ELECTION DAY.

The weather was not what we call pleasant,—rain fell and the sun shone, alternately, though the latter phase predominated.

Hammonton polled a large vote, 772 in all, probably because there were so many candidates, and so many stickers distributed. At this office we printed nearly thirty thousand of those little gummed slips, that make it so easy for a voter to cut his ticket.

The election boards completed their counting about four o'clock Wednesday morning, but did not finish their work until about eight. Before five o'clock we had the main figures posted in front of this office.

The excitement is over; and though there were some surprises, we have little to regret in the results. The people have spoken, and their word should be law. Now, let each man elected do his duty well, and earn the commendation of every right-thinking person.

HALLOWE'EN.

We never saw so much fun on Hallowe'en as we did last Saturday night. As though by common consent, young and old were masked, with costumes of all sorts,—clowns, ghosts, negroes, tramps, etc., etc., crowds of them, paraded the streets and visited their friends. Of course it was a good-natured crowd, and not one case of disorder did we see or hear about.

Happily, the spirit of mischief seemed absent. Gates and signs remained in their places, no bells were rung, and noises were not such as to disturb anyone.

Just why this custom was originated is an unanswered question; but it is as old as history, and surely no one can object to giving way, once a year, to the spirit of nonsensical fun which is present in all. Even those who took no part (and the streets were lined with them) Saturday night, took a little time off and laughed heartily at the ludicrous costumes and antics of the maskers.

We noticed several continuing the fun on Monday evening.

For the Children

The Lion's Country.

Talking of lions and hyenas, the editor is reminded of something that he saw in the lion-house one day at feeding time. The head keeper was going around the garden with his calling, his attention to the traits of the different animals, and at feeding time particularly to the difference between a lion and a hyena. The animals always knew when the keeper is coming with their meat, and they show great excitement, leaping from one end of their cage to the other and roaring with eagerness for the expected feast. In one cage was a fine lion with his mate, both of whom were pacing excitedly from end to end, waiting for the meat to be thrown in. When the keeper appeared before the cage the lioness crouched ready to receive the meat, on which she pounced with a ferocious growl, but the lion, with a courtesy worthy of his reputation as a king of beasts, paid no attention to the meat, but merely turned to his mate, and continued his pacing up and down the cage until the keeper threw his piece in. This may seem almost incredible, but the editor saw it, and vouches for its truth. Then the head keeper led to the cage of the hyenas, with the remark: "No, the lion is a gentleman, come and see a real brute." There were two hyenas male and female, and when the first piece of meat was thrown, they ripped and tore and snarled at each other with savage fury for possession of it. The male got it, and when the female had received hers, there was a scene of ferocious gluttony that can hardly be described. They tore the meat apart in frantic haste, gulping it in great pieces and all the time growling and growling at each other like the disgusting beasts they are, each trying to swallow the meat first so that he, or she, might rush over and fight for the second piece. And that is exactly what happened, as soon as the male had gulped his share, he made savage attack on his mate for her portion, and the keeper had to separate them with his iron bar.

Her New Umbrella.

Oh, Ella! With her first umbrella! She walked around like any queen; she looked so proud and dignified. And never little girl more gay.

Dear Ella!

Back a wee umbrella! One day upon the market-place, I met her; dripping wet her curls; She looked, despite her sunny face, The most forlorn of little girls.

Why, Ella,

"Where's your new umbrella?" I said. "The storm has drenched you hair!" Just see your frock! Just see your hat! And what is this hue with care? A broom, a saddle, or a cat?

Oh, Ella,

"This is fine umbrella! She looked at me and shyly spoke, The raindrops pelted on her yet; 'I have it here, beneath my cloak. Because, you see, it might get wet!'"

Optical Illusion.

A curious optical illusion is to be seen in the accompanying figure. A the places where the white strips sep-

The Spider that Gave A-Hunting.

Do you know that there is a kind of spider which spins a web? It is called the "hunting spider," and its favorite hunting ground is a sunny wall because there the flies are most likely to congregate, and flies are a duty of which he is particularly fond.

You Bet.

"Don't you have considerable trouble in keeping your wife dressed in the height of fashion?" "Not at all. The trouble would come if I didn't."

until it is actually in the enemy's clutches.

Little Help.

Yob see, big sister Kathie was going to Germany to study music. She was going on a great ocean liner, which means a big ship. Kathie kissed her good-by, and every one called out, "Bon voyage!" as they hurried into the little tug that was waiting for them.

It was a funny little boat, all brown and weather-beaten, and it had its own little crew, in a word, and things just as if it had the teeth of a shark.

Teddy laughed. "What's it for?" he asked, eagerly. "Is it 'cause they all leak?"

