REMINISCENCES.

Some years ago, the old Presbyterian Church stood at the corner of Bellevue Avenue and Liberty Street. Most of the churches were then located on upper Bellevue.

On the opposite side of Liberty St., a high hedge extended around Mr. A. G. Clark's place, now the home of Mr. Woodley.

Hallowe'en pranks were as common then as now, but they were more often played the night before the Fourth of July, and seldom did the Fourth dawn without being ushered in by the ring of the church bell (there was but one in town then) and other harmless pranks.

One year, Mont. P. and Rob. M. decided to attend to the ringing of the bell, and accordingly one of them volunteered to borrow a ladder of Mr. Bassett, who kept several in the shed alongside of the old sorrel horse's stable. It never leaked out who did the borrowing, but as both worked at the nursery, each knew the premises well, and it was decided wise not to ask Mr. B.'s permission. Whichever one it was, forgot that the sorrel was a biter, and though he got the ladder, he carried the marks of the horse's teeth on his shoulder for some days afterward.

The ladder was placed against the church, and the boys mounted to the roof, where they had barely succeeded in fastening a cord to the clapper when a head-and-shoulders appeared in sight over the eaves. Thinking they were trapped, the boys were somewhat startled, but recovering, one of them pointed a dangerous-looking weapon (a hammer or jack-knife) at the intruder, and ordered him to descend. The new comer, who the boys were afterwards told was Sumner G., and on a like errand, also thought he had run into a watchman, and lost no time in getting out of sight.

The rope was then carried across the street, the ladder removed, and the boys quietly awaited the midnight hour. It was not long before a couple of the church deacons appeared on the scene, and calmly sat down on the front steps, determined that this year, at least, the bell should not ring in the glorious Fourth.

Twelve o'clock drew near, and the deacons were doubtless congratulating themselves that they had for once outwitted the boys, when, without warning, the bell above their heads began to ring lustily. A thorough search was made, but all doors and windows were secure, and there was apparently no one in the belfry. It was too dark to see the rope, and the bell continued to ring merrily, try as they would, the mysterious bell-ringers could not be found.

While the boys, of course, never owned up to the prank, when Mr. Bassett the next day requested them to replace two lost ladder rounds, they hunted them up and returned them without question or protest.

The New England Club.

The Club met in Firemen's Hall on Thursday evening, with a full house. While many members were absent, forty were there to enjoy a good and interesting programme.

With music by Mrs. Haines, reading by Miss Hall, and recitations, an hour was consumed, followed by diversions by the younger members. The already large membership was augmented by five bright young ladies placing their names on the roll book.

As a place of intellectual entertainment and innocent amusement, the N. E. Club meetings are not excelled. Expenses are trifling, no fuss, and no feathers. All strive to live up to the motto of the Club.

The next meeting will be held in Firemen's Hall, Dec. 14th. The names of those who are to provide the entertainment are a sufficient guarantee for something excellent in the way of a programme.

Book News The Reviews

F. Hopkinson Smith's new book, "The Wood Fire in No. 8," is said to resemble "outwardly and inwardly" the "Colonel Carter's Christmas."

Miss Clara Driscoll, who wrote "The Girl from La Gloria," is famous in the Southwest through her patriotic purchase of the historic Alamo property, which she bought to preserve from demolition and which the State of Texas, now alive to the value of the property as a historical memorial, is purchasing from her. The sum total was $95,000.

After "Sherlock Holmes" and "Raffles" comes "McAllister," the good-humored but blundering clubman, whom Arthur Train makes the hero of some entertaining complications in "McAllister and His Double," stories which come of the more intelligent class of criminals, and partly, at least, brought to light in the course of Mr. Train's career as assistant district attorney in New York.

B. W. Hornung, creator of "Raffles," has put the finishing touches to the final series of "Raffles" stories in a short story to appear in the next issue of the "Punch," and all of them are short stories for good and all. It is alleged that he will not be seen again, like the fabled phoenix, at the demand of a clamorous public. Mr. Hornung's work has, until recently, attracted more attention in America than it has in England.

