MAYOR MAKES ANOTHER "BREAK"

At the recent meeting of Council some bills for money were read, one for two hours service at $1 per hour; the other at $1.75 per hour. At the conclusion of the reading of the latter bill, Mayor Cunningham remarked: "Now you can see who is robbing us!" It looked for the money was concerned and the editor of "The Star" investigated the matter and found that the Mayor's remark was unjust and uncalled for. The bill of $2 for 2 hours' service was where Nick Ordillo drove the Mayor's wife, acting as driver of the poor, over good roads to a house on Oak road, and waited the best part of the two hours.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

THE FORD RUNABOUT

THE FORD RUNABOUT needs no advertising. About all we have to do is to tell you we can supply the demand with something like promptness and the selling is over. We have never been able to get enough from the factory to meet the demand and do not suppose we ever will get enough. There are more than four million five hundred thousand Ford cars in operation today, and of this number about three hundred thousand are in foreign countries, the rest right here in America, but we have one hundred and ten millions of people and it looks from the way demand comes in that we will have to sell that many Runabouts before we can satisfy that demand.

It is one great, little utility. It fits into every man's wants, from the physician to the worker in the factory, from the country blacksmith to the millionaire railroad owner, from the contractor and his employees to the millionaire sporting man's entourage, almost as necessary these days as the handkerchief.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER YOUR SUPERSTITION

IF YOU read the cable news you saw a few days ago an item from Bombay which said that the stock and exchange markets of that city had been closed and that a general religious strike was in prospect because two European boys had killed two pigeons in the streets of the city.

The natives considered the pigeons sacred and the strike resulted because the police did not take the action which the natives thought should have followed the destruction of the birds.

From the beginning of history there is a record of animal worship by human beings.

The carvings and crude paintings of the earliest Egyptian periods, which are the first picture record that we have, show the esteem in which the lower forms of life were held.

The cat was especially venerated by the ancients and in the tombs of Egyptian rulers and nobility are found wonderful carvings of cat heads, sometimes pictured as being on human bodies.

The tops of funeral jars which were placed in the tomb to contain either food or toilet preparations for the use of the dead had covers of cat heads wonderfully true to nature.

The bull was a sacred animal for centuries and some modern savage populations still worship it and lead it ceremonially. Greek and Roman mythology and history are filled with references to the sacredness of the bull and it figures largely in both painting and sculpture.

In India, no matter how near to starvation a man may be he will not take food from a dog nor kill it to eat, although dogs are recognized as a staple article of food in the Philippines and other parts of the world.

We cannot help ourselves as a wholly ignorant race of animal worship. To the owl we ascribe a wisdom wholly absent from that dull and witless bird. His brain power is not to be compared with that of the crow, one of the most intelligent of the feathered tribes.

We ascribe great wisdom to the fox whose achievements are not nearly equal to those of the beaver, the most interesting of all the animal kingdom.

The human mind, when it does not have any proven thing to believe, is always willing to substitute superstition.

The sufferer from rheumatism after he has found other remedies ineffective, will resort to carrying a horse chestnut in his pocket.

If you spill the salt, you throw a pinch of it over your shoulder to alley the unhappiness which you have.

You very likely thought, if you read the Bombay item, "What fools those people are to make so much of a row over the killing of a couple of pigeons."

The gentleman in Bombay would be equally amazed if he knew that you attached great power to the breaking of a mirror to bring you bad luck.

One superstition is about as silly as another and so long as we harbor beliefs which have neither reason nor logic to support them, we are not in a position to criticize the people who do not want their pet opinions interferred with by foreign unbelievers.

The best way to avoid this kind of trouble is to have no superstitions ourselves but to respect the weakness of those who persist in foolish beliefs.

DIFFERENT BREEDS OF HENS

Leghorns and Minorcas Are Best for Eggs, but Are Poor Sitters—Brahmas Best for Meat.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Chickens, for convenience, may be classified as egg breeds, meat breeds, general-purpose breeds, and fancy or ornamental breeds.

