THE CASE OF JOHN PENROSE

During my service as manager of the Venetian Life Insurance Company I quickly discovered that all such corporations are looked upon as the legitimate prey of those that deem themselves shrewd and sharp in business. As a rule, are prejudiced against an insurance company, and there is little use in one of them going into court unless it has the strongest part of legal logic to stand upon.

I acquired much skill in ferreting out several plots against our company that I was not only complimented on my success, but given the most difficult problems that came before me. While led to my connection with what was known as the case of John Penrose, the most extraordinary affair of the kind of which I have any knowledge.

Penrose was an engine driver, in which capacity he had been employed for five years when he applied for the policy in the Venetian for $50,000. His physical examination was satisfactory, and the policy was issued to him for the benefit of his wife. They had no children. Three years after the issuance of his policy it was increased to $100,000.

This did not attract the attention in the multitude of business, for the man kept his premiums promptly paid; but when, some months later, I learned from a friend of mine in the Excelsior that the same man had taken out a second policy, this time in the Excelsior, for the benefit of his brother, the circumstances struck me as a little peculiar. Not that such instances are unknown, but the annual payment of the premium on $100,000 of life insurance is a considerable sum of money, especially for a railway engineer, whose wages are not high.

However, the matter gradually passed out of my mind until, six months later, just before the semi-annual payment became due, when we were notified of the death of Penrose. The notice came officially and in due and regular form. On the face of it our company was supposed to pay the claim after the usual formalities without any question. I asked the managing director to allow me to look into the matter, and he consented. Within the following week I was at the little town of Berwick, near which Penrose had made his home, and from which he had been buried some time before.

The first person I met as I stepped off the train was Caton, the steward of the Excelsior. He smiled as he took my hand and said: "You may as well take the next train back," he said. "It's all as straight as a string. Our engineer struck his head against the smokestack, was killed on a dead-end, and was followed to his grave by a host of mourning, friends, and have telegraphed home that it's all right, and they must not think of disagreeing the claim."

I was inclined to take Caton's advice and return with him, but, far from going thus far, decided to look a little further into the matter. So I bade him good-bye and went to the hotel in the town, a ramshackle affair, where I was the only guest that night.

It would have produced any business man had my errand been to find out if it did take me long to find that Penrose, the engine driver, had been killed in high regard by almost every one, and no whisper of any thing irregular in his taking off had been uttered by any living person.

I gave an assumed name at the hotel and took care not to drop any hint of my real errand to Berwick. It was easy to pick up from the gossip in the barroom the particulars of Penrose's death.

He was the engine driver of No. 11, which drew the day express over the run of sixty miles to Newland in the morning and back again in the evening to Berwick. Something less than two weeks before his engine broke down and another took the train, leaving him with No. 11 to go into the shop for repairs. He followed the express on the night train at a safe distance. When opposite his own home, two miles out of the wreck, he jumped out of the cab to about some message to his wife, who was standing in the door, and, for getting a telephone pole which stood near the track, was struck with terrific violence, hurled out of the cab and instantly killed. His brother, who was his brother, took the engine, ran back and helped to carry the dead body of his engineer to his home, where his widow was greeted with grief.

An inquest was held, the remains were viewed by the hundreds who gathered at the funeral, the physician who investigated for us was above suspicion, and really my visit to Berwick looked like the most successful journey any mortal could undertake. When I went to my room I decided to take the morning train home and found the company it was useless to make any change in my plans. I missed the train by five minutes, and was obliged to stay in Berwick until late in the afternoon. I was in a hurry, and to help pass away the time decided upon inquiring further

SEWING MACHINES IN JAPAN

We Send More of Them Every Year—Only One Objection.

The use of sewing machines continues to increase in Japan and the purchases of needles for machine as well as hand use show the industry of the people. The adoption of dental clothing and styles, especially noticeable in the cities, will naturally enlarge the demand for sewing machines.

If the native prejudice against stitches showing could be overcome, or a machine could be devised for invisible stitching, the making of kimono alone would add wonderfully to the demand for machines. Most Japanese garments are made to order, and the threads are saved for patching and are taken apart for patch over and over again.

One United States factory particularly prominent in the domestic trade in many countries has had wonderful success in the Far East. The whole of Japan is now flooded with their machines, and the demand for them is increasing. The firm now has scores of agents scattered throughout the country, and sales are stimulated by permitting payment in monthly installments of 30 cents to $1. The outlook is enhanced by the fact that the manufacture of sewing machines for several years at least.

In establishing trade in this line schools were opened, native artists employed who understood home tastes and the well to do especially interested. Prizes were offered to induce competition and expense was not spared to please as well as properly train in art work. The colored silk and embroidered work executed in Japan and China would arouse the admiration of all lovers of art needlework. So successful has the school education been that the schools have been recently abandoned in Japan and the lecturers now go to the homes of those buying machines to teach them how to produce all kinds of work.