Cousin Dick smiled. "You wait and see," he said, and just at that moment the great liner backed away from the wharf, and the three little tugs went puffing along beside her. Two little tugs on one side and one little tug on the other, and they turned that big boat "right about face," and then they all went sailing down the harbor together.

"As if it hadn't been for their tugs, Kathie couldn't have gone to Europe, could she?" said Teddy, as the three little boats went steaming back to Boston again.

"They show us how valuable the little boats are," said mother.—Youth's Companion.

The Boy Who Loved.

How people say Robert Burdette, do trust. A truthful boy! We never worry about him when he is out of our sight. We never say, "I wonder where he is; I wish I knew what he is doing; I wonder whom he is with; I wonder why he doesn't come home." Nothing of the sort. We know he is all right, and that when he comes home we will know all about it, and, God be true, we don't have to ask him where he is going and how long he will be gone every time he leaves the house. We don't have to call him back and make him "holerly promise" the same thing over and over two or three times. When he says, "Yes, I will," or "No, I won't," just once, that settles it.

What Men Are Made Of.

A bright boy made quite an apt answer to a cross-grained old man who had outgrown his love for children. "Get out of my way," were his usual words. "But are you good for?" The boy looked up in his face with a bright smile, and said, very simply, "They make men out of such things as we are." The boy came off with flying colors. It is a pity that such old men should ever be made out of the good stuff in children.

REAL SEAMANSHIP

Mr. Bankson was telling a story of maritime adventure. As he advanced in it, says a writer in the New York Sun, his fellow club members gathered round him and acquired delicious thrills. A storm was evidently about to break. He had told how bands of cloud appeared in the west and massed themselves there, and he went on:

"It was no time to be at sea. I knew that at high water there would be trouble."

"The light breeze failed. I had all sail set, but could not keep sternway. I simply drifted with the tide. The surface of the sea was like glass."

"A white fringe of clouds rapidly advanced, and hid the tall linden bank below them. I knew what that meant. I recognized my ground-sail, keeping an eye on the blue on the storm coming up against the direction in which the wind had blown before the calm fell."

"Suddenly a ripple appeared on the water, and advanced like an express vessel up to windward dropped as if the hazy clouds had been cut. Men hurried about the decks."

"A yellow ruffle appeared upon the water, and advanced like an express train. Beyond it was a solid wall of rats, split by streaks of lightning, and there was real fear of peril of thunder."

"I tried to lead the craft so that she would take the head on, but it was no use. The ripple on the water, following closely the yellow foam, was upon me."

"What was I to do? I could let sail go on the run, drop the anchor, pay out all my line and hang on. But what if the gale should be so swift that it would sweep me away? I would have to play my anchor and sail with bare poles until it blew itself out."

"While I went over in my mind it came to the instant when something had to be done."

"Bankson paused at this thrilling moment."

"Well," demanded a listener, "what did you do?"

"I got out," said Bankson. "Without another moment's hesitation I stepped overboard, took the canvas under my arm, and walked ashore just in time to escape a wetting above the knees."

Some little while ago a popular writer visited a jail in order to take notes for a magazine article on prison life. On returning home he described the horrors he had seen, and his description made a deep impression on the mind of his little daughter Mary. The writer and his offspring, a week later, were in a train together, which stopped at a station near a gloomy building. A man asked:

"What place is that?"

"The county jail," another answered promptly.

Whereupon Mary subarranged her father and aroused the suspicion of the other occupants of the carriage by asking:

"Is that the jail you were in, father?"

There is no joy which can perdition, being pushed further and over the horizon of ignorance, and of surpassing the consciousness of feeling farther away; and the joy of progress, of making headway in the world, of not only getting on, but also of getting up in the world, is very great.

Turkish Farriers.

Turkish horseflesh are simply a first plate of iron with a hole in the middle.

In his volume of "Personal Adventures,"

Col. J. P. Robertson describes the extraordinary method of preparing the horse to be shod:

"The farrier takes a good long rope,

double it, and loops a loop at the end to about the size of a good large horse-collar. This is put over the horse's head after the manner of a horse collar,

the knot resting on the horse's chest.

"Then the two ends of rope are brought between his legs; each rope is taken by a man, is pitched on to the forelocks of his hind legs and brought through the loop in front; then by a hard, steady pull the hind legs are drawn up to the fore legs, and the horse falls heavily on his side.

"All four feet are then tied together

by the forelocks, the horse is propped up on his back, and the farrier sits quietly down beside him, takes off all the old shoes and puts on new. When the work is finished the horse is un-lashed and allowed to get up.

But this does not travel so far as Europe to find the credulous of the incredible. Only a few years ago there died in Kansas a man who was believed by many of the vicinity to be the Wilkes

Booth. A marked physical resemblance to the assassin caused so much amazing to a well-known clergyman that he took pains to demonstrate by proofs of his birth and education that he was not Wilkes Booth.