The egg breeds include the small or five-egg breeds, which are very prolific to mature, producers of white-shelled eggs, usually pointlers or at best but poor sitters, and rather poor mothers, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The general purpose breeds include those which are of fair size and which will also produce a good quantity of brown-shelled eggs, making them especially adapted to the person wishing a supply of both eggs and meat.

As one has to make frequent sales of flocks in the shape of surplus cockerels and hens, the carcasses as well as egg production should be considered.

The general purpose breeds are usually good sitters and good mothers. They have medium-sized combs and wattles and endure cold weather well. They occupy a medium position between the egg and meat breeds as to size, egg production, and docility.

"Stick-tight" fleas breed in the cracks and crevices of brood and poultry houses; also in dry animal or vegetable refuse, but will not breed in damp or wet places.

A PRINCESS OF MARS

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS
Author of Tarzan of the Apes

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

There is always sufficient reserve of the ninth ray stored in the great building to maintain the present Martian atmosphere for a thousand years, and the only fear, as my new friend told me, was that some accident might befall the pumping apparatus.

Before I retired for the night he promised to give me a letter to a nearby agricultural officer who would help me on my way to Zodanga, which he said was the nearest Martian city.

"But be sure that you do not let them know you are bound for Hellum, as they are at war with that country. My assistant and I are of no country, we belong to all Barsoom and its islands, which we near protect us in all lands, even among the green men—though we do not trust their hands if we can avoid it," he added.

"And so good-night, my friend," he continued, "may you have a long and restful sleep—yes, a long sleep."

And though I hesitated, I saw that he had never admitted me, and then a picture of him standing over me in the night, and the swift thrust of a long dagger and the half-formed words, "I am sorry, but it is for the best good of Barsoom."

What was I to do? How could I escape through these mighty walls? Easily could I kill him now that I was warned, but once he was dead I could no more escape, and with the stopping of the machinery of the great plant I should die with all the other inhabitants of the planet—all, even Dejah Thoris were not already dead.

Cautiously I opened the door of my apartment and, followed by Woola, sought the inner of the great doors. A wild scheme had come to me: I would attempt to force the great locks by the nine thought waves I had read in my host's mind.

Creeping stealthily through corridor after corridor and down winding runways which turned hither and thither I finally reached the great hall in which I had broken my long fast that morning.

I was on the point of stepping boldly into the room when a slight noise behind me warned me to look back into a recess in the corridor. Dragging Woola after me I crouched low in the darkness.

Presently the old man passed close by me, and as he entered the dimly lighted chamber which I had been told to pass through I saw that he held a long thin dagger in his hand and that he was sharpening it upon a stone. In his mind was the decision to inspect the radium pumps, which would take about thirty minutes, and then return to my bedroom and fish me.

As he passed through the great hall and disappeared down the hallway which led to the pump room, I stole stealthily from my hiding place and crossed to the great door, the inner of the three which stood between me and liberty.

Concentrating my mind upon the magnetic lock I hurled the nine thought waves against it. My breathless expectancy waited when faintly the great door moved softly toward me and slid quietly to one side. One after the other the remaining mighty portals opened at my command and Woola and I stepped forth into the darkness, free, but little better off than we had been before, other than that we had full stomachs.

Hastening away from the shadows of the formidable pile I made for the great crossroad, intending to strike the central turnpike as quickly as possible. This I reached about morning and entering the first enclosure I came to I searched for some evidence of a habitation.

There were low rambling buildings of concrete faced with heavy impure white stone, and no amount of hammering and balloning brought any response. Wary and exhausted from sleeplessness I threw myself upon the ground commanding Woola to stand guard.

Some time later I was awakened by his faithful growling and opened my eyes to see three red Martians standing a short distance from us and cowering with their rifles.

"I am unarmed and an enemy," I hastened to explain. "I have been a prisoner among the green men and am on my way to Zodanga. All I ask is food and the proper directions for reaching my destination."