Mr. Stan Kemp, author of "Pittsburgh," is better known in "Pittsburgh" as Rev. Matthew Stanley Kemp, a Quaker, where he has been for several years. The plot of "Pittsburgh" is a story of a Quaker, a region of the author knows well, his father, a miner, having been born in that country. At the age of 10 the senior Kemp took his son to England and he has since been in the early years of his life in the touches of local color, a broad Cornish dialect, and a liberal sprinkling of Cornish legends and folk-lore.

It is said that Henry W. Boynton's biography of Bret Harte and his literary career, recently published as a volume in an English biographical series, does not please certain reviewers because of its moderate tone. Mr. Boynton is not much given to panegyric, literary judgment is much more than it is easy to account for the appreciation of Mr. Harte as one of the British imagination, both crude and extravagant. Harte's characters are not of the best thing, there was a great deal of reason in the English of this author, although his good literary artist in his final stage.

English reviewers seem to cherish peculiar ideas regarding American literature. When they are gracious enough to admit that we have a literature, now here is Clement Scott, a London critic of reputation, who asserts that George W. Cable, in "Madame Delphine" and "Old Creole Days," has probably made more permanent contributions to literature than any living American writer of letters. While Howells and Mark Twain and Henry James, not to speak of Joel Chandler Harris and James Watson, are still alive, living their lives by many who will "be glad to differ" with the distinguished English critic.

All the World to Him.
"Harry," said the wealthy lawyer, who had had him a roll of the long green, "do you remember how you used to tell me that I was all the world to you?"
"Yes," replied the husband, "and I meant it, too. Do you doubt it?"
"Not a bit, not a bit! But, Harry, can't you get over the idea that the world owes you a living?"—Detroit Tribune.

All the Bad Ones Said.
"I want a dozen eggs," said the young housekeeper. "If you're sure they're fresh, I'll take them."
"Oh, positive, ma'am," replied the dealer. "We haven't any other kind today. You see, there was a 'Huckle Tom's' (Huckle Tom's) in the opera house, next door, last night."—Philadelphia Press.

Reason for His Absence.
When the trustee called to see why an Indianapolis small boy had been absent from school, he received, in reply to the query, that the boy had been at the back, and as I don't like to ask the neighbors I have to keep Johnnie at home to faint in my bed."

There may be as good fish in the sea as ever were caught, but how many are they at any one time?

GOOD Short Stories

A young member of Parliament was addressing a meeting at which there was a considerable rowdy element present. Like the other speakers, he was frequently interrupted, until, losing patience, he called for silence, saying: "Don't let me see any more of this. Very well, we will let you go on bragging, sir," said the ring-leader, and the honorable member was left without a reply.

The other day Secretary Hitchcock referred the following letter, addressed to him, to the Pension Bureau, for consideration: "Before the war there was no man who could throw me down or made me bolder but now a good deal of men could blow me over and I am so nervous I bolder when I hear a hog squeal in a killing time or the first of my old home grown with the wind. I am playing no baby act Mr. Secretary but if you are spreading $20 bills out in the sea to dry you will let me have a few as any other old soldier. I am to be paid for my nervousness."

At Newport last summer George J. Gould went aboard a battleship which was surrounded by a multitude of little boats, filled with curious spectators bent on seeing all that could be seen. There was a young officer on board who must have set down astidiously on a fresh-painted bench or something of that kind, says Mr. Gould, "for his white duck trousers were very dirty. He, though, was not aware of it. He, among the ladies gallantly, and his bow-tie was as green as grass. Some one on one of the little boats low in a stentorian Irish voice shouted: 'Och, murther, wouldn't yer ducks be better for a shavin?'"

In his monologue at the Orpheum recently, James J. Corbett, told of an incident that occurred at the Coney Island Club when he fought "Al" Jeffries for the first time. "The fighters had to pass through the crowd on the way to the dressing room. One of the touches of local color, a broad Cornish dialect, and a liberal sprinkling of Cornish legends and folk-lore."

Lord Charles Beresford was once breakfasting in a small country hotel and accidentally upset a cup of coffee over the clean white tablecloth, which the good lady of the house had dug up from her most sacred linen cupboard for the benefit of the British admiral. Unfortunately, the upsetting of the steaming coffee also upset the good lady's temper, and she soundly rapped the admiral for his "blunder."

QUEER STORIES

Wholes from 100 to 400 years old are sometimes met with. The age is ascertained by the size and number of layers of the whalebone, which increase yearly.