A SQUARE DEAL!

A Recent Case Proves that Prudential Policyholders Get It.

A very important matter has come to notice recently in reference to a claim paid on the life of William A. Hook, who was insured in the Prudential Insurance Co. The gentleman had carried a policy in the Prudential about two years, premiums being paid by the insured and his father, but policy was returned to the insured, and the Prudential Insurance Co. was informed that they had a claim on the deceased's Twenty Year Endowment policy. Dilemma was made, but the policy had been lost or destroyed, and the Hook family would not have known that there was any value to the policy if it had not been for the information they received from Supt. Leonard, who has charge of the Company's business in this vicinity. This is an important matter to the public and to over 20,000 policyholders which the Prudential Insurance Co. has established in Atlantic City, Atlantic City, N. J. The Prudential Insurance Co. of Newark, N. J., made the largest increase in insurance in force of any company in the world for 1909, and they deserve the honor of being not only the greatest life insurance company in America, but in the entire world.

SPORTSMAN and TELEPHONE

EVERY TIME a man wants to get away from all connection with the busy world, the telephone is an important helper.

The Local service is useful in arranging his affairs at home, and the Long Distance Service of the Bell System helps him to decide where to go and what to take.

By means of his Bell Telephone he can find out whether the fish are biting or the birds are flying, and whether guides or horses can be secured.

After he has been out awhile, if he wants to get word from the city, the nearest Bell Telephone is a friend in need.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

"The people of this land having by long sanction and practice set apart toward the close of each passing year a day on which to cease from their labors and assemble for the purpose of giving praise to Him who is the author of the blessings they have enjoyed, it is my duty as Chief Executive to designate at this time the day for the fulfillment of this devout purpose.

"Our country has been signally favored in so many ways. The round of the seasons has brought rich harvests. Our industries have thriven far beyond our needs, the productions of our labor are daily finding enlarged markets abroad. We have been free from the curses of pestilence, of famine, and of war.

"Our national councils have furthered the cause of peace in other lands and the spirit of benevolence has brought us into closer touch with other peoples, to the strengthening of the bonds of fellowship and good will that link us to our comrades in the universal brotherhood of nations. Strong in the sense of our own right and inspired by a strong sense of the rights of others, we live in peace and harmony with the world.

"Rich in the priceless possessions and abundant resources, wherewith the unstinted bounty of God has endowed us, we are unselfishly glad when other peoples pass onward to prosperity and peace. That the great privileges we may enjoy may continue, and that each coming year may see our country more firmly established in the regard and esteem of our fellow nations, is the prayer that should arise in every thankful heart.

"Wherefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, designate Thursday, the 30th of November, next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly call upon my countrymen and upon all that dwell under the flag of our beloved country, then to meet in their accustomed places of worship to join in offering praise to Almighty God and devout thanks for the loving mercies he has given to us.

"In witness thereof, I have here-to set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Chicago this 30th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eleven, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty sixth.

"By the President:
P. C. KNOX,
Secretary of State."

Fatal Gunning Accident.

Wednesday was the first day for killing deer; and in our county two men were killed in the woods, and at least one badly wounded.

As near as we can learn from various sources, Messrs. Conrad Steelman, Thomas J. Youse, and Moses Jarvis, all of Pleasantville, with others, were awaiting daylight, but were halted by a volley of buckshot fired from an ambush. Messrs. Steelman and Youse were almost instantly killed, and Jarvis wounded in the thigh, all by one charge of buckshot.

Charles Norcross, of Iowa, says that he was in the woods, not far from Weymouth, saw something moving in the semi-darkness, that he watched until sure that it was a deer, then fired. When he saw the result of his shot he was nearly frantic, threw away gun and shells, and started homeward. About noon he was arrested by Sheriff Johnson, and held without bail.

Sunday at the Presbyterian.

The Presbyterian jubilee closed on Sunday, with a full house both morning and evening. There were no services in the Methodist, Baptist and Universalist Churches, in the morning, and all attended the sister church to assist in the anniversary celebration.

The services during the previous week were intensely spiritual and hearty, and according to printed program. Many former members and their families were present, making the occasion so much more enjoyable.

We congratulate the Church on their prosperity, and on having so earnest a pastor; and we wish them a continuance of the divine blessing.

Ladies of the candy committee, Civic Club, will please meet at Mrs. Harry Little's on Monday eve, the 6th.

Joseph S. Wills and Mabel Crane were married, at DaCosta, on Wednesday, Nov. 1, at two o'clock, by Rev. W. L. Shaw. After a short wedding trip they will reside at DaCosta.