They lowered their rifles and placed their right hands upon my left shoulder, after the manner of their custom of salute and asked me many questions about myself and my wanderings. They then took me to the house of one of them which was only a short distance away.

They were the personification of cordiality and hospitality and I spent several days with them, resting and recuperating from my long and arduous experience.

When I was ready to depart they furnished me with a small domestic animal such as is best for saddle purposes by all red Martians. The animal is about the size of a horse and quite quiet, but in color and shape an exact replica of his huge and fierce cousin of the wilds.

The brothers had supplied me with a reddish oil with which I anointed my entire body and one of them cut my hair, which had grown quite long, in the prevailing fashion of the time, square at the back and banged in front, so that I could have passed anywhere upon Barsoom as a full-fledged red Martian. My metal and ornamental weapons were renewed in the style of the government agents to whom they had given me letters. My way led to the central square or plaza, which is a characteristic of all Martian cities.

As I was crossing the great square lost in wonder and admiration of the magnificent architecture and the gorgeous scarlet vegetation which carpeted the broad lawns I discovered a red Martian walking briskly toward me from one of the avenues. He paid not the slightest attention to me, but as he came abreast I recognized him, and turning I placed my hand upon his shoulder, calling out:

"Kantor, Kantor Kan!"

Like lightning he wheeled and before I could so much as lower my hand the point of his longsword was at my breast.

"Who are you?" he growled, and then as a backward leap carried me fifty feet from his sword he dropped the point to the ground and exclaimed, laughing, "I do not need a better reply. There is but one man upon all Barsoom who can bounce about like a rubber ball. By the mother of the further moon, John Carter, how come you here, and have you become a Dar-seen that you can change your color or will?"

"You gave me a bad half minute," he continued, "after I had briefly outlined my adventures since parting with him in the arena at Warhoon. 'Were my name and city known to the Zodangans I would shortly be sitting on the banks of the lost sea of Korus with my revered and departed ancestors. I am here in the interests of the Zardos Mars, Jeddak of Hellum, to discover the whereabouts of Dejah Thoris, our princess. Sab Than, prince of Zodanga, has her hidden in the city and has fallen madly in love with her."

"I have been here three days, but I have not yet found where Dejah Thoris is imprisoned. Today I join the Zodanga navy as an air scout and I hope in this way to win the confidence of Sab Than, the prince, who is commander of this division of the navy, and thus learn the whereabouts of Dejah Thoris. I am glad that you are here, John Carter, for I know your loyalty to my princess and I know of your working together should be able to accomplish much."

The plan was now commencing to fall with people going and coming upon the daily activities of their duties. He seemed to understand me fully, and when I pointed back in the direction of Thark he turned sorrowfully away, nor could I bear to watch him go; but resolutely set my face toward Zodanga and with a touch of heartiness approached her throwing wails.

The letter I bore galloped me immediately entrance to the vast, walled city. The Prior brothers had given me explicit directions for reaching the point of the city where I could find living accommodations and be near the office of the government agents to whom they had given me letters. My way led to the central square or plaza, which is a characteristic of all Martian cities.

As I was crossing the great square lost in wonder and admiration of the magnificent architecture and the gorgeous scarlet vegetation which carpeted the broad lawns I discovered a red Martian walking briskly toward me from one of the avenues. Today I join the Zodanga navy as an air scout and I hope in this way to win the confidence of Sab Than, the prince, who is commander of this division of the navy, and thus learn the whereabouts of Dejah Thoris. I am glad that you are here, John Carter, for I know your loyalty to my princess and I know of your working together should be able to accomplish much."

The plan was now commencing to fall with people going and coming upon the daily activities of their duties. He seemed to understand me fully, and when I pointed back in the direction of Thark he turned sorrowfully away, nor could I bear to watch him go; but resolutely set my face toward Zodanga and with a touch of heartiness approached her throwing wails.

The letter I bore galloped me immediately entrance to the vast, walled city. The Prior brothers had given me explicit directions for reaching the point of the city where I could find living accommodations and be near the office of the government agents to whom they had given me letters. My way led to the central square or plaza, which is a characteristic of all Martian cities.