In some parts of the Far East a further step has been taken that will give the sewing machine a broader scope of work and naturally increase the demand. Prizes are offered to those buying and operating the machines for the best work done on any one of them. It is better to study methods along such lines and aim for a market for good quality and reliable manufactures than to seek a market for a low priced and unsatisfactory article.

The Japanese Government has three model factories equipped with the latest machinery to produce uniforms and other clothing, etc., required in the various branches of its service. Tailors are large users of the sewing machine and manufacturers are finding it profitable assistance.

Little Laughs

A QUALIFICATION.
Rastus was honest and industrious, but in the opinion of the new minister, unsuitable.
"Neighborliness, my dear friend," said the dominion, "is brotherliness. Do you take the trouble to see much of your neighbor?"
"Ah, reckon ah sees as much of them as they sees of me," Rastus replied.
"Perhaps," said the clergyman, "but do you love your neighbor as yourself?"
"Ah, reckon ah does, pabson," Rastus replied, "but you know, suh, I ain't p'ctically stuck on mahself nethin'."

HEARD ON SUBURBAN TRAIN.
"Wife ever get an economical streak?"
"Yep! Only last summer she figured out that she could save nine dollars and sixty cents in one month by doing her own housework."
"How did it come out?"
"She got a cook book, I got the dyspepsia and the doctor got the nine sixty."

COULD GUESS TROUGH.
Marks—What did your wife say when you told her you wouldn't be home till midnight?
Parks—I don't know. Immediately after telling her I hung up the receiver.

IT NEEDED A DIAGRAM.
Dealer—Yes, quite good, only I can't quite see what it's all about.
Artist—Why, it's as clear as mud. The farmyard at sunrise.
Dealer—Of course, of course. But why would you have any objection to making an affidavit to go with it?

MAMMA CAUGHT THEM.
"What are you crying for, children?"
"We've just eaten a pot of mamma's raspberry jam."
"Ah, so you've all got stomach aches, I suppose?"
"No, on the contrary!"

THEY DID THAT TIME.
Mistress (coming home unexpectedly)—What's the meaning of this? You've got on my blue skirt and my green silk blouse.
Maid—Well, what of it? Don't they go together?

A FAT CURE.
"Don't you get a good whipping rather hard, old chap?"
"It would be so to had if my servant didn't sit down close to me with a cigar in his mouth and grin like a house on fire."

BETTERED HIM.
"Sir," said the haughty American to his admiring tailor, "I object to the boorish darning. I would have you know that my great-grandfather was one of the early settlers."
"And yet," replied the anxious tradesman, "there are people who believe in heretics."

A YOUTHFUL COMPLAINER.
"That's fair! My mother sends me to bed for telling stories, while Daddy tells great big ones, and everybody laughs at them."

MORE USEFUL.
"I thought Mabel was going to take post-graduate course in philology?"
"Since she's got engaged she thinks she'd better take a few cooking lessons instead."

THEIR LIVING.
"Isn't it a ridiculous expression to be of elderly folk?"
"Yes, but you ever hear of anybody who really does enjoy poor health?"
"Certainly. Don't the doctors?"

WHEN DROVER CLEVELAND'S LITTLE GIRL was quite young, her father once told her to go to the White House from Chicago and asked Mrs. Cleveland to bring the child to the phone.
Lifting the little one up to the instrument, Mrs. Cleveland watched her expression change from bewilderment to wonder, and then to fear. It was surely her father's voice, yet she looked at the telephone incredulously. After examining the tiny upturned eyelids in the corner, the little girl burst into tears.
"Oh, mamma," she sobbed, "how can we ever get papa out of that lit tin hole?"

AN IRISH DOCTOR, WHILE ENJOYING a holiday in the country, took the opportunity along with much married and fishing. During operations the doctor's ankle came off and was lost. He was in a dilemma on whether to more fishing that day. Happy thought: he had a bottle in his pocket. The bottle was filled with water, carefully corked, and sent down to his nephew.
After a few minutes' interval the doctor had a little and pulled up his leg at racing speed, finding a fine piece of fish, one on each hook.
"Oh, doctor, what's this?" exclaimed his companion.
"Yes," quipped the doctor, "and brought up on the bottle, too."

THE ICE TREATMENT
A number of well-groomed women, who carry the instructions and work at the beauty parlors into their own households, have passed the value of substituting small pieces of ice for the cold compresses used to close the pores of the face after the hair has been shaved. It is a considerable question in the minds of most students of the skin whether the facial skin is ever really clean. Many believe it will permanently enlarge the pores after a time, and wonder how carefully the cold compresses are used to avert this condition. For those who have eliminated the facial skin from their beauty regimen, a number of the more conservative parlor have connected a cold cream, designed to be either efficient as hot water in opening the pores and removing all traces of oiliness. The cold compresses of small pieces of ice may be used to close the pores immediately after the cream has been thoroughly massaged into the skin and any remaining unsightly skin has gently been wiped away with a soft cloth.

