which she had trained the children.
Singing by the infant class won hearty applause. A quartette from Hammonprogramme, which included recitations,

a cantata, and addresses by Pastor VanDyke and Mr. Robt. Smith, of Elwood.

To those familiar with the Almanac
issued by "The Philadelphia Press,"
the announcement that the 1899 edition is on sale is sufficient to induce purchase. Those who have examined the two previous volumes issued by that paper know that there is not to be found in the United States—and, if not there, nowhere in the world—an almanac
which surpasses "The Press" for accuracy, comprehensiveness, variety, and attractiveness. It is a volume of over 500 pages, replete with the information for every citizen interested in the past,
the present or the future of the country in which he lives constantly. There is not one department of human activity not touched upon. The farmer and the merchant, the clerk and the professional man, may each find something to interest and instruct. It answers many questions concerning the Government of the United States and of foreign nations, is a valuable resume of the war with Spain, abounds with statistics from commercial and industrial pursuits, and is, in fact, a complete cyclopedia of the world's activities during 1898, and must be indispensable to every thinking American citizen. The Almanac may be had from newsdealers or by sending 25 cents to "The Press," Philadelphia.

It is reported that General Henry Kyd Douglas, of Maryland, who was Stonewall Jackson's chief of staff, and in whose arms the famous Southern soldier died, is engaged to Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, General U. S. Grant's only daughter. General Douglas is 65 years old.

Men and women are often ruined
by brilliancy than by dullness.

Jonah was an unwilling guest; he wanted to get out. However much he may have liked fish, he did not want it three times a day, and all the time; so he kept up a fidget and a struggle, and a turning over, and gave the whale no time to assimilate him. The man knew that if he was ever to get out he must be in perpetual motion. We know men who are so lethargic they would have given it up, and laid so quietly that in a few hours they would have gone into flukes and fish-bones, blow-hole and blubber. Now we see men all around us who have been swallowed by monstrous misfortunes. Some of them sit down on a piece of whalebone and give it up. They say: "No use! I'll never get back my money or restore my good name or recover my health." They float out to sea, and never again are heard of. Others, the moment they go down the throat of some great trouble, begin to plan for egress. They make rapid estimate of the length of the vertebrae, and come to the conclusion how far they are in. They dig up enough spermaceti out of the darkness to make a light, and keep turning this way and that, 'til the first thing you know they are out. Determination to get well has much to do with recovered invalidism.
Firm will to avert bankruptcy decides financial deliverance. Never surrender to misfortune or discouragement. You can, if you are spry enough, make it as uncomfortable for the whale as the whale can make it uncomfortable for you. There will be some place where you can brace your feet against his rib,
and some large upper tooth around which you can take hold, and he will soon be as glad to get rid of you for a tenant as you will be glad to get rid of him for a landlord.

Glory and honor in the highest await
the individual who will invent a phrase, at once polite and politic, but which must unmistakably mean, "It's none of your business."

A wolf may lose his teeth, but never his inclination; so it is with an evil speaker.

THE COMING MAN.

A pair of very chubby legs
In a pair of little shoes
With rather chubby toes:
A little life, a little love,
Cut as a mother can—
And let before us stride in state
The future's coming man.

His eyes, perchance, will read the stars,
And search their unknown ways;
Perchance the human heart and soul
Will open to their gaze;
Perchance their keen and flashing eyes
Will be a nation's light—
Those eyes that now are wistful best
On some "big fellow's" kite.

That brow where mighty thought will dwell
In solemn, secret state;
Where fierce ambition's restless strength
Shall war with future fate;
Where science from now hidden caves
New treasures shall outpour—
The hair now with a childish doubt,
Are two, or three cents, more?

Those lips that in the coming years
Will plead or win the nation's light;
Where whispered words on lightning flash
That stately world may reach;
That, sternly grave, may speak command,
Or, smiling, win control—
Are coming now for gingerbread
With all a baby's soul!

Those hands—those little busy hands—
So sticky, small and brown;
Those hands whose only mission seems
To pull all order down—
Which know what hidden strength may lie
Within their future grasp,
Though now "as but a tiny stick
In sturdy hold they clasp?