As I was crossing the great square lost in wonder and admiration of the magnificent architecture and the gorgeous scarlet vegetation which carpeted the broad lawns I discovered a red Martian walking briskly toward me from one of the avenues. He paid not the slightest attention to me, but as he came abreast I recognized him, and turning I placed my hand upon his shoulder, calling out:

"Kantor, Kantor Kan!"

Like lightning he wheeled and before I could so much as lower my hand the point of his longsword was at my breast.

"Who are you?" he growled, and then as a backward leap carried me fifty feet from his sword he dropped the point to the ground and exclaimed, laughing, "I do not need a better reply. There is but one man upon all Barsoom who can bounce about like a rubber ball. By the mother of the further moon, John Carter, how come you here, and have you become a Dar-seen that you can change your color or will?"

"You gave me a bad half minute," he continued, "after I had briefly outlined my adventures since parting with him in the arena at Warhoon. 'Were my name and city known to the Zodangans I would shortly be sitting on the banks of the lost sea of Korus with my revered and departed ancestors. I am here in the interests of the Zardos Mars, Jeddak of Hellum, to discover the whereabouts of Dejah Thoris, our princess. Sab Than, prince of Zodanga, has her hidden in the city and has fallen madly in love with her."

"I have been here three days, but I have not yet found where Dejah Thoris is imprisoned. Today I join the Zodanga navy as an air scout and I hope in this way to win the confidence of Sab Than, the prince, who is commander of this division of the navy, and thus learn the whereabouts of Dejah Thoris. I am glad that you are here, John Carter, for I know your loyalty to my princess and I know of your working together should be able to accomplish much."

The plan was now commencing to fall with people going and coming upon the daily activities of their du-only I ceased and all dismounted as the last body of troops had wheeled into position before their emperor. A member of the staff advanced toward the soldier, and calling the name of the troops commanded him to advance. The officer then recited the nature of the heroic act which had won the approval of the Jeddak, and the latter advanced and placed a metal ornament upon the left arm of the lucky man.

Ten men had been so decorated when the aid called out:

"John Carter, air scout!"

Never in my life had I been so surprised, but the habit of military discipline is strong within me, and I dropped my little machine lightly to the ground and advanced on foot as I had seen the others do. As I halted before the officer, he addressed me in a voice audible to the entire assemblage of troops and spectators.

"In recognition, John Carter," he said, "of your remarkable courage and skill in defending the person of the of the Jeddak Than Kosis and, single-handed, vanquishing three green warriors. It is the pleasure of our Jeddak to confer on you the mark of his esteem."

Than Kosis then advanced toward me and placing an ornament upon me, said:

"My cousin has narrated the details of your wonderful achievement, which seems little short of a miracle, and if you can so well defend a cousin of the Jeddak how much better could you defend the person of the Jeddak himself. You are therefore appointed a padwar of the Guard and will be quartered in my palace hereafter."

I thanked him, and with an orderly from the palace to guide me I returned to the officer in charge of the port.

CHAPTER XIV.

I Find Dejah.

The major-domo to whom I reported had been given instructions to direct me near the person of the Jeddak, who in time of war, is always in great danger of assassination, as the rule that all is fair in war seems to constitute the entire ethics of Martian conflict.

He therefore escorted me immediately to the apartment in which Than Kosis then was. The ruler was engaged in conversation with his son, Sab Than, and several courtiers of his household, and did not perceive my entrance.

The walls of the apartment were completely hung with splendid tapestries. My guide drew aside one of the tapestries, disclosing a passage which entered the walls of the chamber. Within this passage I was to remain, as long as Than Kosis was in the apartment. When he left I was to follow. My only duty was to guard the ruler and keep out of sight as much as possible. I would be relieved after a period of four hours.

The major-domo then left me, and I had to find my way to the passage at the top of the chamber separated and four members of the Guard entered, surrounding a female figure. As they approached Sab Than Kosis the soldier fell to either side and those standing before the doorway and the four feet from me, her beautiful face radiant with smiles, was Dejah Thoris.