SUNBATHS AS A TONIC.
Sun baths are a splendid tonic for the weary, taken with discretion. Nervous people are likely to be sensitive to strong light, and so should begin with ten to twenty minute doses of the sun bath. Lying on the sand, or in a comfortable corner of the window seat, where the rays of the sun cause a delicious drowsiness, cannot fail to quiet the nerves and rest the entire body. If a window seat is not among the attractive furnishings of the house, place a couch or a leather chair in front of a sunny window, allow the body to assume the easiest possible position, with all the muscles relaxed, and with the back to the light. For a good look or a favorite magazine. Before a dozen pages are turned eyes will begin to droop. When reading becomes an effort lay it aside, close the eyes and in less than five minutes it will be found that the eyes are again ready to begin. Such a sleep in any and restful, a natural solution furnished by the house, if taken to tell it the sun bath will be away in the land of nod. Such a sleep in any and restful, a natural solution furnished by the house, if taken to tell it the sun bath will be away in the land of nod.

NOTES OF THE NURSERY.
Baby should not be put on his feet too soon. When he feels like it he will be walking naturally as any other little child.

PICTURE HATS.
The limit? Not at all. "They're beginning. Wonders are yet to come. The brucade are in metals and colors."

Robert H. Ingersoll is now Sheriff of Atlantic County. A man of good principles, with legal training, he will doubtless make a faithful official.

We hope the Bellevue Avenue gutters will be cleaned, and not allow them to be frozen up in their present filthy condition.

The overflow from the fountain is largely responsible for the sloppy condition of the gutters on the eastern side of Bellevue, between Second and Third Streets. Could not that ever-flowing automatic spigot be repaired?

A large party of touring motor cyclists, coming up from Atlantic the other day, at a thirty-mile clip, mistook Maple Street for Bellevue.
After a few rolls of bouncing, skidding, and plowing through sand, they gave it up in disgust, and footed it. Maple Street is naturally sandy;
one half of it received a skin-coating of gravel (on top of the sand), and the other end has not seen any gravel since Washington crossed the Delaware.

Naturally, at this time of the year, with Thanksgiving close at hand, and cold weather on us, we cannot but be thankful for past and present blessings. Would it not be practical gratitude to look above for some family less fortunate, and give an order to the cookman, butcher, baker, or grocerman, on the sly? Just try it!

And three weeks after Thanksgiving comes Christmas!

OFFICIAL NOTICE to Station Owners in Atlantic County

The fourth annual public examination of all stallions offered for breeding purposes in ATLANTIC COUNTY, N. J., will be held at Hammononton, at the Hotel Stables, on TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1911, at 2 o'clock p.m.

The stallion law provides that all stallions offered for public service in this state shall be assembled each year, and every person, firm or company, is hereby notified to present their stallions for such examination before the Examining Board.

All pedigrees, certificates of registration, transfers, permits or license certificates must be presented to the Secretary of the Board for inspection and tabulation on that date. Persons desiring further information, in reference to Chapter 212 of the laws of 1908 should address the Secretary at New Brunswick.

FREDERICK C. MINKLER, Secretary and Executive Officer of the Stallion Examining and Registration Board.

AN ORDINANCE Fixing the Salary of Town Clerk

Introduced October 11th, 1911. Passed October 25th, 1911.

Section 1. Be it ordained by The Town of Hammononton in Council assembled, that the salary of the Town Clerk shall be five hundred dollars a year, payable monthly.

Section 2. And be it ordained, that this ordinance shall take effect on the first day of the year one thousand nine hundred twelve, and continue in force until a different rate is fixed by ordinance of Town Council.

Section 3. And be it ordained, that all ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent with this ordinance be, and the same are hereby repealed.

Signed: JOHN M. AUSTIN, Mayor.

Attest: W. R. SEELY, Town Clerk.

A business man who had to leave his office, and was expecting a caller to leave him some money, left this notice on the door: "I have gone out for half an hour. Will be back soon. Have been gone twenty minutes already."

Keep living and sleeping rooms well ventilated.

Avoid all excesses in eating and drinking.

Protect the body with suitable clothing.

Take daily exercise in the open air.

Devote a sufficient part of each twenty-four hours to needful rest of mind and body.

If you have a cold, do not spit where, when dry, the sputum can be carried in the air, as all colds are contagious. Never neglect a cold, because it may lead to consumption if you do.

Resume: The cardinal rules for good health are—cleanliness, fresh air, daily exercise, and moderation in eating and drinking.

The Verdict Lucas vs. Inferiority

Any one of a dozen things may happen or two or three things generally do happen when an inferior paint is used. For instance, the paint won't dry, or the colors fade or the paint cracks and peels off, or the paint won't spread right, or the paint covers poorly and you need three coats instead of two, or it wears out in a year or two, etc.

Further, inferior paint often leaves a surface in such bad condition that it's years before the damage done is really remedied. When repainting is necessary you are put to considerable trouble and expense to burn off all old previous coats so that the new paint can be applied to a good foundation.

Remember these facts when you buy paint. Get good, honest, reliable and be trouble free. Its first cost may be a little more than the inferior kind of paint, but even if it costs twice as much as it does, it would be more economical in the end.