Oh, blessings on those little hands,
Whose work is yet to be done;
And blessings on those little feet
Whose race is yet to run!
And blessings on the little hands
That have not learned to plan!
Whatever the future holds in store,
God bless the "coming man."

PERCY.

I was at work.
We had been furnishing—my wife and I. We thought we had done it cheaply, but a few charming things in the brick-arch line, added at the last moment, had so overbalanced our account that I felt it imperative to make up a better check than usual that week
on the daily paper upon which I earned my daily bread.

So I was hard at work.
But my wife had been at work,
too. She had been to Paul Jones' sale—it was "rental day," and she had got a few little things that dear baby absolutely had to have, besides a few more quite indispensable trifles for herself—all at them "dirt cheap." She had been forced, however, to make good the week's housekeeping money, and I was severely encephaloped, and I am afraid I was not enthusiastic over the Jones sale.

In fact I took some credit to myself for my silence both over the furnishing and over the advisability of the purchases; I did not even endeavor to stop her when she had quietly gathered up all her little treasures, and had deprived me of her presence.

Instead of chasing the pining cloud from her sweet eyes—as I knew how to do—I had even heaved a sigh of relief
the door slammed after her. But, there, the bill was waiting for my head, and I had written one paragraph!

So I was hard at work, and within eight of the end at last, when a voice on the stairs, shouting, "I know my way," made me swear a gentle oath under my breath before the door opened and one Percy Fulmouth stood before me.

He was a college fellow—one of those who always prevent one from working,
but to whom one is never able to say
"nay."

I smiled a sticky smile of welcome
and pushed the cigarettes toward him,
but even as I did so I forgot his offense
in sudden alarm at his appearance.

His face, that was wont to be fresh,
was sallow and gray, and his eyes, that were always merry, were dull and downcast.

"What's the matter, old man?" said
I. "You're down on your luck."

It took him some time to bring the trouble out, even to me. But at last he managed it. He was in love.

"Is that all?" cried I cheerily. "Well, don't be alarmed. I assure you, when you have got over the beginning it isn't half so bad."

"Isn't that?" said my friend gloom-ily, after a pause.

"Isn't that?" I asked.

"Isn't that?" I asked.

"Isn't that?" I asked.

Something that Will Interest the Juvenile Members of Every Household—Quaint Actions and Bright Sayings of Many Cate and Canning-Children.

Boys sometimes think they cannot afford to be much else faithful to the little things. A story is told of a boy of the right stamp, and what came of his faithfulness.

"If I were to marry on $2,000 a year," continued Percy emphatically, "I should be in debt two months, and my wife and I would have quarreled forever."

"Why didn't I smile? I had been married for two months, and my wife and I had quarreled—yet."

But a vision of pouting mouth and blue eyes rose unconsciously before me. Instead of smiling I was now weeping.

Perhaps my wife had not brought home small, soft parcels enough from Jones' sale, instead of—as I had meant supposed that morning—too many.

"But a man can work," said I, as bravely as I could, drawing my papers toward me.

"Work!" echoed Percy, bitterly. "That's all very well if you're got brains. I have no qualifications for earning money, and love in a cottage isn't good enough nowadays."

Somehow this speech related me to my beloved.

He smoked another cigarette, and then took up his hat, and I breathed a sigh of relief.

"It's a devil of a mess for a fellow to be in," he said, gloomily.

"Yes," said I. "I'm afraid you'll have to find a wife who can work on her own account. There are a good many of them about nowadays."

He looked at me doubtfully. "O, I have met some," he said. "A girl with money's better, but that won't help me just now."

"So I supposed," said I. And I let him out. I had sworn at his entrance, but he had brought me luck.

The words literally flew from my pen when I sat down again; there was something spurring me on—there was a light in sight that I knew of.

And when I had put my name to the last sheet and the first I sought it.

Upstairs in the nursery my wife sat beside the cradle; she had her child in her arms and was lulling him to sleep. Her eyes shone as she looked up at me, her face was fresh, and she was as delay as any man could wish in a plain, white frock—ready to welcome me to dinner after my work. As I bent down to kiss her I said gaily: "I've made up a splendid week, darling; so you needn't worry about the purchases."

And she laughed, saying: "There weren't so many after all, you know. Only a few dollars' worth. But I thought you'd better know what you were making them."