Sab Than, prince of Zodanga, advanced to meet her, and hand in hand they approached close to the Jeddak. Than Kosis looked up in surprise, and, ruminating, said:

"To what advantage could I owe this visit from the princess of Hellum, who, two days ago, with rare consideration for my public, announced that she would prefer the Hindu, the green Thark, to my son?"

FORCED MAID TO TRAP EMPLOYER

Holdup Men Rob Invalid Woman as She Walks Into Her Own House.

Chicago.—Two holdup men, who followed the social proprieties even to having a maid admit their victims, paid an afternoon call at the home of David Gordon, 1928 Humboldt boulevard. First they phoned to inquire if Mr. or Mrs. Gordon were in. Miss Sigrid Swanson, the maid, replied they were not. A few moments later they rang the bell and were admitted by the maid.

"Good afternoon," said one, pointing a revolver at her. "You will please walk into the parlor and keep as quiet as possible."

suitcases with clothing and jewelry, the door bell rang again.

"It's Mrs. Gordon," gasped the maid. She's an invalid and you'll frighten her to death."

"You go to the door and let Mrs. Gordon in," said the gunman to the maid. "Don't try any funny tricks, because we're right behind you."

The maid admitted Mrs. Ida Gordon and her sister, Mrs. Bertha Vagdon of Cleveland. The gunman greeted them. "Now all three of you sit down there and make yourselves comfortable. I am not to harm you as long as you keep quiet."

Mrs. Gordon collapsed. While her sister and the maid calmed her the second robber continued his search of bureau drawers and closets.

"Didn't get a great deal," he said. "Well, there's a couple of furs," the other announced, pointing to Mrs. Gordon's mink coat and Mrs. Vagdon's mink cape, which had been thrown on a chair. These were thrown into the cases and Mrs. Gordon was forced to give up a $200 diamond ring and her purse, containing $50 and a check for $100.

One of the men snipped the telephone wires with his knife. "Now if you ladies attempt to leave the flat after we go out, or raise any fuss, we're coming back and kill you," the gunman said. The two then walked out.

WHERE'S DAD? ASKS CORPSE

Girl Had Been Dead Three Days, It Was Supposed, Says London Tale.

London.—A strange story comes from Penger, Monmouthshire, of the recovery of a young girl who, it was believed, was dead and for whose burial preparations were being made.

The girl had been ill with lung trouble. On the third day after her supposed death, when the coffin was brought to the house, a light was taken into the room, whereupon the girl immediately sat up and asked:

"Where is dad?"

The father rushed into the room and carried the girl to her mother. She is now recovering.

It was recently reported from the same village that a woman who had been blind for 20 years had miraculously regained her sight.

3 Break Out of Sedan Sunk in Ice Lake

Clark, N. D. Three persons miraculously escaped death when their automobile ran into an ice hole in the ice while crossing the lake near here. Victor Beckett, his sister Adeline, and Queen Constock were in the car, a sedan, when it sank to the bottom, when they were forced to break out the windows to gain their liberty. After reaching the surface they managed to climb on a piece of floating ice, where they remained nearly an hour before rescued by fishermen.

"I've fully made up my mind, Emily, to go to work. With Jack's consent? No! Certainly not! But what does that matter? He can give no good, sensible reason, to my way of thinking, why I shouldn't stay at home. Says Paul needs a mother's care. Just imagine!—a boy over ten years old tied to his mother's apron strings."

"Oh, yes, I knew you're terribly shocked, and all that sort of thing; so is Jack, for that matter; but I'm going to work Monday morning, in spite of every obstacle, and the old hoose and—everything else can hoose and—of themselves. Let the neighbors talk if they want to; besides, when they're talking about me they're giving someone else a rest."

Emily burst into a gale of laughter at the picture before her, but her mood changed suddenly as she returned thoughtfully:

"My dear, I know just how you feel. I was once in exactly the same position as you are. I wanted good times, fine clothes above everything else in the world—or at least I thought I did, until experience taught me better. Would you care to have me tell you about it?"

