The Lard reigneth: Psa. XCVII, 1st verse, and 20th verse of Psa. 147.

The shaded stream of prophecy emptics into the broad Sea of history. The philosophy of this is what we as finite intelligences—understand-to-be the psat, the present and the tuture. The eternity of God comprehends at a glance, and since the omniscience of the Deity lies not under the control of his will neither his knowledge nor wisdom can be suspended.

The Solemn reality that the pages of history as they teem from the press, agree with the teachings of prophecy force the Truth-Seeker to concode. He whose touch is perfection appropriates every-one, however minute, and thus by pressing evil out of stim sutural channel brings out of evil good-and-makes—the very wrath of man to nation; is for Itis judgments, they have not known them. Praise ye the Lord. While the OldWorld is abaken to its contre, and kings tremble, and St. Peter's chain fails to sustain the weight of Pius the infailible, and red banded war desolates

God that hath prospered us holds in his paim the cattle on our thousand hills and still gridles the round world with the tables of bounty.— How His raptured heart must bound as the great family crowd his board. He toucheth the springs and the clouds drop futness; brooks, rivers, lakes, and seas all glorify Him.— His ear bends to the tipple topple flute-like potes from the silver throat of the brooklet. His eye brightens to see the river refresh the carty and quench the thirst of His every creature. and quench the thirst of Hisevery creature.
We sometimes speak of the bright day of promise. If this sin cursed world ever enjoys a state akin to it, I opine our country joys a state akin to it, I opino our country will be used as the most uxulted agoncy in ushering the millenial reign. Facts as force, are irresistable, they compose the very data of God's logic and in His logic there lies no fallacy. By the light of these stubboth arguments lee us trace the evix denees. Why is it this country has been known to civilization only between three and four hundred years? It seems that its mountains, lake, ivers, prairies that me higher, still higher rose the sngry billows, the whistle of the storm flend startled, nimble lightning and terrific thunder slarmed, dashing apray and rain drove you below. Stimbling in darkness you grouped your way toward the furnace, glowing heat of the holde craft. What a sense of relet slided the soul as your eye fell on the noble arm that so calmly urged the vessel on. Assured you sought out the pilot, how self possessed he seemed; you glanced at the compass, a lightning flash revealed the batting prow, bloss God, you cried, the latting prow, bloss God, you cried, the latting prow, bloss God, you cried, the answers her helm? Fear was gone, you stood spaid the wildest sublimities of nature composed, tranquil. In the inlight rage around that rock, and may transiently seem on the point of washing it away; but its foundations are deep laid an steadisst, and the breakers of Reaction and Slavery are hyrled against and dash their spray over it in vain.

We do not underrate the forces of Prejudios and Aristocracy. We do not forget that a very large minority of the American People still hold in their immost hearts that Blacks have no rights which Whites are bound to respect. We fully appreciate the desperation wherewith all the warring elements of harred to Republican achievment will be combined and hurled against the battlements of Republican seemdoney in the Presidential Election of 1872. We do not doubt that local-successes, facilitated by Republican tends and dissensions, will inspire the charging host with a sanguing Republican feuds and dissonsions, will inspire the charging host with a sanguing hope of victory, such as nerved it to put forth its outwork strength in the earlier stages of the contests of 1864 and 1868. Yet our faith is clear and strong that the American People still bless God-that, on the red battle-fields of our Civil War, the Union was upheld and Slavery destroyed, and will never consciously decide that the precious blood thereon-poured out was lavished in vain.

The Tribune helicyes in the prosecution of the great struggle by legitimate means to beneficent ends. To State Sovereignty, it opposes indissoluble National Integrity; to Slavery for Blacks, Juberty to All; to Proscription, Edirachisement; to Popular Ignorance, Universal Education; to in-

Address, The Tribung, New York.