And then we went together to the dining room of her fragrant ordering, and I was sorry that I had not been able to explain to Percy what it was that made it "good enough."

"Why didn't I smile? I had been married for two months, and my wife and I had quarreled—yet."

But a vision of pouting mouth and blue eyes rose unconsciously before me. Instead of smiling I was now weeping.

Perhaps my wife had not brought home small, soft parcels enough from Jones' sale, instead of—as I had meant supposed that morning—too many.

"But a man can work," said I, as bravely as I could, drawing my papers toward me.

"Work!" echoed Percy, bitterly. "That's all very well if you're got brains. I have no qualifications for earning money, and love in a cottage isn't good enough nowadays."

Somehow this speech related me to my beloved.

He smoked another cigarette, and then took up his hat, and I breathed a sigh of relief.

"It's a devil of a mess for a fellow to be in," he said, gloomily.

"Yes," said I. "I'm afraid you'll have to find a wife who can work on her own account. There are a good many of them about nowadays."

He looked at me doubtfully. "O, I have met some," he said. "A girl with money's better, but that won't help me just now."

"So I supposed," said I. And I let him out. I had sworn at his entrance, but he had brought me luck.

The words literally flew from my pen when I sat down again; there was something spurring me on—there was a light in sight that I knew of.

And when I had put my name to the last sheet and the first I sought it.

Upstairs in the nursery my wife sat beside the cradle; she had her child in her arms and was lulling him to sleep. Her eyes shone as she looked up at me, her face was fresh, and she was as delay as any man could wish in a plain, white frock—ready to welcome me to dinner after my work. As I bent down to kiss her I said gaily: "I've made up a splendid week, darling; so you needn't worry about the purchases."

And then we went together to the dining room of her fragrant ordering, and I was sorry that I had not been able to explain to Percy what it was that made it "good enough."

SATURDAY, DEC. 31, 1898.

A recent Grand Jury in Cumberland County was called upon to examine 84 bills of complaints, and after sifting them down, returned 26 true bills to the Court. So disgusted did this jury become that they passed a resolution censuring the Justices of the Peace for sending so many trivial cases to the county seat.

Atlantic County has suffered from the same case, and has tried in vain to find a remedy. What is needed is a change in our laws that will allow petty cases to be tried at home. As matters now stand, Justices are obliged to hear only one side of a case, and with the inducement of a fee, send many cases up to the Grand Jury, entailing heavy cost on the taxpayers, and individual inconvenience. Witnesses are summoned two and three days before the Grand Jury, and then perhaps not heard. Before the case is ended perhaps two or three days are spent in attending Court. Some of these people are doubling deposit upon daily toll for bread, and the less and expense to them is a serious hardship. Is it any wonder that they prefer to seal their lips, and let the speak-easy and other forms of vice flourish and blight their town? Verdicts by home juries generally stand, and if appealed the number would be greatly lessened, and the trivial cases that disgust Grand Juries would be entirely done away with. The tax-payer groans under his load of county tax, and with the witnesses prays for release.

The march of the American market does not always follow the westward trend of the star of empire. One has just opened in far-off Australia, where the Government of Victoria has awarded contracts to an American company for 35,000 tons of steel rails at $75,000 below English bids. At this rate it ought not to be difficult to hold the market once it is opened.

Eighty per cent of the customs duties collected at New York this month has been in gold coin. Two years ago not a dollar of this revenue was paid in gold. Confidence in the gold stability of the government was what was needed, rather than statute laws, to bring about a resumption of gold payments at the seats of customs.

Admiral Schley is a grandnephew, on his father's side, of the famous Admiral Parkhurst, of the English navy, and on his mother's side is descended from Francis Scott Key, who wrote the "Star Spangled Banner" in Baltimore harbor, September 13, 1814.

The people will want to know the facts about that tremendous majority which Mr. Crane was given in Hudson County, and will ask the Legislature to disclose them.

It is now conceded that the approval of the Spanish American peace treaty by the U. S. Senate is beyond doubt. Democratic papers generally are giving up the idea that they can defeat John Kern for U. S. Senator.

Secretary Hay owns a copy of the famous Gattysburg speech, written in Lincoln's own hand.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians came and given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying "Electric Bitters," and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim. No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle at Dr. C. M. Crowell's Drug Store.