"Hear! Hear!" exclaimed Beatrice enthusiastically to an imaginary audience. "Follow citizens, the little gray mouse has finally consented to disclose the horrors of the business world. Lead on, fair one; convert me, if you can."

Emily smiled understandingly at her romantic little friend and replied:

"You're bound I shall tell you a thrilling story of adventure and hardship, aren't you, Beatrice? You will be disappointed, I know, for this is just a drab little tale."

She patted the faxen curls of her younger daughter, Laura, while she watched with keen interest her boisterous, affectionate little tomboy, Louise, as she raced through the yard laughing joyously.

"A mother's place, my friend, is with her children, first, last and forever. No one else can take her place. You're bound I shall tell you a thrilling story of adventure and hardship, aren't you, Beatrice? You will be disappointed, I know, for this is just a drab little tale."

Sea of Calcium Is Sky Mystery

Cornell University's New Dean of Astronomy is Studying Big Puzzle.

SCIENCE'S VIEWS CHANGE

Theories of Evolution of Heavenly Bodies Reverse of Few Years Ago—Spectroscopic Astronomer's Greatest Aid.

Seattle, Wash.—S. L. Boothroyd, professor of astronomy at the University of Washington, who leaves this June to become the dean of astronomy at Cornell university, has been adding his bit, and an important bit it may prove, to man's knowledge of his earth's big brothers, the stars.

Many stars which to the naked eye or through small telescopes appear as single stars are in fact two stars, circling about each other.

It is these double stars that Professor Boothroyd has been investigating. Part of his work has been done at the University of Washington and part at the Dominion government observatory near Victoria, B. C.

Professor Boothroyd has been studying the spectra of two double stars just barely visible to the naked eye. One is known as "Boss No. 4022" and the other as "H. R. No. 8883." They are so far away that even big telescopes cannot separate the two stars that compose them.

Each combination of lines tells the story of some one of the eighty-odd chemical elements present in the body producing the light. The brilliance of the spectrum and its lines indicate the heat radiated by the star. Professor Boothroyd states:

"One of the double stars I have been observing," explained Professor Boothroyd, "is floating in a sea of calcium. Calcium is a rare metal on earth. It is as light as air and extends more than 3,000,000 miles! I am paying close attention to this calcium atmosphere. It may give us the clue to the solution of several mysteries in connection with double stars."

Only hazard a Guess. Theories come and go on the birth and life of stars, according to Professor Boothroyd. Today's best hypothesis of the evolution of the stars is almost the exact reverse of the one which held sway a few years ago.

a theory," said the Seattle astronomer. "They dare not. They only hazard a guess as to the order of certain things in the life of a star. The most likely story of a star's life has it born of nebulous vapor and dead as a tiny, shrunken old sun."

"We now believe that somewhere bits and scraps of cosmic dust, the remnants of old stars and all the litter and trash of the universe collects and, after millions of years, becomes a nebula. A nebula looks like a knot of cotton to the eye and like a cloud in the telescope. It is made up of tiny asteroids from the size of a bright star to perhaps the size of a miniature planet."

"Why this universal rubbish collects to form a nebula no man can even guess. But when the nebula has become large, gradually the bits work toward the center. Heat is generated in its generation might be said to result from the friction of the particles. Rapidly the heat increases and the whole mass becomes hot. In the course of a few million years we have a great blazing sun, huge beyond man's best and biggest dreams."

Many of the fruits and vegetables now eaten were almost unknown to our forefathers. Not until Henry VIII's time were raspberries, strawberries, or cherries grown in England.

Doctor Cox Believes That His Discovery Will Tend to Banish Malnutrition from the People.

New York.—Dr. Harry Barger Cox, inventor of the dry battery and many other contrivances, announced that he had succeeded in extracting the vitamins properties from fruits and vegetables. As it is becoming increasingly recognized by scientists that many people, including those presumed "healthy," are unscientifically nourished because they eat food lacking sufficient vitamins properties, Dr. Cox feels that his discovery would tend to banish malnutrition if its benefits were extended to the entire population.