One can have no appreciative idea of an Indian viilage, uniess he has been permitted to come across the prairie through hot summers' sun, and suddenly discovers one nestled under the broad shade trees. beside a clear running stream, in a green valley. How pleasant the grass looks; how refreshing the bright waters, and how cosy the tall lodges, with their shaded verandahs

f thickly interwoven boughs.
All day long we had toiled over the scorehing plain, through clouds of grasshoppers that often struck us in the face with sufficient force to make the skin smart for several minutes. Once we had seen a mirage of a beautiful lake, fringed with promised I would return the next day and trees and surrounded by green pastures which invited us to pursue its fleeting shadows, but we well knew all about these deceptions by sad experience, and pushed steadily on over the burning sands.

These mirages often deceive the weary traveler of the desert. Sundenly the horse man-sees a river or lake, apparently, just ahead of him, and he rides on andon, hoping to come to it. For hours it lies before his eyes, and then in a moment disappears, leaving him miles and miles out of his way, and in the midst of desert land.

Men baye ridden all day striving to reach the beautiful river just before them, and then at night turn back to plod their weary way to where they had started from in the morning. These mirages often lead to death both man and horse.

The mirage we had seen was most de lightful, representing a clear lake, with trees, meadows and villages neathing on its thores, but it scarcely equalled, the reality of the scene when, late in the afternoon w ascended a rise in the prairie, and saw be low us a wide stream lined with green trees and on its banks a large Indian encamp-

The ponies pricked up their ears and neighed with pleasure as they emelt the vater, and our delight was unbounded. We halted for a moment to admire the beautiful prospect. Through the majestic troop, slanding rays of the sun slivered on the grass, Far away, winding like a bage allver-serpout, run the river, while near by in shady grove, stood the village-the children at play on the green lawns, not made by hands. The white sides of the teopees shone in the setting sunlight, and the moke curled lazily upward from their dingy tops. Bright ribbons and red grass, ing under the shade of some wide-appeading and a heatead, and she said there was

No sooner did they ascertain there were ut three in the party, than they rode boldly up and asked us our business. I told them who we were, and where we were from mon which they cordially invited us to the village.

As we approached, men, women and children poured out of the encampment to look at the strangers, and having satisfied their curiosity, the sports and amusements of the evening were renewed.

I asked permission to camp of no one for I needed none, as this was God's land, and not owned by ravenous and dishonest speculators. So I marched right down to the center of the village, and finding a vacant space, pitched my lodge. It was not cocessary to purchase a town-lot here. for co one, save Him who owns all, hell real

A few Santee women gathered about my equaws and chatted with them, anxious to earn the news from down the river. Seeing that they were interfering with the unacking of the ponies and the erecting of the lodge, I unceremoniously ordered them to be gone and they went quietly away. The lodge was soon up; the ponies unpacked and put out to graze. Having seen things put in order for the night. I sauntered through the village to learn the news.

I was agreeably surprised, when I learned there was a white man in the village. who had been sent out to the Indians sa missionary. All the savages spoke of him as a kind-hearted, good man, who was a great friend of the Great Spirit and of the Big Father at Washington.

I made haste to pay my respects to my white brother, and found him indeed a good Christian gentleman. He had a white wife and child, and he and they were living comfortably and pleasantly with these wild children of the desert. I talked more than an hour with the good man; it was so delightful to see and speak with one of my own blood and color. When I left him, I dine with him, which I did. It may sound strange to bear one talk of "dining out" in an Indian camp, but I can assure my civilized readers the meal was none the less wholesome or abundant on account of the place in which it was served.

When I returned to my lodge, I found it surrounded by a crowd of dirty squaws and children, who were intent upon examining everything we had. I ordered them off, and could not nelp laughing as I compared the curiosity of these rude Indian women with that I had seen exhibited at church, in the States, by white women; There they go to church, not to hear the Gospel but to see what their neighbors have to wear, and these Indian women had ome to my lodge with the same laudable object. Ism not certain that human nature is the same everywhere, but I am quite certain woman nature is the same all the world over.