Will Lehman, of Waterford, well known here, is in Hammononton Hospital, Philadelphia, suffering from appendicitis. He submitted to an operation, Tuesday night, and has good prospect of recovery, though the doctors say his was one of the worst cases.

Last Saturday was cloudy, but no storm. Sunday was an ideal Christmas, very pleasant. Monday was fine, Tuesday, cloudy, clearing at night. Wednesday, cold wave flag shown, but the sun shone, and it was not extremely cold. Thursday, warmer, very fine. Friday dawned clear and warm.

The Sunday Schools all enjoyed their Christmas treat, and did their best to entertain the parents and friends who assembled to witness the exercises. The Methodist and Universalist schools met on Monday evening, the former having both main room and annex comfortably filled. The Baptists and Presbyterians held theirs on Tuesday evening, and were also honored with large attendance. The programs in each case was the usual one—much music, recitations, class exercises, and addresses, followed by distribution of confectionery, etc., to all members of the schools. It is particularly appropriate that this feast should be celebrated by all Christians, for the birth, life, death and resurrection of Christ, whose advent this commemorates, are the foundation of all Church teachings, and this annual merry making serves to make their best impressions upon the children: and once fixed in the young minds, the delightful story is never forgotten.

AUGUST FLOWER.

"It is a surprising fact," says Prof. Houston, "that in my travels in all parts of the world, for the last ten years, I have met more people having used Green's August Flower than any other remedy for dyspepsia, indigestion, liver and stomach, and for constipation. I find for tourists and salesmen, or for persons filling office positions, when headachings and general bad feelings from irregular habits exist, that Green's August Flower is a grand remedy. It does not injure the system by frequent use, and is a constant for our stomachs and indigestion." Sample bottles free at Crowell's Pharmacy. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries.

Free of Charge.

Any adult suffering from a cold settled on the breast, bronchitis, throat or lung troubles of any nature, who will call at Crowell's Pharmacy, will be presented with a sample bottle of Boscho's German Syrup free of charge. Only one bottle given to one person, and none to children without order from parents. No throat or lung remedy ever had such a sale as Boscho's German Syrup in all parts of the civilized world. Twenty years ago millions of bottles were given away, and your druggist will tell you its success was marvelous. It is really the only throat and lung remedy generally endorsed by physicians. One 75 cent bottle will cure or prove its value. Sold by dealers every where.

Near at Hand Winter Resorts.

Some few years ago, whenever winter health resorts were mentioned, every one's mind turned at once to places in the southern states; but that idea is now obsolete. At Atlantic City, so well known as the greatest of summer seashore resorts, has been for some years steadily increasing its winter population, and now claims to be the ideal all-the-year resort. Its position on the southern Jersey coast, with its magnificent board walk, nearly facing the south, consequently receiving the full benefit of the sun; the balmy saline air wafted from the Gulf Stream, heated by a tropical sun; its fine "open all-the-year-round" hotels, heated throughout with steam, and with commodious sun parlors, protected from the outside air but exposed to the sun's rays; hot seawater baths, etc., cannot fail to make good its claim.

Cape May, one of the oldest, and, "before the war," the great fashionable resort, has, since the entrance of the opposition road, now a portion of the P. & R. Route, awakened from its slumber and is rapidly forging to the front. With the advantages of being farther south, up to date hotels, equipped with all latest approved appliances of steam and electricity, it bids fair to ere long rival its sister city as a winter resort.

Both above cities are on the Atlantic City Railroad, the Southern New Jersey portion of the Philadelphia & Reading Route, and have frequent fast trains to and from the Chestnut and South Street ferries, Philadelphia.

"Lakewood in the Pines," the well known ultra-fashionable winter sanitarium, is too well known to need description. It is located on the N. J. Southern branch of the Central R. R. of N. J., which, connecting at Winslow Junction with the Atlantic City R. R., forms a short and quick route to and from Phila. and points in interior Pa. Through Pullman parlor cars during the season.

Tickets are sold and baggage checked through to any of above resorts from all principal stations on the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. and its connections. For further information, apply to any P. & R. agent, or address Edison J. Weeks, Gen. Pass'r Agt., Phila.