In explaining his discovery, Dr. Cox said that since a seed will germinate when carried over from one season to another, it was evident that Governor's Nominations. Only a few nominations of the many has yet to make were sent to the senate. Those forwarded for concurrence were the following:

Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals (George Van Hooker of Hackensack, to succeed Frank M. Taylor.

Prosecutor of Passaic County—J. Willard DeVoe of Paterson, to succeed Michael Dana.

Judge, Common Pleas, Sussex County—Allen R. Shaw of Newton, reappointed.

State Public Library Comptroller—Moses Taylor Lynn of Princeton, reappointed.

State Department of Health—Thomas B. Lee of Camden and Clyde Pitts of Morristown, both reappointed.

To Board of Conservation and Development—Perdval Chryste of High Bridge and Simpson P. Northrop of Newark, both reappointed.

Commission to Promote Uniform Legislation—George A. Bourgeois of Atlantic City, John R. Hurdin of Newark and Mark A. Sullivan of Jersey City, all reappointed.

Commission on Old Age Insurance and Pensions—Rev. Augustine Elmendorf of Jersey City, reappointed.

Governor Vetoes Bus Bill. Governor Edwards sent to the legislature his veto of the bill to regulate the operation of the public utility commission. The governor also placed his stamp of approval on the companion bill to the prohibition enforcement act to regulate the sale of intoxicants (the non-beverage purposes).

These made nine vetoes to come from Governor Edwards during the present session. It is predicted that the legislature will pass the prohibition enforcement act and the companion bill, and that the governor's veto will not be effective on a single measure.

In vetoing the Jitney bill, Governor Edwards stated:

"I am opposed to the measure for the reason that I think the matter of regulation of a local convenience such as jitney's should be left with the local authority, which, in my judgment, is better informed and better equipped to handle the problem. To delegate this work to the Utility Commissioners would be to increase the work of an overburdened board."

Speaker George S. Hobart started a movement to prevent final adjournment until next week. The house speaker opposes final adjournment until certain important house measures have been disposed of by the senate. Final adjournment this week, it is contended, would not give the governor's veto. To date the governor's veto has not been effective on a single measure.

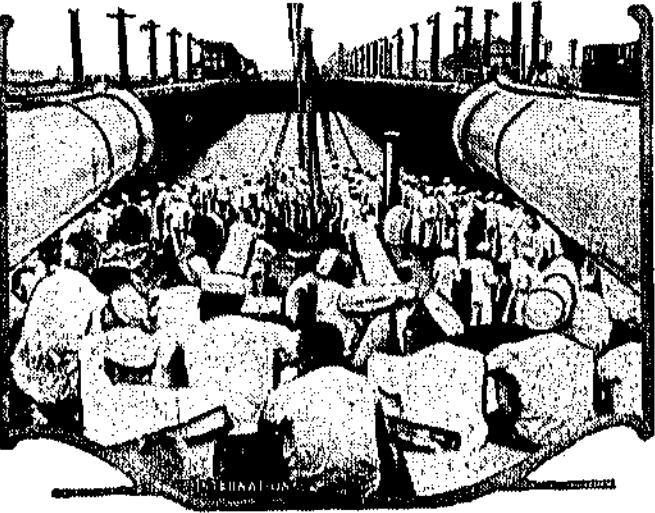

In vetoing the Jitney bill, Governor Edwards stated:

"Some senate leaders are said to be in favor of continuing the 1921 legislative session until next week to give Governor Edwards an opportunity to discuss important state and judicial positions. There is, however, a strong sentiment in both houses in favor of adjourning Friday. Senator Mackay and Assemblyman Herzhfeld and Rowland are reported to be against extending the legislative session into next week.

Assemblyman Nelson's housing bill (House 318) introduced for the purpose of relieving the housing situation in the metropolitan district, received only three votes when it was presented for third reading and final passage in the senate, while there are opposing votes. It needed eleven votes to pass.