Many curious instances of old laws may still be found in England. In Chester the man who fails to raise his hat when a funeral is passing becomes liable by an old law to be taken before a magistrate and imprisoned.

The visiting card is not an exclusive institution of polite society. The Countess of Devonshire has a visiting card which is a piece of wood decorated with straw.

At the house of the Great St. Bernard a dog who had spent his life, if not in nursing, at least in succoring the sick, died "on duty." This was Barry, one of the oldest and most useful of the noble canine band which seeks out the lost traveler on the Alps. "Barry's" fame was world-wide, and letters of sympathy have been received by the Prior from all countries.

Young Rory O'More courted Kathleen long—

He was as the hawk, and she soft as the dove; He wooed in his heart pretty Kathleen to please.

"Now, Rory, be aisy," sweet Kathleen would cry, "Be sooth on her lip, but a smile in her eye."

"With your tricks, I don't know, in Faith you teased me, I've put on my cloak inside out."

"Och, jewel," says Rory, "that same is the way You've charmed my heart for this many a day."

"And 'tis blessed that I am, and why not, For I half gave a promise to soothering Miley."

"Faith," says Rory, "I'd rather love you, 'Now, Rory, I'll cry if you don't let me go."

"Och, jewel," says Rory, "that same is the way You've charmed my heart for this many a day."

ANOTHER "FISH STORY."

Havens and Norton had been reeling their youth by a morning's darning of the pier, says the Chicago News.

They looked a long string of perch and—well—darning with them through the shoddy streets. Norton talked of the morning's sport with enthusiasm, and expatiated on the value of perch as pan-fish.

"You," responded Havens, "I like them cooked in batter, don't you?" "I like them most any way," replied Norton.

"I say, Norton, you take the whole string home. You'll enjoy having a good, big mess."

"Oh, no, you take them. I guess you like them as much as I do?" "Well, the truth is, if I take them home I'll have to clean them."

"I can't say I'm hankering for the job myself," laughed Norton. "You like them as much as I do?" "Well, the truth is, if I take them home I'll have to clean them."

REUNITED.

THE front door of a neat house of moderate pretensions, just outside of an Indiana town, was opened as night was coming on, and a man was thrust violently into the street, or rather the road.

The man who was ejected was young, and might have been handsome had he not been for the dispirited air of his features and the untidiness of his dress. At the moment he was evidently intoxicated.

The gentleman who ejected him was an elderly man, whose face was red with anger. He was a lawyer of ability and promise when he married John Byrd's daughter Mary, although he had already contracted a fondness for drink.

"I'm going as far as your money will justify," said the driver at last; "I'll go as far as your money will justify, I'll go as far as your money will justify."

"Does he own the valley?" asked the old man. "He owns ever so many acres of land, the San Benito river mine, and more horses, cattle and sheep than you can count. But here comes one of his ranchmen, and I will turn you over to him."

The driver explained the circumstances of his "freight" to the ranchman, who requested the old man to accompany him to the house, and the latter patiently complied with a request, leading by the hand a bright little boy.

"They soon reached 'the house,' a low and straggling collection of buildings, and the old man was introduced to the owner, a tall and dignified man, with his face covered with a heavy beard and his eyes shaded by a wide slouched hat, who was seated in a high-backed chair reading a newspaper and smoking a long pipe.

"What is your name?" he asked, addressing the old man. "John Byrd," replied the old man. "Where are you from?" "From Indiana," replied the old man. "Ah! my family with you?" "My daughter, Mrs. Worham, and her son, are here," replied the old man. "Her husband is dead, sir," patiently replied Byrd, although he recounted the tale of these inquiries.

BOARD OF TRADE.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade was held in Firemen's Hall on Tuesday evening, under the presidency of Mr. Phillips.

In spite of the many entertainments to which Mrs. and the Misses Hammon-ton and those of sterner mould were attracted, the Board secured a quorum to attend to several interesting and important matters, before referring to which we would say that the members present looked decidedly at home in their new and cheery quarters, which, judging from the remarks of some, will invite larger gatherings.

The Board decided that the dues of members who join in November and December, will be counted as from Jan. 1st next.

A communication was received from the Dept. of Commerce and Labor, asking the Board's co-operation in establishing a manufacturers' and importers' list, to be used in the furtherance of foreign and domestic commerce. This was favorably acted upon. Local firms can obtain information and blanks from the Secretary.

