. Why they're tumbled on their beam-ends in an empty canal I don't know. I'll repair the canal work, but I'll get back and see
tank for all she's worth."

Owing to the high price of cotton some German textile experts have been that might be used as a substitute for cotton. One of the latest in this line is the fiber contained in the seeds of the cotton, or silk cotton tree of the tropics. In its natural state this fiber cannot be spun owing to its extreme brittleness, but it is reported that Professor Guldberg of Chemnitz has found a secret of treating it to make it spin-able, and the yarn is described as

The fiber has the advantage of being considerably cheaper than cotton, but its use is hampered by the fact that the spinning of it is a most difficult task.

Paragraphe has been extensively published in the daily papers dealing with the researches of M. Lohel, of Paris, on the recurrence of poisonous principles in eggs. It seems that the yolk of the eggs of jacks, ducks and turkeys contain a poison which, if injected into the yolk or otherwise introduced into the animal body, causes death from its effects on the nervous system. The white of the turkey's egg also contains a toxic substance.
Why eggs are so poisonous as well as the yolk is not explained, but it may be explained on the ground that the action of digestion alters the composition of the egg or at least modifies it so that its effects are avoided. Indeed, it is easy to see that eggs that have been cooked are not poisonous.
The "double" term is the action of digestion on eggs. It is the action of the liver on such foods which robs them of their power to do harm.

WILSON DEAL NOW ADMITTED

Richard V. Lindabury, Trust Lawyer, Tells How Nomination Was Brought About.

DALRYMPLE CORROBORATED.

Newark, Oct. 21.—Facts about the deal made between Woodrow Wilson and certain Republicans in the special interests by which the president of Princeton university was induced to accept the Democratic nomination for governor of New Jersey are gradually becoming known, though they are still clouded with details.
Richard V. Lindabury, who presided at the Wilson meeting in Somerville last Wednesday night, virtually admitted the truth of the statement made by Dalrymple in his editorial. Dalrymple, chairman of the Essex county Republican committee, in an address to the voters of the Eighth congressional district in Newark.

Mr. Lindabury declared that he had made no agreement with any one or that any promises had been made to him. Dr. Wilson posed as the symbolic choice of the Democrats of the state assembly in convention at Trenton. He had been the subject of a patriotic and patriotic subordinated to the desire of the commonwealth. Dr. Wilson asserted emphatically that he had not agreed to become a candidate on the request of a few men, as Chairman Dalrymple had stated.

This is what Mr. Dalrymple said in part:
"The Democratic candidate means what he says. That it is safe to say that he is the only person in the state of New Jersey who does not know who brought about his nomination, and it is
I think important that he should be enlightened at this time."
"These are the facts: Early in July
of this year there was a conference at the summer home of Dr. Wilson at Lyme, Conn. There were present at that conference a number of gentlemen who represent some of the largest special interests in this country. I know who I am talking about, because my information comes from a gentleman who was present at that conference."

The Democratic nomination for governor of New Jersey was offered to Dr. Wilson at that time, and he at first declined to consider the matter.
These gentlemen then informed Dr.
Wilson that if he would become the Democratic candidate for governor of New Jersey they would present and represent his interests in other parts of the country—would not only
get behind his candidacy for governor, but would also work for his nomination as the Democratic candidate for vice president in 1912 and that in the event of the defeat of Governor Harman in Ohio this fall they would stand behind him and work for his nomination in the high office of president of the United States. Dr. Wilson thereupon accepted the terms offered
and permitted his name to be used."

How Offer Was Made.
Dr. Wilson contented himself with saying in answer to this that there was no use in the statement. New York to Richard V. Lindabury, a leading legal representative in New Jersey of some "special interests" Dr.
Wilson professes to be fighting.
Mr. Lindabury said at Somerville:
"I was one of a party of gentlemen, Democrats, to wait upon the man who
has since become the candidate and
who reported to him that there was a likelihood in this state for a great service to be performed."

"We represented to him that if he would become the candidate we believed that he would be the Moses
that would lead the people to the land promised by our forefathers in our constitution."

"We said to him, if you will allow
your name to be presented to the people it will be with the understanding that you are under no promise or obligation to any one or any special interest; that your whole undertaking will be to serve the people of this state; a whole according to the best of your ability as God shall guide you in the work."

The gentlemen said that upon that understanding he would take the matter into consideration and a few weeks thereafter announced to us that if the query thinking people of the party would call him to the candidacy of the office of governor he would not feel that he had a right to refuse it.
He it was that we got our candidate."

Name the Gentlemen.
Now will Dr. Wilson, Mr. Lindabury or some other of the self appointed committee of "gentlemen" Democrats give the names of those present at that conference? Was former Senator James Smith, Jr., there? Was Robert Davis, the boss of Hudson county, there? Was Colonel George Harvey, the representative of J. Pierpont Morgan, there? Was Jim Nugent, the chairman of the Democratic state committee, there? And if any one of these men was there, was his name mentioned? Dr. Wilson, who had never run for office before, other than that there was a chance of his being elected?

Mr. Lindabury, the trust lawyer, the man who fights the battles in the courts of this state for all great industrial and the whole kind of allied "special interests," corroborates Mr.
Dalrymple's statement that at the first conference Dr. Wilson declined to accept the doubtful proposal. It took two weeks to make up his mind.
From an authentic source it is learned that Dr. Wilson was offered support for a higher office than that of governor of New Jersey if he would consent to lend his name to the Democratic party.

OUT FOR LEWIS ON THE STUMP

High Class Orators Supporting the Republican Candidate.

Every Section of the State Represented.