Assemblyman Nelson threatened to bolt the Republican party if this bill did not meet with some consideration. He has been more or less pacified by Republican leaders with promises of his measure being given a chance.

Voices Thirty Years, Woman Becomes a Singer

After 30 years without her voice, Mrs. Laura Richardson of Madison, N. J., has become a remarkable singer, reaching high notes with ease.

Mrs. Francis Whitcomb, a singing teacher, persuaded Mrs. Richardson to take lessons in voice culture.

Mrs. Richardson's voice culture, Mrs. Richardson made such progress that she decided to take singing lessons.

The text has developed a voice that is said to be clear as a bell, and is being urged to go on the concert stage.

Tens of Buried Millions—Town Digging. Mrs. L. Reynolds of a vast treasure of gold buried in a vacant lot here caused thousands to start digging. Two of the treasure seekers were shot by policemen, who thought they were bandits.

Berlin Marriage Profitors Prey on Young Couples.

Bel Lienses to Those Seeking Rooms—Move Started to Stop the Practice.

Berlin, Marriage License are no longer utilized for profiting by Germans. The marriage "profitors" developed out of the situation which had made necessary the strict "lotting" of housing space.

A married couple at a pale about to be married may obtain permission to occupy certain rooms by presentation of the marriage license to the housing officer.

It has been discovered that many marriage licenses have been loaned to men and women who have no intention to marry, but having secured the license and the permission to occupy the number of rooms allotted to married persons and the "permit" to married folk or others who need rooms and cannot find them.

The officials say some profitable business has been done, but that the practice is being stopped by keeping a watch on those to whom marriage licenses are granted and withdrawing permission to occupy rooms unless the marriage is performed.

Marriages, however, without all previous records in the last year. The number has increased two-fold over previous years, and many took off the marriages during the war.

Many young folk today are getting married here simply to get a room cheaply, said a Berlin official. "The cost of the dwelling is cut in half by the marriage of a man and woman both of whom are working."

"They also feel they can cooperate to some advantage in the matter of food, which is a serious problem."

Stop! Look! Listen!

Say, do you remember when you were sailing along in your Rolls-Royce or (Ford) and suddenly came that sound so familiar and dreaded by all motorists—Bump—Bump—Bump—and had to get out and get to work in the rain, snow or boiling sun on a nice, dirty, muddy tire, yank it off and patch where you have picked up a nail; then Pump—Pump—Pump—toil, sweat and ruin your clothes for a little measly puncture.

Blue Devil Puncture Stop

Which will stop all punctures, keep your tires properly inflated and make your tires and tubes wear longer and let you enjoy your ride in comfort without that thought, "If I just don't have a puncture!" For when you ride with Blu-Devil Puncture-Stop in your tires you know you won't have to get out and get under because of a tack, nail or spike that seems always to be bobbing up in the way.

Blu-Devil Puncture Stop preserves rubber as oil preserves leather, something that the motorists have been looking for since the manufacturing of cars.

Blu-Devil Puncture Stop will not stain or spot the finest piece of serge or mar the most highly polished surface.

WHY WE SPEAK OUT
We would prefer not to oppose our Mayor and Council for it means financial retaliation, but justice demanded we speak out at times.

One of the men affected by the Mayor's bad break on Wednesday night was a former service man, who served in the thick of battles "over there," returning with three gold stripes and the Cross de Guerre.

There is no merit at all in the Mayor's contention. Every day we are interviewed over all the roads and side roads of Hammonton, not one in continuous operation was worth more than $1.75 fee.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
For Constipation

CONSTIPATION not only causes the generation of poisons, which are carried through the system by the blood and attack it from within, but also by thus lowering the general stamina makes the weakened system an easier prey to harmful germs from without. Nujol works on an entirely new principle. Without forcing or irritating, it softens the food waste. This enables the many tiny muscles in the intestines, contracting and expanding in their normal way, to squeeze the food waste along and out of the system. It is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take. Try it.