A letter from Mr. Voorhies, First V. P. of the A. C. R. R., concerning their crossing, was read. After discussion, further consideration was postponed until December meeting.

Several communications reported as received and answered.

A letter was read from the Cities Club of the Orange, in regard to Chinese exclusion legislation. In view of the vast commercial interests which will be affected, Board favored a proper legislative definition of "laborer," so that the spirit of the law should not be violated.

A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to Dr. Cunningham for services he has rendered to the Board since its inception.

Other matters in addition to some of a routine character, were disposed of, after which the Board adjourned, to meet on the second Tuesday in December, when the annual election of officers will take place.

"Better than a sermon," was the verdict rendered after Dr. Grant's lecture, last Tuesday evening, in Bellevue Hall. The house was well filled, and we have yet to hear anything but words of praise. Many were curious as to what he could make out of his topic, "Snakes in Paradise," but an hour and three quarters were filled with practical lessons on life, thoughts that we all know, but never thought of before, interspersed with passages of wit and practical illustrations. If all would remember but one-quarter of the lecture, and follow what it taught, there would be many more happy homes and individuals in Hammon-ton because of Dr. Grant's untiring words. We would like to hear him again.

The most deceived people in the world are those who rely on wealth to produce happiness, a quality which money never has had, and cannot from its essential over have. The happiest man in the world is the common everyday chap who makes his own living, pays his bills and has a little laid by as he goes along, but who doesn't strive to get a corner on local output, and is neither a slave to ambition or society. He loves his God and fellow men, thinks "there's no place like home" the haven of rest; prefers the company of his wife and children to that of any one else, never has to sit up at night to polish his conscience, believes in the doctrine of life and let live, and when he encounters one of the needy he doesn't snigger over his pocket book. The plain man is happy because he is satisfied, and doesn't spend the best part of life yearning for something four sizes too large for him.

He kept up in the race, James H. Burton, President Manchester Cotton Mill, Rock Hill, S. C., writes: "In 1880 I painted my residence with L. & M. It looks better than a great many houses painted three years ago. Don't pay $1.00 a gallon for linseed oil, which you do in ready-for-use paint. Buy oil fresh from the barrel at 60 cts. per gallon, and mix it with Longman & Matthews' L. & M. Paint. It makes paint cost about $1.20 per gallon. Weave and cover like gold. Every Church gives a liberal quantity when bought from L. & M. Little.

Lester Piano

Durability! Concerning the Lester, we mean by this that years after the instrument enters your home, its rich, mellow tone will be as satisfying to the trained musical ear as it was on the day it left our factories.

Why should you pay the

Are Men Buying Earlier Than Usual This Year?

It's either this or more men are buying at this store.

We've every reason to think it's the latter reason, for business is very good.

And it pays to buy early and get all the good possible out of your suit or overcoat.

But come when you like, you'll always find generous,
well-selected stocks here.

We're not foolish enough to think we're only doing business for a few years, even if we are pushing the half-century mark. We know that some one connected with OAK HALL will some day be advertising "we're reaching the century mark"—and this will be only possible because of the continuance of the system of giving solid values for money spent here.

Men's all-wool suits in black and fancy chevrons, $10—double-breasted styles included.

Men's all-wool overcoats in black and oxford begin at $10. They're generous and big—nothing skimpy but the price.

Men's dark mixed worsted suits, $15, $16.50, $18, $20 and $25.

Men's overcoats in chevrons, worsteds, friezes, kerseys, beavers, fancy worsteds; montagnas—$10 to $45.

Men's Paddock overcoats, $20, $22.50 and $25.

Clothing For Boys

We talk of suits with short trousers today.

The average boy isn't any too easy on his clothes, and he requires them sturdy and strong.

Prudence says buy the sort that stand hard knocks as well as the drowsy kind.

Boys' 2-piece double breasted Back Suits in hard faced worsteds, ages 8 to 17 years, $7.50.

Boys' double breasted Sailor Blue Suits in serges and chevrons, 4 to 10 years, $4.50.

Boys' Norfolk Suits in blue chevrons, 8 to 15 years, with or without bloomer trousers, $7.50.

Boys' double breasted Back Suits, buttoned to neck, in mixed worsteds, 4 to 8 years, $5.00.