Vivian M. Lewis, the Republican candidate for governor, cannot complain that the Republicans of the state who are capable of making political speeches have not rallied to his support. On the contrary, they have done so to a man, and at the headquarters of the Republican state committee it was stated that the speakers in committee had a wealth of good material.
It is hardly necessary to suggest to those acquainted with New Jersey politics that the bright particular stars as speakers in the Republican party are such men as John W. Gifford, Edward C. Warren, Edmund Wilson, Governor Fort and Franklin Murphy.

Besides these men there are a great many other men, mostly younger, some of whom give promise of taking front rank in oratorical honors in the years to come. James McCarthy, assistant attorney general of the county of Hudson county, who made a hit at the Republican state convention, is very much in demand and has placed all his time at the disposal of the state committee for the campaign. McCarthy makes a rousing speech and always awakens enthusiasm. Alfred Barber of Trenton, while lacking some of the graces of the finished orator, makes a speech that by its earnestness and sincerity is most convincing and always holds the audience.

Prosecutor Corsey of Mercer county is also in high favor as a speaker.
From what they have been unable to recall, they have been unable to recall a single vulnerable point in Mr.
Lewis' record and perforce confine themselves to attacks upon supposed party influence to which he might be subjected. They will have to get something more tangible to shout at
and a better brand of ammunition before they can expect to do any damage to a cause and a candidate trusted by the people.

Of course none of the Democratic speakers in this campaign care to have Mr. Katzenbach's eulogy of Mr. Lewis recalled, but they cannot get away from it. They have been unable to recall a single vulnerable point in Mr.
Lewis' record and perforce confine
subjected. They will have to get
and a better brand of ammunition be-
by the people.

How many people know, and of those who know how many remember that the chairman of the Democratic state convention that nominated Woodrow Wilson for governor voted for the infamous "coal combine" while he was a member of the New Jersey house of assembly?

This combine became so notorious as an outrage upon the people of the state that only a very few of the members who voted for it were ever returned to the legislature. The chairman of the last Democratic state convention was not returned.

Leon Abbott, whose boldness as a Democratic partisan has never been equaled by any governor of the state, did not dare sign the "coal combine bill." It was the only single measure passed by the legislature that he refused to sign.

And yet Woodrow Wilson has said that the Democratic party has been reorganized. The same old leaders are still in control of the Democratic party. Without their consent he never could have been nominated. With their consent Frank Katzenbach, Jr., of Mercer county and Senator George Eller of Middlesex were denied the nomination by the steam roller process, and the attempt by force was made to elect their enemies.

If Wilson would stop to think when he's talking voters would have a chance to know whether he believes he is running for president or governor.
"The Democratic candidate's open challenge for a debate on political influences resolves itself into a debate as to his wisdom in making the challenge."

Well, Woodrow, you're not the only Don Quixote in the field. There are others just as gallant in wisdom and fare. Golden, Middletown.

This is what Mr. Dalrymple said in
part:
"The Democratic candidate means
what he says. That it is safe to say that he is the only person in the state
brought about his nomination, and it is
I think important that he should
be enlightened at this time."

"These are the facts: Early in July
at the summer home of Dr. Wilson at Lyme, Conn. There were present at
that conference a number of gentlemen
know who I am talking about, be-
conference."

The Democratic nomination for governor of New Jersey was offered
first declined to consider the matter.
These gentlemen then informed Dr.
Wilson that if he would become the Democratic candidate for governor of
get behind his candidacy for governor,
but would also work for his nomina-
vice president in 1912 and that in the event of the defeat of Governor Har-
man in Ohio this fall they would
nomination in the high office of president of the United States. Dr. Wilson
and permitted his name to be used."

How Offer Was Made.
Dr. Wilson contented himself with
leading legal representative in New Jersey of some "special interests" Dr.
Wilson professes to be fighting.
Mr. Lindabury said at Somerville:
"I was one of a party of gentlemen,
service to be performed."

lieved that he would be the Moses
that would lead the people to the land
constitution."

"We said to him, if you will allow
that you are under no promise or obligation to any one or any special interest; that your whole undertaking
in the work."

The gentlemen said that upon that
ter into consideration and a few weeks

The Junior Class of Hammononton High School gave a party last Saturday evening, at the home of Miss Helen Burgess. The room was gorgeously decorated with small blue and gold pennants and crepe paper. Those present were, Misses Elizabeth Hoyle, Helen Burgess, Olive Small, Leslie Combe, Elsie White, Lillian Measley, Essie Nicolai, Katharine Eckhardt, Pauline Phillips; Messrs. Warren Wood, Carson Adams, Milton Andrews, Carl Austin, Paul Imhoff, Lester Spyes, Caspar Piez, Byron Davis, Chas. Mawson, Harry Davenport.
 All spent an enjoyable evening, with games and music.
 Here's to the hostess, young and fair;
 A rousing time does each guest declare.

At the men's meeting, Sunday afternoon, it was decided to take preliminary steps to organize a Young Men's Christian Association in Hammononton. A meeting may be called in a few days, at which time details will be given by a State organizer.

The woods were full of men and guns last Wednesday, the first day for deer. Swain T. Godfrey, our popular young druggist, was one of a Hammononton party, and shot a fine buck, on Wednesday, which weighed nearly one hundred and fifty pounds.

J. S. Mart, with a force of men, is engaged in that "lake cleaning" job. They found that to clean out muck to the sandy bottom would cost several times the $500 at their disposal, and will confine their labor to removing the stumps and snags, of which there are many.

The fire-bell rang at 7:45 Monday morning, but the firemen found nothing to do. R. G. Scudder's automobile was in flames—caused by a leak or overflow of gasoline, and someone sent in an alarm; but Mr. S. had a hydrant with hose attached, and soon the fire was extinguished.
